GRANTS MEAT DEALER'S PLEA?

CONSENTS TO PACKER DEAL

Purchase of Morris and Company By Armour Interests Regarded As Certain and Chicago Man Now In East to Complete Merger.

STRINGS ATTACHED TO GOVERNMENT APPROVAL

Administration Okays Proposal On Condition Buyer of Properties Would Do Everything Possible to Boost Price Farm Products.

(United Press.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Purchase of Morris and company packing interests by J. Ogden Armour, now regarded as a certainty, will be followed by a steady advance in farm products prices, according to a general understanding among traders and dealers in agricultural products here.

The consent of the administration to the deal has been gained by Armour on the stipulation that he would do all in his power to boost prices of grain and livestock during the next two years, it was learned from reliable sources here.

Armour can do a great deal. He is the largest dealer in farm product in the world.

In addition to his enormous purchases of livestock for killing, the Armour Grain company is the largest concern in the world dealing in cereals. The advance in wheat prices during the last few months has been generally credited to the Armour activities.

The administration is anxious to see farm products prices advance. The recent election showed conclusively that the farmers are dissatisfied. Economists claim there can be no healthy business revival in this country until the farmers are on a sound basis financially. Most farm products have been sold at less than the cost of production for the last two years.

Trading in grain and livestock in Chicago has been stagnant since the word of the Armour-Morris proposed deal became public. Buyers and sellers are both awaiting the result, confident that a price advance can be expected if the sale is completed. Armour is now in New York and will go to Washington next week in the hope of getting the final word of the cabinet on his proposals.

That he has worked out a method of financing the merger was reported. The present arrangement provides for payment of $10,000,000 in cash by Armour personally and turning over of $10,000,000 in common stock and $10,000,000 of preferred. Practically all of the $100,000,000 common stock in the Armour company is held by members of that family while a considerable portion of the preferred is also in their hand so that Armour will be able personally to carry out the deal through obtaining $10,000,000 from his banks.

Blast In Entry Of Mine Injures Eighteen Workers

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 2.—Eighteen miners were injured, only two seriously, in an explosion in the entry of mine No. 8 of the Illinois Coal & Coke company at Girard, twenty-six miles south of here, late today. The explosion is believed to have resulted from dust in the entry of the mine being ignited. Two hundred and fifty men were working in the mine at the time of the explosion.

Otto Blur and Charles Rucker, badly burned, were brought to Springfield for treatment.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 2.—Ismet Pasha is to be displaced as head of the Turkish delegation in the Near East peace conference by Youssuf Kemal after the national assembly at Angora decides on final terms, it was learned tonight. Youssuf Kemal was formerly Turkish nationalist foreign minister and is noted as a finished diplomat and forceful speaker.

He is now at Angora.

Oriental Spell Is Too Much For Deb—Will Marry

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Julia Belle Faurot, the most sought after deb in Chicago society, succumbed on the thousand and first proposal and in February will marry Gustav Tolson of New Orleans and Shanghai, China.

Miss Faurot, closest friend of Mrs. Lolita Armour Mitchell, has been credited with receiving more proposals of marriage than any other girl in Chicago society. She refused them all until under the mystic spell of the Orient, answered Tolson's question with a "yes."

Tolson, a handsome, romatic American—figured in books as stemming the rising tide of the Orient with a quick wit and a strong hand—met Miss Faurot in China several months ago. He represents a large American corporation in the Orient. He comes from an old New Orleans family.

Woman Shoots Man Rather Than Live Life Of Shame

(United Press.)

BEND, Ore., Dec. 2.—Mrs. Mabel Nichols, 23, gave herself up to Sheriff Roberts this afternoon, worn and tired after a 50-mile drive from Summit Station, south of Bend, in Klamath county, saying that at 11 o'clock this morning she shot and killed Robert Greer, a man about 45, with whom she had been living.

"We had been moonshining and he threatened to bring me to Bend and take me into a life of shame," she is said to have told Sheriff Roberts breathlessly.

"I grabbed his pistol and shot, just once. I ran. I didn't go back. But I'm sure he was dead. I jumped into his machine and drove full speed to town."

The stage station is at a lonely point. No one lived in the immediate vicinity except the man and the woman, who went there six months ago from Ellensburg, Wash., the former home.

The coroner was preparing late tonight to send to the station to learn if Greer really is dead and if so, bring in the body. Mrs. Nichols will be held meantime.

SUPPORTS THE LANGUAGE LAW

State of Nebraska Files Brief In United States Supreme Court Emphasizing Need Here of Siman and Reed-Norval Acts.

TO INSURE ENGLISH AS MOTHER TONGUE

Say State Has Power to Compel Education of Children in American Language — Is Test Case Brought By German Element.

If it is within the police power of the state to regulate wages, to legislate respecting housing conditions in crowded cities, to prohibit dark rooms in tenement houses, and to compel landlords to place windows in their tenements which will enable their tenants to enjoy the sunshine, it is within the police power of the state to compel every resident of Nebraska to educate his children so that the sunshine of American ideals will permeate the life of the future citizens of this republic.

"The object of the legislation was to create an enlightened American citizenship in sympathy with the principles and ideals of this country, and to prevent children reared in America from being trained and educated in foreign languages and foreign ideals before they have had an opportunity to learn the English language and observe American ideals.

"It is a well known fact that the language first learned by a child remains his mother tongue and the language of his heart. The purpose of the statute is to ensure that the English language shall be the mother tongue and the language of the heart of the children reared in this country who will eventually become its citizens."

The foregoing paragraphs, quoted from a brief which the state of Nebraska, through Assistant Attorney General Mason Wheeler, has filed in the United States supreme court, epitomize the need of Nebraska's foreign language laws enacted in 1919 and 1921.

Appealed from $25 Fine.

The case to which this brief relates is the $25 fine imposed upon Robert T. Meyer, a German parochial school teacher in Hamilton county, for violating the Siman act of 1919 by teaching the German language to his pupils during the half hour from 1 to 1:30 p. m., each day, after the parochial school board had voted to

3 Autoists Drown In Shallow Water; Car Turns Turtle

BELOIT, Wis., Dec. 2.—Nicholas Gonner, publisher of the American Tribune, a Catholic daily newspaper in Dubuque, Ia., his daughter Ann and John Schroder, Dubuque, lost their lives in an automobile accident near here today. The machine in which they were driving from Dubuque to Milwaukee, where Gonner is also interested in a paper, skidded while crossing a bridge over a small stream, and turned turtle. The three were pinned under the car and drowned in the shallow water. Three others in the car were thrown clear of the wreckage and escaped.

Mexican Bandit, King of Border Smugglers Dead

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 2.—Martinado Villareal, king of the Mexican border smugglers, is dead at last. Mexican customs guards also captured three of his band following a gun battle almost opposite Laredo, Tex. The story of the battle has come to Consul General Ruiz here.

Villareal told customs officers he had been operating for eighteen years and had killed fourteen guards in that time. Ten smugglers were in the band at the time of the fight. They were crossing the river with a horse train when detected. In the battle three of the smugglers were captured. Six escaped through the brush into the hills. None of the guards was wounded.

BEGS U. S. TO JOIN LEAGUE

"Come Back to Us, America," Plea Made By Clemenceau to Upwards of 100,000 People at St. Louis Late Saturday Afternoon.

FRENCH ACKNOWLEDGE AND WILL PAY DEBTS

Charges United States More Militaristic Than France Because of This Country's Demand For Large Fleet and Big Budget.

(United Press.)

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 2.—For the first time, former Premier of France Georges Clemenceau came out today with a direct appeal to the United States to joint the league of nations.

Addressing an audience of 2,000 at the Odeon, following a day of much honor paid him by between 50,000 and 100,000 St. Louisans, the Tiger summed up his American mission and renewed his plea that this country return to finish the job begun with declaration of war against Germany.

"Come back to us—America," the veteran statesman pleaded, "join us in the League of nations if you will, but come back, anyhow. You must, eventually, and take care you do not wait until until it is too late."

Tribute to ex-President Wilson called forth a storm of cheers at one point in Clemenceau's address. He touched briefly on two points upon which, he said, he felt he had achieved success France acknowledged her debt and would pay; France was not militaristic.

His Idea of League.

Declaring he did not believe in the league as an instrument to end war in this imperfect age, the Tiger said he was sure it did much good and that America should join.

The same charges of selfishness he made against America in previous addresses, the Tiger launched today.

The United States he said, is suffering from "English isolation."

It is the reverse of the Arabian story about the genii in the bottle. That genii wanted badly to get out. America is like a genii in a bottle but won't come out

American frontiers have spread ahead of American ideals, he said and then developed his rather ingenious theory that America is more militaristic than France because this country wants 500,000 tons of capital ships and has a much bigger war budget.

Clemenceau declared in this connection he did not believe much in capital ships anyhow. Submarines and airships were rendering them "back numbers," he said.

The Tiger leave late tonight for the east, arriving at Baltimore Monday morning. He will be shown the town, will make a brief speech at the Maryland historical society, will lunch with Vanlear Black and then go on to Washington.

WINS TRIBUNE PRIZE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—John Mead Howells, New York architect was tonight awarded the $100,000 prize of the Chicago Tribune for the best design for a new home for the Tribune. The style of the structure submitted by Howells is the gothic expression of the American skyscraper. Eliel Saarinen of Finland won second prize of $20,000.

West Coast Fast Train Is Wrecked And Two Killed

BAKESFIELD, Cal., Dec. 2.—One man was killed and scores of other persons injured, six seriously, when Santa Fe passenger train No. 22, eastbound for Chicago, was wrecked at Jastro, three miles west of here tonight.

Nearly 100 passengers were badly shaken up. The dead man is Engineer Runyon. Those badly injured included the fireman, a mail clerk, a newsboy and three passengers.

The engine, mail car, baggage car, smoker and a day coach of the train, known as the "Missionary," left the rails. Three Pullmans remained on the track. Reports to the Santa Fe offices here indicated that a switch on a blind siding at Jastro had been tampered with, causing the derailment.

The more seriously injured were rushed to Barkersville hospital's, where it was feared the fireman and newsboy will die.

The "Missionary" left San Francisco at 9 a. m., and was due to arrive in Chicago Tuesday night.

FORECAST CLEAN SLATE FOR HEAD LEGAL DIVISION

Believed That Committee Will Advocate House Drop Impeachment Charges.

Lack of Evidence Against Daugherty Will Be Reason For Recommendation.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Recommendation by the house judiciary committee that the impeachment proceedings brought by Representative Keller, republican, Minnesota against Attorney General Daugherty be dropped for lack of substantiating evidence was forecast tonight as the republican members of the committee engaged in a dispute with Keller over procedure to be followed.

Announcement by Chairman Volstead that the committee will meet as soon as possible probably Monday, to consider starting hearings, was followed by a statement from Keller to the effect that he would refuse to appear and give testimony until the committee has received from the house authority to subpoena witnesses and administer oaths.

Keller's declaration was regarded as making it very likely that the committee will report to the house that the impeachment resolution does not merit further consideration. The republicans on the committee, who are in the majority, are not satisfied with the specifications which Keller filed yesterday and to quote Volstead, they are "more than dissatisfied" with Keller's request for another month's postponement to give him more time to prepare his case.

"In my opinion," declared Volstead, "the impeachment should have been dropped long ago."

The committee asked Keller to submit the names of all witnesses he would want to call to support his charges, together with the time and place of the offenses he charged Daugherty with committing, the committee representing that this information was necessary to a decision as to whether the charges warranted detailed investigation. Keller gave the names of Chief Justice Taft and three other desired witnesses but refused absolutely to comply further, saying he was advised not to do so by his attorneys.

"What I want and what I shall demand," Keller said tonight, "is an official hearing to which necessary papers and persons can be subpoenaed and where testimony can be taken under oath. "For me to appear next Monday or Tuesday and reveal my evidence would be but tipping off my hand in advance of the real test.

KEEPER OF GARAGE SAYS SAW MURDER

Confesses He Stood By and Witnessed Killing and Burial Of Woman.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Reuben Norkin today confessed to being an eye-witness to the murder and lonely burial of Mrs. Jennie Becker according to a statement made by Detective James McCarten.

Norkin said he was with Abraham Becker when the latter killed his wife, and dragged her some thirty feet to the old boiler pit. The confession was made after Norkin had been confronted with a bloody piece of pipe with which the murder is said to have been committed.

The confession was said to have been signed in the presence of the detective and two other officials.

From this information, and testimony given by many other witnesses including Becker himself, Assistant District Attorney Cohn has been able to reconstruct the events leading up to and following the murder, he said today.

According to Cohn's theory this is what happened:

Mr. and Mrs. Becker were calling on their friends, the Linders, and left about 12:30 on the morning of April 7, driving away in Becker's taxi.

Becker drove to Norkin's repair shop reaching there at about one o'clock. Norkin was not at home but Becker found him in a lunch wagon and the three Norkin and the Beckers went to Norkin's shop.

At this point Becker suggested that his wife get out and listen to the engine which he had purposely been feeding an over-supply of gas. As the woman leaned over she was struck from behind with a piece of pipe. As she fell her coat was thrown over her head to stifle any outcry.

As soon as she fell her body was trussed up with ropes and she was taken to the old boiler pit and thrown in. It was but the work of a moment in the dark lonel' lot. Norkin stood by his shop ready to give a warning if anyone approached while Becker took the unconscious and bleeding woman to her lime-filled grave.

After burying the body Becker went to the lunch wagon and ordered some cigars seeming quite calm.

That is the story that Assistant District Attorney Cohn will present to the jury in the Becker trial and on which he will expect a conviction.

FONTENELLE TO ROME MILLER?

Reported That He Has Acquired Majority of Capital Stock Of Douglas Hotel Company Which Owns Large Omaha Hostelry.

LEASE SUPPOSED TO BELONG TO EPPLEY

Considered Most Valuable Asset of Nebraska Hotel Company— Lease of Hotel Involved in Bankruptcy But Not Ownership.

A report was current in Lincoln Saturday to the effect that Rome Miller of Omaha had acquired a majority of the capital stock of the Douglas Hotel company, which corporation owns the fee title to the Fontenelle hotel, Omaha, the lease which was considered the most valuable asset of the Nebraska Hotel company, and over which there has been much controversy and litigation.

This lease, which still has about twelve years to run, was supposed to have been bought by Eugene C. Eppley, along with the other properties of the hotel company from the receiver appointed by the Lancaster county district court, W. E. Barkley. When the supreme court set aside the receivership Mr. Eppley continued to operate the Fontenelle, though in September those who claimed to constitute the board of directors made another sale of the lease to Mr. Miller.

The bankruptcy proceedings in federal court blocked Mr. Miller's attempt to gain possession of the property, the fee title to which he is now said to have acquired. There are two mortgages against the Fontenelle property, one for $400,000 and a second one for $25,000. The original cost was over one million dollars. Mr. Miller is said to be anxious to operate the hotel and it is considered that the ownership of the title will put him at an advantage in acquiring possession.

Believe Sale May Be True.

When asked in regard to the matter Saturday evening, John J. Ledwith, attorney for Mr. Eppley, stated that there was reason to believe that the report of the sale was true. He stated that Mr. Eppley had been paying his rent regularly the first of each month to Harry Wolf, principal owner of the stock of the Douglas Hotel company and active manager of the property. After the purported sale of the lease to Rome Miller in September he also tendered rental to Mr. Wolf, but it was declined. On December 1, or prior thereto Mr. Eppley again tendered the monthly rental to Mr. Wolf, but was informed that it could not be accepted as the property had changed hands.

What the next move will be in this complicated game is problematical. All of the property of the Nebraska Building and Investment company and the Nebraska Hotel company is now in the hands of the federal court pending bankruptcy proceedings, but this includes only the lease on the Fontenelle, and not the fee title. If Mr. Eppley's lease can be terminated Mr. Miller will have won and what is considered the principal asset of the corporations now in the bankruptcy court will have been disposed of, according to attorneys.

Two Preachers in Clutches of Law For Embezzlement

M'ALLISTER, Okla., Dec. 2.—Following their arraignment here today on charges of embezzlement, two Methodist ministers tonight were occupying cells in the county jail.

Rev. J. C. Trotter, former pastor of the Methodist church at Haileyville, Okla., is charged with appropriating funds of Brooks' Institute of which he was financial agent. His family, consisting of a wife and three small children, reside at Chattanooga, Tenn. After pleading guilty to a charge of willful desertion this morning, he was sentenced to sixty days in jail.

The other minister who has become enmeshed in the clutches of the law is Rev. J. Thomas Collier who is alleged to have stolen a Masonic ring after obtaining it from a jeweler, agreeing to sell it for him. Date for the trial of both ministers on the embezzlement charges was set for December 18.

WILL NOT ACCEPT DEMANDS MADE BY EUROPEAN ALLIES

Turk Delegates At Lausanne Tells Powers Just What They Can Expect.

Conference Deadlocked On Every Big Question That Has Come Before It.

(International News Service.)

LAUSANNE, Dec. 2.—Ismet Pasha, leader of the Turkish nationalist delegation, in the Near East peace conference, served notice upon the allies today that Turkey will not accept any capitulations under the new treaty nor any substituate for them.

The capitulations were imposed upon Turkey by the allies, after the world war. They were civil and military regulations giving the allies extensive political, judicial and commercial rights.

At the end of two weeks of conferring the conference tonight was in a deadlock on every bid question raised—Ottoman debt, capitulations, tariffs, Mosul and rontiers.

The reason it is not deadlocked upon the question of the Turkish straits is because this issue has not yet come before the conference. Once the straits negotiations are deadlocked and the actual Russian attitude is obtained, Ismet, according to authoritative information, will return to Angora to lay the allied decisions before the national assembly.

After obtaining complete Turkish support through the national assembly Ismet will return to Lausanne with new terms. Ismet declared that Turkey could not accept capitulations in any form in the future because they were incompatible with Turkish soverignty. He claims that foreigners must accept the status which Turkish laws accord them.

Signor Garroni, head of the Italian delegation in the absence of Premier Mussolini, pointed out that the capitulations were approved by the former sultan to attract foreign trade.

Lord Curzon, head of the British deltgation, sought to conciliate the Turks, by saying:

"The offending name 'capitulations' can be abolished, but there must be guaranteed to protect foreigners.

Richard Washburn Child, spokesman for the American delegation of observers, who attended the meeting on capitulation, spoke briefly, saying:

Ismet got the last say. He again denounced the capitulations as unfair.

"They are unjust," said the Turk, "even if Turkey is given the right to denounce them in the treaty as Lord Curzon has intimated. Allow me to point out there are no capitulations for Greece.

The whole question finally was pressed over to sub-commission with the Turks still protesting that they would maintain their present attitude.

FORD ENDORSES DETROIT SENATOR

Declares Couzens Man Who Will Always Be Found Fighting For Plain People.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 2.—Flaying "the special interests that have controlled the senate so long," Henry Ford tonight declared that "if a senator will go down to Washington and begin to sweep off the books all the laws that make for privilege he will be opening a great field of service."

Mr. Ford's attack on the senate and the laws that body has passed was made in a statement endorsing the appointment of James Couzens, mayor of Detroit, to succeed Truman H. Newberry in the United States senate.

Years ago Couzens secured employment with the Ford Motors company as a bookskeeper and rose rapidly, finally being made vice president. Later he sold his stock to Ford for $30,000,000.

"A better man than Mr. Couzens could not have been picked," said Ford.

"There are two things for which Mr. Couzens can be absolutely relied on. First, he will never spend a nickel for political advantage; second, he will never let a stupid party allegiance lead him into any situation or commit him to any policy which he believes is not for the good of all the people."

"Do you think Senator Couzens will lineup with the progressive element in the senate??" Ford was asked.

"I don't know anything about that. But I should judge that he might. I know one thing—the special interests that have controlled the senate so long will never buy him with money nor move him by promises of power and position nor fool him by flattery. Jim's too big a man to be hoodwinked by any of these moves. He's been in politics so long he knows all the ropes of the game. And men like that get into the United States senate so seldom that I guess Couzens will just have to line up with the progressive element to feel at home."

SAYS LUKENS NOT INNOCENT

Frank Connell Tells Pardon Board Pal Whose Sentence Has Been Commuted Was "Master Mind" of Sunol Bank Robbery.

WANTS HIS LIFE SENTENCE REDUCED

Applicant Says Was Intimidated Into Carrying Out Scheme and Then Betrayed Into Hands of Posse—Both Convicted For Murder.

In contradiction to the story told by his former pal, R. G. Lukens, who convinced the board of pardons nearly a year ago that he was only technically guilty of the crime for which they were jointly sentenced, Convict Frank Connell of the state penitentiary asserts, in his application to the board for a commutation of his life term, that Lukens was the "master mind" who planned the bank robbery at Sunol in July, 1916, and used himself as a stool pigeon to execute it.

Lukens and Connell were convicted together in Cheyenne county for the murder of Ira Paup and Paul Vacik, two members of a posse which formed at Sunol following the bank robbery and went in pursuit of the perpetrators. The pardon board, after hearing Lukens' version of the affair and getting confirmation of it from former county officials who helped to prosecute the men, reduced Lukens' term to ten years. With good time deducted, this will let him out next April 10.

The request of Connell to have his sentence commuted is on the board's calendar for the regular monthly hearing on December 12. His written statement, which is already on file, declares that Lukens instigated and planned the robbery; that Connell was duped and intimated into carrying out the scheme, and that Lukens afterward betrayed him into the hands of the posse so as to make Connell the "goat" and get off himself with as light punishment as possible.

Came From Colorado.

The men had met at Denver and were traveling overland in an automobile which Connell says he owned. He tells the board that Lukens was a nomad and "world wanderer" who came to Denver when he was down and out. There, Connell declares, he took Lukens to a hotel, gave him a job as sales-

U. P. IN FIGHT TO SPLIT UP MERGER

Coast Line Rests Case After Presenting Evidence For Ten Days.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Shippers and business interests in the Missouri valley and inter-mountain regions, grouped around the Union Pacific railroad, opened their attack before the interstate commerce commission today to eliminate the so-called Ogden "bottle-neck" in Utah, and wrest control of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific system.

The Southern Pacific rested its case in the afternoon, after ten days of continuous presentation of testimony in favor of maintaining the present merger of its lines with the Central Pacific.

Frank Francis, mayor of Ogden, told the commission that the elimination of Southern Pacific control of the Central Pacific is essential to the future development and prosperity of the Rock Mountain region.

"The Central Pacific was favored with rich land grants when it was built, extending in some instances for twenty miles on either side of its right-of-way," said Francis. "Bonds were voted for it in sums of as much at $40,000 a mile, in order that this territory might have a great mid-continental route connecting it with the Pacific coast, and the Mississippi valley.

DEFEAT FOR REPUBLICANS

Democrats In United States Senate Carry On Successful Filibuster and Force G. O. P. To Discard Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill.

SECOND SETBACK FOR ADMINISTRATION CLAN

Decision To Abandon Measure Reached At Secret Session Held Saturday and Senator Lodge Selected to Make Announcement.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—After battling unsuccessfully for three days against a democratic filibuster which threatened to prevent the passage of any legislation whatever in the new session of congress, beginning Monday, the republican membership of the senate threw up the sponge tonight and voted in caucus to lay the Dyer anti-lynching bill aside indefinitely.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, republican leader, was instructed formally to advise the minority Monday that no attempt to pass the anti-lynching legislation would be made in the coming session.

The Dyer bill sought to give the federal government power to step into states wherever a lynching occurred. It provided a $10,000 penalty to be levied against the county where the lynching happened, to be paid to the victim's family. It also provided for the arrest of county and state official at the scene. It was attacked as unconstitutional.

The action of the republican caucus gave the administration its second defeat in the brief period of two weeks during which congress has been in special session. Early last week, the senate voted to recommit the $5,000,000 Liberian loan bill which the administration had advocated.

Lodge Announces Decision.

Senator Lodge announced the decision of the caucus to a group of newspapermen.

"I was instructed to tell the opposition on Monday that we will make no further atempt to pass the Dyer bill either at this session or at the next session," said Lodge. "If the democrats accept this announcement their filibuster will end."

Before business will be resumed as usual Monday, the democrats will inscribe their victory on the pages of the Congressional Record. This may be done either by a motion to recommit the Dyer bill or by reading the "gentlemen's agreement" which has ended the measure's legislative career.

With peace declared the president will try to rush hundreds of presidental appointments, including the naming of Pierce Butler to the United States supreme court, through to confirmation. If this is not done Monday morning they will expire with the end of the special session. In order to handle all nominations the senate will meet at 10 o'clock, two hours earlier than usual. It will adjourn about 11:30 o'clock sine die, thus ending the special session and reconvene at noon in the regular December short session.

The decision of the caucus means the ship subsidy will be rushed before the senate next week. Already passed the house, but tied up by the democratic filibuster, the measure will be referred to the senate commerce committee Monday morning. The committee will attempt to report it back to the senate by Wednesday with a recommendation for its immediate passage.

Mrs. John Legrand, who entered the bank four minutes later, released the prisoners.

The bank is covered by burglary insurance.

MAYOR ZEHRUNG DEFENDS WHEEL TAX IN LETTER

Only Other Way to Raise the Money Is By Amending Charter By Vote.

Mayor Zehrung has replied to letter from F. W. Putney, president of the Lincoln Automobile club, December 1, which included a number of suggestions as to means of providing for policing the streets, enforcement of the traffic laws and the raising of funds otherwise than by the suggested wheel tax.

Mr. Zehrung fires back a regular broadside of facts and figures, with the opening statement that Mr. Putney in reality suggests nothing. Then he answers each suggestion individually as follows:

The Mayor's Letter.

Mr. F. W. Putney, president of the Lincoln Automobile club, Hotel Lincoln, Lincoln, Neb., Dear Sir: Yours of even date was handed to me this morning by Miss Neylon.

"I certainly would appreciate any suggestion as to how to raise money for additional police, but I regret to say you do not suggest anything.

"The money for the maintenance of the police force as well as for the parks, streets, sewers, water and light department and every other department is raised by general taxation. The only way to get more money is to have the charter amended by vote of people. We are allowed to raise $500,000 a year but can only draw checks for ninety per cent of this amount which gives us $450,000 and some little extra money that comes in from occupation tax and such things as that.

"Last year when there was a great deal of crime in the city, the police partment was unable to furnish the number of policemen that was necessary and so the citizens put on ex-service men and paid them out of their own pockets and by this means not only made a living for a number of men but the crime wave was almost eliminated.

"The city cannot use the fines that are levied against offenders, either speeders or any other offense against the laws as by the laws of Nebraska, this money goes to the school fund and it would be necessary to go to the legislature and have the law changed, and as the school board needs all the money it can get, I doubt if this would be a popular move.

A Legal Question.

"I doubt very much whether the city would have the legal right to force a car owner to have his car insured or bonded but as that is something that you and the county attorney have been corresponding about you probably know more about the legality of this proposition than myself, but I shall be glad to place it before the city legal department for its decision.

"You say that failure to provide sufficient force is not excusable on the grounds that we haven't the money and while it may not be a good excuse I would like to have you tell me how we are going to get the money, that being the question I put up to the people and which you have not answered in any way.

"You may rest assured that I have not now nor have I ever had any desire to place any extra tax on anyone in this city but when the Mothers' clubs came to me on three different occasions and asked that we furnish police protection at the schools I told them that the city did not have the money to hire ten or a dozen extra men but that it would be possible to have them if we could raise the money and suggested the 'wheel tax,' but told them very distinctly that it was up to them to mold public opinion in favor of the tax. If we do not raise the money, we shall continue to handle the situation to the best of our ability with the limited force we have.

"Very truly yours,

F. C. ZEHRUNG,
Mayor.'

Foster Appointed Major In Reserve Officers' Corps

Prof. George N. Foster of the University of Nebraska college of law was recently appointed, by the war department, major in the Officers' Reserve Corps, judge advocate general's department. The appointment was based upon recommendations from various members of the Nebraska bar and the district and supreme benches as to scholastic standing, analytical power, power in presentation and efficiency as practitioner. The limit of active service under his appointment is the same as that of officers in the line—fifteen days' active service annually or a call in national emergency. In accepting this commission, Foster expressed the preference for attachment to the 89th division (largely composed of Nebraskans. The appointment came as result of application suggested last year by Colonel Mitchell, commandant at the university. Professor Foster was commissioned at Fort Sheridan in 1918 and was later personal adjutant of the student army training corps at the university.

Bankers' Life Insurance Company,
Lincoln, Nebr.

Gentlemen: Twenty years ago today you issued me policy No. 11170 for $1,000, on the Twenty Payment Life plan. I deposited an annual premium of $26.20, a total of $524.00 in 20 years. You offered me four options of settlement and I have chosen the second option, and your agent, Mr. H. O. Johnson has handed me your check for $289.69, the surplus or earnings and a paid up policy for $1,000.00 on which I will receive a dividend every year as long as I live. This gives me my paid up policy at a cost of $234.31 and have had 20 years of good insurance besides.

Can say that I am well pleased with this settlement, and shows how every young man by saving a little each year can create an estate for the future, and at the same time have good protection at a small cost.

I can recommend the Bankers Life Insurance Company of Nebraska to anyone wanting two good things in one: Protection to your estate if you die: Good investment on your money if you live.

Yours very truly,

The Mistakes of an Individual Trustee

Some years ago, in a nearby county, lived a prosperous cattle man whom we shall call J. F. Doe. Dying in the prime of life, he left a comfortable but not over-large estate. Details of the administration need not be given here; but a considerable estate is still in the hands of a trustee, under bonds, of course, for faithful performance of his duties, but not chargeable for errors of judgment.

A certain Nebraska corporation, promoted by the aid of "high-pressure" stock salesmen, and now deep in the mazes of litigation and proceedings in bankruptcy, has, in its list of stockholders, the name of "J. E. Doe Estate" for 26 shares. The sum of $2,873.00 was paid for these 26 shares. Perhaps some dividends were received by the Trustee but not in the past year or two. This stock was purchased 3 years ago and has probably paid not more than one 7% dividend—say $182.00.

Suppose the Trustee had instead bought Liberty Bonds at par (they were then at a discount) the income to date would be $366.30. Or a good Municipal Bond bearing 5%, the income would be $430.95. Or a First Mortgage Farm Bond bearing 5½%, the yield would be $474.04.

But amount of income is not the first consideration in making investments for an estate: Safety of the principal comes first always. And the Trustee of the Doe estate, dazzled by the promise of 7% and even larger dividends, violated the fundamentals of sound investment.

It is probably true that the Nebraska corporation in question was promoted with good intentions and its affairs carried on with honest intent. Nevertheless, the present outlook is that when its affairs are finally wound up, the stockholders will realize very little, if anything.

If Lincoln Trust Company had been Trustee of the estate in question, two things would have prevented it from buying this 7% stock. First, its policy of not dealing in stocks of any kind, no matter how desirable. And second, that part of the Nebraska law governing trust companies, which prescribes what a trust company may "buy, hold and own and sell.'

The Nebraska law prohibits Trust Companies from dealing in "stocks of any corporation that have not earned annual dividends of at least four per cent per annum for at least three years prior to the date of such purchase" and the corporation in question had not paid three annual dividends. Hence, its stock was an impossible investment for a Trust Company Trustee; but the individual is not so restricted in his actions —if he acts in good faith.

FARM BUREAU TO OPPOSE SUBSIDY

Lute Says Tariff Is Merely "Paper Protection" For The Farmer.

H. D. Lute, secretary of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation, has wired Nebraska congressman and senators, calling their attention to resolutions recently passed by a meeting of county farm bureau presidents and the state farm bureau board opposing passage of the ship subsidy bill, and asking them to vote against it.

In speaking of the opposition of Nebraska farmers to the proposed ship bill, Mr. Lute said: "We have subsidized the railroads by the passage of the Esch-Cummins railroad bill; have subsidized the manufaturers with the Fordney-McCumber high tariff bill and now it is proposed to subsidize the shipping trust with a ship subsidy. The so called "protection" of the farmer by the tariff is only "paper" protection. I know, of course, that the farmers of England at this time are asking for protection on farm products saying that American farm products are shipped into England cheaper than they can raise them." Mr. Lute said, "but in England the consumers far outnumber the producers and they do not produce a surplus of farm products so protection of farm products in England will probably be voted down, but in America where the supply of farm products is far in excess of consumption "protection" is only protection on paper."

AURORA EDITOR ENDORSES SMITH

Believes Former State Auditor Right Man For Tax Commissioner.

William H. Smith, former state auditor, who is being urged for tax commissioner, is the right man for the job, in the opinion of Editor George L. Burr, Sr., of the Hamilton County Register. A recent Register editorial says:

A year ago, William H. Smith, former auditor of Nebraska published a statement that the state appropriations could and should be reduced ten millions of dollars. He is now urged for the important office of tax commissioner and we sincerely hope that he will be chosen. The salary is five thousand dollars a year, which in the old days would have been considered liberal if not lavish, but the right kind of a man in that place would be in position to earn the money, and we have a lot of confidence in this same William H. Smith.

LINCOLN'S NEW POLICE PATROL WAGON

The new police patrol wagon purchased by the city a week ago, embodies many improvements over the former open iron caged vehicle that had answered so many emergency calls during its existence. Its interior is especially roomy, being high enough to carry a car load of people standing if necessary. It is equipped with two long seats which may be folded down to make room for a stretcher when desired. Five barred windows provide light and ventilation while the door at the rear is self locking when closed. The new patrol cost the city about $2,000. In the picture Officer C. H. Wilson, one of Lincoln's oversized policemen, stands at the rear of the patrol. Commissioner Dayton took the first ride in the new purchase but rode the driver's seat. Mayor Zehrung, who heads the department buying the new machine, declined an invitation to take an experimental trip in it.

STATE DEPOSITS THREE MILLION

Sixty Per Cent In Active Accounts At Omaha and Lincoln.

Something over $3,000,000 of current funds belonging to the state of Nebraska is on deposit with 310 banks, making an average of nearly $10,000 to each of the banks. State Treasurer D. B. Cropsey has given out a list of these deposits as they stood on a recent date.

Approximately 60 per cent of the state's money thus deposited was in 18 banks of Lincoln and Omaha, which hold it as "active accounts" subject to the state treasurer's check at any time. These accounts bear 2 or 3 per cent interest on daily balances. The remaining 40 per cent was scattered among nearly 300 banks in amounts ranging from $1,000 to $20,000 each, on which the banks pay 4 per cent and are permitted to keep the money until it has to be drawn out to meet the claims against the state. In practice many of these "inactive deposits," as they are called, remain in the banks the year round or for months at a time without being drawn upon.

There are seven banks in Lincoln and eleven in Omaha through which Treasurer Cropsey pays warrants as they are presented to him by checking upon the active accounts of these banks. In Lincoln, four nationals and three state banks are on his list; in Omaha, all of the state's active depositories are national banks.

Small Sums In State Banks.

When it comes to the smaller and more or less permanent deposits, however the state banks in the smaller cities and towns are favored almost to the exclusion of the nationals. Not more than a score of national banks, all told, appear in Cropsey's list outside of Lincoln and Omaha.

The First National bank of Lincoln, on the date when the list was made up had more state money on deposit than any other, its quota being $241,000. The Omaha National bank was second, with $201,000; the National Bank of Commerce, Lincoln, had $197,000; the City National bank, Lincoln, $128,000; and the Central National bank of this city, $56,000. These amounts fluctuate back and forth considerably from day to day, so that one bank might have a large amount at a specified time and be somewhat low a few days afterward, and vice versa.

Banks out in the state which had $10,000 or more deposited with them were:

Ashland, the National bank, $10,000; Cedar Rapids, S. S. Hadley Co., Bankers, $10,000; Fairbury, Farmers' & Merchants' National $10,000; Grand Island, Grand Island National, $12,000; Kimball, Citizens' State (recently failed), $18,000; Newman Grove, First National, $11,000; Ord, Nebraska State, $15,000; Pender, Farmers' & Merchants' State, $12,500; Pawnee City, First State, $10,000; Plattsmouth, First National, $10,000; Scottsbluff, First National, $15,000; Sidney, American bank, $20,000; Valparaiso, Oak Creek Valley bank, $10,000; York, City National, $14,000, and American State, $15,000.

MANY VOCATIONS REPRESENTED IN THE LEGISLATURE

Farmers Predominate in Both Houses—Lawyers Come Second.

Practically All Trades and Professions Of State Included.

In case anyone should be accidentally hurt or taken suddenly ill around the state capitol this winter, there will be two doctors in the legislature to attend him on short notice.

Should he die, the lawmaking body can likewise furnish out of its own personnel the following:

Three undertakers to lay out the remains and supervise the obsequies; two chaplains to conduct the services five newspaper publishers to write and print the obituary; nine bankers to finance the necessary expenses of the funeral; nineteen lawyers to interpret the will and settle the estate, one county assessor to levy an inheritance tax and two county treasurers to collect it.

Should an inquest be held to determine the cause of death, there would be available the further services of these persons from among the solon's ranks.

One detective to ferret out the circumstances and run down clues; one canner to furnish and alibi in case the demise was due to ptomaine poisoning; one telephone man to call the witnesses and a garage man to bring them in; and one professor to furnish expert testimony.

There's Even An Aviator.

But the legislative list is by no means confined to these classes. A novelty this year will be the presence B. Smiley of Seward county. There will also be two dentists, a locomotive engineer, one machinist, one salesman, one butcher, one "secretary" not otherwise defined, one contractor, and one farm union manager.

The farmer membership—always the biggest bloc in the legislature—at the coming session will consist of thirty-nine men in the house and eight in the senate. This is not a majority of either branch, but is the largest occupational group that will be found in both chambers. There are, in addition, two senators and six house members classed as "retired," and most if not all of them are retired farmers who have moved to town. There are also two ranchmen, one in each branch of the legislature. The house has two members classed by the designation of "live stock" meaning, no doubt, dealers in live stock.

Other lines of business represented on the legislative roster are:

Grain dealers, 2; real estate dealers, 3; insurance men, 3; manufacturer, 1; merchants, 5; horsemen, 1; stockyards attache, 1; butcher, 1; abstracter, 1; lumber dealer.

Who Some of Them Are

The three undertakers in the legislature, who can be called upon to give the code law a fitting funeral in case of its demise, are: Senator J. J. Larkin, Douglas county; Representative L. R. North, Morrill; and Representative M. E. Schneringer, Custer.

The two doctors are both house members—E. I. Whitehead of Phelps and A. C. Colman of Deuel. The dentists are Representatives Paul Dennis of Lancaster and C. F. Hansen of Madison.

The editorial contingent comprises these members: Senators E. R. Purcell of Custer and J. S. Kroh of Keith; Representatives A. B. Thatcher of Boyd, C. F. Beushausen of Sherman, and F. M. Broome of Sheridan.

Mollowing are the members listed as bankers: Senators J. H. Reifenrath of Cedar; C. B. Anderson of Lancaster; Charles Smrha of Fillmore; and C. G. Bliss of Buffalo; Representatives Donald Gallagher of Holt, George W. O'Malley of Greeley, John Thomssen of Hall; Albert M. Keyes of Furnas, and A. N. Mathers of Scotts Bluff. Some of the others are incidentally interested in banks.

Former County Officers.

The two county treasurers — both "ex's," of course—are Senator Phil A. Tomek of Butler and Representative W. A. McCain of Logan. The county assessor, likewise retired from that office is E. J. Lamb of Johnson.

Senator J. C. McGowan of Madison is the machinist and Representative Thomas Axtell of Lincoln county is the locomotive engineer. The farm union manager is Representative George A. Ernst of Kimball; the professor, Representative E. P. Wilson of Dawes, an instructor in the Chadron state normal school; the detective, Representative James Allan of Douglas; the telephone manager, J. H. Johnson of Washington, the contractor, N. M. Nelson of Pierce; the canner, Representative J. F. Rourke of Hall; the garage man, Representative W. F. Wood of Dundy; and the man who calls himself a "secretary," without further designation, is Representative H. C. Timme of Douglas.

Lancaster county's deelgation is split up as follows: In the senate, one banker and one farmer; in the house, two lawyers, two farmers, one dentist and one merchant. The lawyer representation from this county seems to have been cut down by the new plan of electing members from districts instead of from the county at large.

Wireless Transmission.

Everyone who has read articles on radio knows of the term ether. It is not difficult to imagine a cork floating on the surface of water being disturbed by the throwing of rocks into the water. The cork may be considerable distance from the spot where the rock strikes the water, but nevertheless it will start into a vertical motion when struck by the water waves caused by the rock. Energy is actually transmitted from the rock to the cork thru the water as a medium, and the farther away the cork may be from the place where the rock strikes the less will be the energy given to the cork, because the energy given to the water by the rock is spread over a greater distance and because some energy is lost in the form of heat in the water itself, due to friction.

This transmission of energy from the rock to the cork and through the medium of the water isanalagous to the transmission of energy from a wireless sending station to a wireless receiving station through the medium of ether. Ether is not ponderable and cannot be seen or sensed in any way. It is a very tuttle thing and seems to defy physical description. Many scientists refuse to acknowledge the presence of ether or to have anything to do with it. On the other hand ether is no more puzzling than electricity itself. We know how to use electricity and we know what it will do but what it actually is cannot be explained.

Ether is ever present throughout space and matter. It is present in a vacuum and it is present in wood or other substances, which accounts for the fact that electromagnetic waves travel through buildings and the like the same as through the atmosphere. It is the medium through which electromagnetic waves travel.

With the Speed of Light.

The propogation of electromagnetic waves is merely the propogation of electric and magnetic forces. There are many theories which account for this propogation of electric and magnetic forces which are quite lenghty, but not important to the fan on account of his picture of the rock and cork being so clearly in mind. The velocity at which electromagnetic waves travel is approximately one hundred eighty six thousand miles per second or 300,000,000 meters per second, and because this velocity was first known to be the velocity of light it is generally stated that electromagnetic waves travel at the velocity of light.

Going back to the picture of the rock and cork it will be remembered that the waves of water were merely crests and depressions. The wave length of the water wave was then the distance from one crest to the next, which corresponds to the wave length of electromagnetic waves. The greater the frequency of oscillation the less is the length of the wave, and vica versa. Wave length is numerically equal to the velocity of light (300,000,000 meters) divided by the frequency of oscillation. Then it may easily be seen that when stations are said to operate on a given wave lenght it may just as well be said that they operate on a given frequency of oscillation.

When a transmitting attenna has current flowing in it at a given frequency electromagnetic waves having a wave lenth equal to 300,000,000 meters divided by this frequency are propogated in all directions throughout space. If a receiving antenna is tuned to the same wave lenght or frequency of oscillation of the transmitting antenna energy will be taken by it from the electromagnetic wave sent out by the transmitting station and a corrent will be set up in it at a frequency equal to the frequency of current in the transmitting antenna.

The wave length of an antenna circuit, or the frequency of oscillatory current which it will accomodate depends upon the inductance and capacity in the circuit. The antenna itself is merely a condenser and inductance is usually placed in series with it to increase its wave length. Tuning the receiving circuit is merely adjusting the capacity and inductance of the circuit so that the natural frequency of current which it will accomorate is the same as that of the current in the transmitting antenna.

Radio Sparks.

The amateurs in Lincoln are discussing the problem of eliminating local interference here during the hours used by the large broadcasting stations for giving programs. This is certainly a forward step towards the co-operation which is needed by the local amateurs, broadcasting stations, and broadcasting listeners. The opinions of broadcasting listeners will be greatly appreciated by those endeavoring to arrange a radio schedule in Lincoln which will be satisfactory to everyone concerned. If you are interested in this work write the Editor regarding the hours which you think should be left open to broadcasting listeners, and they will be put into the proper hands.

There have been many comments on the Armstrong super regenerative circuit by those who have worked with it and endeavored to try it out. Many say that the circuit is very good for eliminating interference, but that it is not good for receiving long distance stations. Of course an outside aerial is of no more value with this circuit than is the loop. In an article by Mr. Armstrong published in a recent periodical he said that the majority of the diagrams and specifications for this circuit as on the market are incorrect, and that in fact only one diagram out of a hundred which have come to his observation was near correct. It may be well before trying the Armstrong super-regenerative hookup to be sure that the circuit used and values of resistances, etc., are correct.

The two circuit hookup takes a much heavier condenser in the antenna circuit than does the single circuit hookup. For the two circuit hookup a 43 plate condenser should be used, and for the single circuit hookup nothing larger than an 11 or a 13 plate condenser should be used. If an 11 plate condenser were used in series with the primary of a two circuit hookup the wave length the set would be materially reduced in fact in some cases it would not be possible to get up to 400 meters even though all the inductance were used. If a 43 plate condenser were used in a single circuit hookup the tuning would be so critical as far as the use of the condenser is concerned that it would be almost impossible to get the condenser on the correct spot for picking up the desired stations.

There is a great deal of room for improvement in the construction of loud speakers, in fact no loud speaker has yet been built which does not distort the music or speech somewhat. The design of a good loud speaker is a matter of considerable technical difficulty, for it is hard to get a system of this kind which functions indifferently over the entire range of speech frequencies, from 10 to 5,000 cycles. The diaphram of a loud speaker has a natural frequency at which it will vibrate freely the same as an antenna circuit has a natural frequency at which it will oscillate freely. The average telephone receiver which has a diaphram of 2 1-10 inches in diameter and .015 inches thick has a natural frequency of 1000 cycles.

Answers to Questions.

Q. 1. Please advise how and if it possible to connect city current drawn by a step down bell ringing transformer to a crystal set.

J. N. C.

A. 1. Alternating current is used in a circuit developed by the bureau of standards to heat the filaments of amplifier tubes used in connnection with a crystal detector. It is found that the alternating current if properly handled will not cause the 60 cycle hum in the receivers when used to heat the filaments of the amplifier tube as long as a crystal detector is used. The bell ringing transformer is not heavy enough to light the filaments of the amplifier tube, as the resistance of its secondary is too high. It is not designed to carry that much current.

University Notes

Dean E. A. Burnett of the College of Agriculture was elected vice president of the association of Land-Grant Colleges at the annual meeting at Washington, D. C., Nov. 21 to 22.

Dr. R. A. Lyman, dean of the College of Pharmacy, has been asked by H. C. Christensen, secretary of the national board of pharmacy, to assist in framing a model pharmacy law that might be adopted by every state in the union. The object of the law is to simplify the matter of registration throughout the United States, especially in regard to reciprocity between states. Mr. Christensen has also asked Dean Lyman to help formulate rules for classification and standardization of the pharmacy schools of the country. These rules are to be used by the national association of boards of pharmacy.

The university trade school poultry judging team won third place at the American Royal stock show at Kansas City, November 24. A. H. Dixon, H. E. Henson, and F. Stevenson composed the team. Mr. Dixon won second place in the indivdual contest. Ames took first place and Oklahoma second.

The College of Agriculture stock-judging team is in Chicago to take part in the judging contests of the International Livestock show, Dec. 2 to 9.

Women students of the university are going to have an opportunity to learn how to shoot a rifle, according to plans of the military department. The women's athletic association is sponsoring the new move. Major S. Erickson has offered to furnish the instructors, rifles, cartridges and the targets.

Prof. J. Warshaw of the department of modern languages, has an article on "Spanish Composition" in the October issue of the Modern Language journal published by the national federation of modern language teachers. Professor Warshaw deals with the difficulties of teaching composition—the heavy demands it makes upon the student and how to make it interesting instead of a burden for the student. The article sets forth five "working constants" that should be under the control of the student of Spanish composition. They are: (1) position; (2) agreement; (3) gender; (4) mood; (5) accentuation.

Prof. Louise Pound of the department of English is the author of an article entitled "Intentional Mispronunciations in the central west," that is given initial place in the fall number of Dialect Notes, just issued. This article Prof. Pound read last year before an eastern meeting of the Dialect society.

For the best student theses presented before the Agricultural Engineering society, the society will award prizes. The judges will be Prof. J. W. Haney, professor of the mechanical engineering; Prof. E. E. Brackett, professor of Agricultural engineering and Prof. T. A. Kiesselback, professor of agronomy.

THE COLUMBUS DISPATCH
Columbus, O., Nov. 17, 1922.
Crosley Manufacturing Company,
Gentlemen:
Your Columbus representatives permitted me to test one of your Model X radio receivers recently and I was indeed surprised at the results. I was skeptical about being able to tune out local stations, but I am skeptical no more. There wasn't even a hint in the headset that the local station was going on when I tuned in distant stations, and the distant stations came in strong despite the fact that I had only three tubes available. I shunted out the last transformer and socket. With all four tubes going, I am sure the results would be even better. I enjoyed the few nights I had to play with it and hope sometime to be in shape to install one in my home.
Yours very truly,
Alton D. Spencer,

MAN WHO MIGHT HAVE BEEN KING UP FOR TREASON

Prince Albert Goes to Trial Charged With Being Traitor to Grecians.

Hearing Conducted With the Greatets Speed and Certain Amount Of Secrecy.

(International News Service.)

ATHENS, Dec. 2.—For the first time in history a member of the Hellenic royal family faced a courtmartial today, when Prince Andrew, the brother of King Constantine and the uncle of King George, was arraigned before a military tribunal charged with disobeying orders when commanding a Greek army corps against the Turks in Asia Minor.

Although he faced the prospect of a death sentence and the execution of six forme rstate and military officials were still fresh in the minds of the public, Andrew was cool as he sat in the court room.

When the royal prisoner entered the great hall of the Greek chamber of deputies, where the military tribunal sat under the presidency of General Vlachopoulos, he wore civilian clothing without a vestige of the medals that had been bestowed upon him during his military career.

Walks Between Gendarmes.

Andrew was flanked by gendarmes who carried rifles. He was pale, and showing evidences of his confinement since he was brought to Athens from Corfu on November 22, following his arrest.

Andrew was led to a seat facing the president of the court. His lawyer took the chair beside him.

General Vlachopolos, attired in his uniform, occupied the speaker's seat. He glanced at the prisoner, but his only acknowledgement was a nod of the head. Only a few weeks ago the military head of the court would have bowed in humble homage to the man he was now trying.

The indictment against Andrew was read, the prisoner paying careful attention in the meantime. It recitcommitte in the interests of the nation had convened the military court to punish any and all who had contributed to the humiliating defeat of Greek arms in Asia Minor. It declared that an investigation had revealed that Andrew, while at the front, had disobeyed orders, and that his disobedience had been of aid to the enemy.

The proceedings were conducted with the utmost speed and the indictment was read so fast that the persons in the courtroom could hardly follow it.

Witness Are Called.

"The witnesses will now be called," announced the president of the court.

The first witness was General Papoulas, former comander-in-chief of the Greek army in Asia Minor. His testimony was largely technical, dealing with the military movements and the effect of orders from Athens upon the Greek movements. General Papoulas intimated that officials in Athens were too far removed from the scene of the conflict to know actual conditions at the front when the Turkish army, freshly armed and reorganized, was lunging against the Greeks all along the Anatolian front.

Andrew listened patiently while all this was going on, turning once in awhile to whisper to his lawyer. It was known in advance than Andrew had prepared his own defense. His contention was that the Greek debacle would have been of even greater proportions if he had obeyed to the letter the instructions he received. He admitted disobeying some commands, but said that he did so in the consciousness that he was doing the best thing for his country.

Papoulas Also Under Arrest.

While Papoulas was testifying the members of the court found him an object of much interest. Although under arrest himself, the former Greek commander betrayed no nervousness.

The other witnesses were held in an ante-room to take their turn upon the stand. Outside the parliament building Greek gendarmes of sworn loyalty to the revolutionary committee, paced up and down the street forbidding passage through the military lines to all except those holding passes countersigned by the chiefs of the committee.

Although there was an undercurrent of restlessness, the city on the surface was calm.

Additional Report Filed By Selleck

W. E. Selleck, treasurer of the state republican central committee, filed a supplemental report in the county clerk's office Saturday of the disbursements and receipts to the state fund. Expenditures amounting to $3,978.07 and contributions totalling $251 are included in the additional list. The grand total of expenditures is $12,684.17. The total donations included in the former report amounted to $12,420.40, which, added to the last list, makes a complete total of $12,671.40.

Disbudsements included in the supplemental report include: Phil Wadhams, $100; Elmer F. Robinson, $253.50; C. E. Matson, for work in office, $22.25; Mrs. Mary Hight, $166, Flowers for Mrs. Hight, $3; telegram $80.59; Clark Jeary, $100; Frank G. Simmons, $100; H. P. All Worked Up About Nothing

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 2.—The relatives of a former mayor of Mexico City and well known suporter of the Carranzista cause, came to local police station tonight with tears in their voices and anguish in their Latin gesticulations.

"Oh, sentors he ees kidnap" was the burden of their tale. "One beg auto he come. He go away. We have the fear he ees take across border and excute."

Investigation developed that the "beeg automobile" was a police car and that the probrecito had been arrested on a charge of disposing of mortgaged property.

SPANISH CABINET FAILS.

MADRID, Dec. 2.The Spanish cabinet resigned this afternoon as a result of debate in parliament over responsibility for the war against the Riff Tribesmen in Morocco.

High Spots From Tiger's Address Delivered at St. Louis Saturday

"Today, if you will allow me, I would like to make a kind of a summing up of the whole case."

"What did I come here for? I will tell you the plain truth. I read, from a very distinguished man, the very severe words about America during the war and after I felt badly about it. I thought that England, America and France ought not to quarrel, and the next thing I heard was that France was charged with being militaristic. That was the charge. I took my cane and my hat and here I am."

"The idea that the French people were militaristic and imperialistic is so wonderfully absurd that I thought I could clear that in one evening."

"We fought, won victory and then took the trouble to discuss the treaty; to write it. It was signed by your and my country and then the treaty was broken. The French were left alone with the British to face it."

"Our debt—of course, will be paid, but must you ask for this money at the very time you know we cannot pay it? I think not."

"Devastation of our territory; I do not know if you know what it means. Suppose that a tornado passed through St. Louis and there was nothing, but everything down, not a church, or school, or house."

"We lost, I think, more than anybody else. I think our budget was more than twenty times increased in billions."

"I have fought militarism ever since I was born, following in the steps of my father. I helped to upset Napoleon III."

"Do you know that for your own military establishments last year you spent one billion and a half dollars? We three hundred and three."

"If you go and tell a Pole of a Czecho-Slovak that France wants to dominate him, he will laugh, but I do not laugh. I think such assucations ought not to be offered. We have our lives to defend and whether it pleases Martin, Joseph, Charles or anybody, we will defend ourselves to the end."

"I am sorry to say, England and America broke what we call the organ of economic solidarity. You know very well at your own expense as taxpayers that it is not only spent in blood, it is spent in money."

"Really can't you be in the position of being accused of being militarists? I am not sure that there is not, at certain times, a little of the militaristic ideas in some American people whom I know.

"I do not believe very much in warships now, because there are submarines and airships which make capital ships not so much a capital point."

COTNER NOTES.

B. C. Dill, with the University Publishing company, addressed Dean Duncan's class in elementary education last Tuesday morning on "Methods of Teaching Reading."

Last Saturday morning L. E. Mumford of College View, spoke to the same class on the use of phonics in reading and spelling.

President Cobbey spent last week in Kansas territory. He visited Atchison, Hiawatha, Valley Falk and Topeka. He spoke to the high schools in these places, and also found a number of subscribers to the "living endowment fund."

The dormitory served the regular borders and many friends Turkey dinner on Thanksgiving day

Next Monday evening the Mathesian and Philomathian Literary societies will hold a joint debate in the college auditorium. The question is: "Resolved that the present system of high school organization should give way for the junior and senior high schools.'

Last Sunday a gospel team composed of William Borgard, Dillard Lessley, Robert Schell, Everett Bradley and Charles Holsinger, held services in the Christian church at Brock, Nebraska. Mr. Schell led the singing and spoke on "The House on the Rock." Mr. Bradley spoke on "Neglect." Mr. Bergard made his first public speech on "Thanksgiving." Mr. Lessley gave the address of the day on "I am not Ashamed of the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

The inter-class basketball tournament was held in the gymnasium last week. This contest includes also the Bethany high school team At this writing the tournament is only half through. The seniors and freshmen are in the lead.

The annual football banquet will be held in the college dormitory dining room Monday evening. Those entiled to college sweaters will receive them at this time. The Bethany high school football team will also be entertained in this same banquet. The high school team has not been scored against the entire season. Their coach, "Pid" Parmenter is a Cotner product.

Professor Rob Roy Hardin, head of the dramatic art department, was the sole judge of the southwest district of Iowa inter-high school declamatory contest, held at Blanchard, Iowa, last Tuesday. He acted in this same capacity last year and picked the state winner. Professor Hardin is also coaching the high school play at Clarinda, Iowa.

Ben Cherrington, secretary for the Rocky Mountain district of college Y. M. C. A., spoke in chapel Tuesday morning. He brought one of the greatest messages Cotner has heard this year. He said that the Y. M. C. A. at the late Atlantic convention, stepped from adolescence into the adult stage. It took a definite attitude toward all the great reforms being waged for the good of the human race; the eighteenth amendment, a warless world, the universal exaltation of Jesus Christ in all lands, the recognition that America is only a beginning to be Christian land, and that the great task of the American church is to Christianize America.

The World's Student Christian federation received the chief consideration among outside issues in the college this week. On Wednesday morning at the assembly period Burrus Thomas made a short address in behalf of this enterprise and pledges were taken. Nearly every student and member of the faculty made pledges. It is beginnig to be practically acknowledged that the students of oday are the citizens of tomorrow, Mr. Thomas said. The surest way to establish world confidence is to establish the spirit of brotherhood among the coming citizens of the world. The old men of today will doubtless insist on quarrelling to the end; but there is a possibility of establishing a lasting friendship among the young men.

Field Secretary Peter Cope spent the last two weeks at Edgar, Fairfield and Clay Center, Neb. He found a keen sympathy with Cotner college wherever he went. More than sixty pledges to the "living endowment fund" were made. He spoke to the high schools of these respective towns. If interest in education is a criterion, Mr. Cope thinks prosperity is returning.

John C. McPherson, one of Cotner's trustees, died at his home in Douglas, Nebraska, last Monday noon. His body was buried in the Douglas cemetery Wednesday afternoon, Charles F. Stephens, pastor of the Bethany Christian church, preaching the sermon. Mr. McPherson had not been in good health for some time, but had given no occasion for serious alarm to his friends. On Monday he ate his noon meal as usual. Retiring from the table he remarked that he believed he would lie down for a while. He died suddenly a few minutes later. In him Cotner loses one of her staunchest friends. He has been a member of the board of trustees for a long period and was familiar with the details of the management. Three of his children are graduates of Cotner, and the fourth, Waide, is now a student here.

Friday was Home Coming day at Cotner, and also Senior Recognition day. There were many of the alumni present as well as other friends of the class of '23 and undergraduates. Classes closed for the day at the 10 o'clock period. Recognition services were held in the college auditorium. Professor Moss, sponsor for the class, formally presented his class to the preisdent. President Cobbey acknowledged the class with a well prepared, scholarly address; and Burrus Thomas responded for the class in his usual eloquent manner. At 2 p. m. the dramatic art department entertained the college and friends with light drama from the gymnasium stage. This was followed by two basketball games: at 3:30 the college girls played the alumni; and at 4:30 the college boys played the alumni. In the evening the faculty entertained the senior class at a banquet in the dining room of the Bethany Christian church. The musical features of the day were in charge of the department of music. Miss Alice Sorenson presided at piano and Lloyd Klein, senior, sang.

Dean and Mrs. Duncan entertained at Thanksgiving dinner Dr. and Mrs. Tyler of Omaha, H. S. Tylor and wife of Omaha, Dr. W. A. Tylor of Lincoln, R. W. Tylor of Lincoln, all brothers of Mrs. Duncan; also Mrs. Tracy Tylor of Valparaiso, Nebraska, Mrs. G. W. Tylor of University Place, Mrs. Duncan's mother, and Mrs. S. A. Duncan of Lincoln, Mr. Duncan's mother. Miss Ruth Duncan was also home on vacation from Shelby, Neb., where she is teaching in the primary department of the Shelby schools. There were other friends present also; twenty-six in all. It is an annual custom in the Tylor family to gather once a year in one of the homes of the family. This year it was Mrs. Duncan's plasure to entertain the entire family.

On Wednesday evening, November 29, the Sabbath school of the S. D. A. church gave a Thanksgiving program in their church. The chief feature of the program was the bringing of their offerings.

Miss Annette Lippincott entertained several of her friends from north hall Wednesday evening, November 29, at the home of Mrs. Martin.

The students living in north and south halls enjoyed an old-fashioned march in the dining-room at south hall, Thursday night, November 30.

Harry J. Loose, one of the best known detectives in the United States, gave a lecture in the college chapel Saturday evening, December 2, on the subject: "Crime—its Cause, Practice, and Prevention."

At 2 o'clock, Thursday, November 30, the students living in the college homes, a few of their friends, faculty members, and their families met in south hall for the annual Thanksgiving banquet. The college symphony orchestra played during the dinner hour. President O. M. John was master of ceremonies; and appropriate after dinner speeches were given by Elder Wight, Professor D. D. Rees, Professor Wolfkill, Professor M. P. Robison, Dr. M. E. Olsen, and Mr. Rhodes.

The church service, Saturday morning, December 2, at the S. D. A. church took up the subject, "The Value of Education and Its Place in Our Work." J. N. Anderson presided. Those who spoke were Professor George McGready Price, Dr. M. E. Olsen, Professor D. D. Rees, Elder R. A. Underwood, and President O. M. John

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Olson entertained a number of friends at their home, Thursday evening, November 30.

Monday morning, November 27, after chapel it would not have been necessary to read the mid-semester grade slips to know what the various students received. Their faces told the tale; some were bright and smiling, but others were very sad.

All's Well In Film Land; Orange Blossoms Bloom

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Dec. 2.—Reaction has set in and weddings and engagements are all the rage now in the film colony where divorce and separation flourished.

When stars of opposite sexes promenaded just a few months back, whispers went round that this looked serious for the wedded partner of one of them.

Now the reporters, when this happens, hold a wake around the marriage license bureau.

All the talk not long ago had Gloria Swanson, Blanche Sweet, Constance Talmadge, Bill Hart and almost everybody else fearful of domestic controversies.

Now it has switched again. The quiet wedding of Nina Untermeyer and Elliott Dexter, will soon be fellowed by a ceremony for Wallace Beery and his bride from Kansas, Miss Virginia Sutherland, it was announced today. Marie Prevost has been selected as a mate by Kenneth Harlan, it is said. Even the rumors smack of wedding bells. Charlie Chaplin and Pola Negri, Jack Dempsey and Doris Deane are some of the latest names linked.

All's well in filmdom—the setting sun has blotted out the rolling pin in the fadeout.

WISCONSIN 'BOB' AND HIS FRIENDS SET UP OWN BLOC

Adjourn Conference After Determining ot Launch New Nonpartisan Body.

Plan Is To Revolutionize Everything Connected With Laws and Election.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Having launched a new non-partisan movement for constructive progressive legislative achievement, and the election of all public officers rom president downward by a country wide direct primary system, the two-day "progressive conferences" here were adjourned tonight with progressive leaders declaring their drive for the "greatest good for the greatest number of people" would next be heard in the halls of congress.

An effective working organization of some of the foremost repesentatives of organized labor, agricultural and other groups to carry on a national people's legislative bloc, irrespective of party lines was evolved from an eventful meeting of progressive spokesmen today at the City club.

The launching of the new movement followed the formation yesterday of an equally militant "progressive congressional bloc" composed of present and newly elected progressive senators and representatives who propose to pursue henceforth an aggressive, bi-partisan course of legislative action in both branches of congress.

Heads Bloc in Congress.

Senator William T. Borah of Idaho, one of the progressive leaders of congress, was unanimously chosen chairman today of the advisory executive committee of the progressixe congressional bloc, with which the people's legislative bloc is intended to work and co-operate not only at the national capital but in every state of the union.

The other members appointed to Borah's committee were Senators Ladd, North Dakota, Ashurst, democrat, Arizona, and Shepherd, democrat of Texas, and Representatives Woodruff, republican, Michigan, Beck, republican, Wisconsin, Collins, democrat, Mississippi, and Logan, democrat, South Carolina.

Following a warning by Senator La Follette that a "great onslaught will be made by the reactionary interests upon the state legislatures this winter to deprive the people of the popular primary in a number of state by repealing the direct primary law," today's gathering adopted a resolution calling for a more effective and far-reaching primary system than now exists."

Primary Law Opposition.

The resolution set forth everywhere the direct primary "has met with the determined opposition of political bosses who represent the special interests" and whose purpose is not only to defeat the primary when ever then can, or "when compelled by public opinion to pass a primary law to endeavor by skillfully contrived jokers to nullify its main purpose."

The resolution declares for the extension and perfection of a national and intra-state promary system "applying the direct primary principle to the choice of all party candidates" for president and vice president and all other public offices, "without the intervention of any convention."

Speeches were delivered by Senator Brookhart and Representatives Sinclair, republican of North Dakota, and Frearfi republican of Wisconsin, in condemnation of the present financial system, including the federal reserve board, and Secretary Mellon's conduct of the treasury department. Frear denounced the official of the interval revenue commissioner as "rotten" and demanded a thorough-going investigation of it.

CORNHUSKERS IN LINE FOR "BID" TO SHOW GOODS IN WEST

WEST MAY INVITE NEBRASKA'S TEAM

Invitation May Come to the Cornhuskers to Play In Pasadena Classic.

Penn State Thrice Defeated, and Bezdek Not Strong For the Trip.

(Special to The Star.)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 2.—The Nebraska Cornhuskers stand a flattering chance of being invited to play here New Year's day in the annual East-West football classic—a chance, however, which depends on the withdrawal of Penn State.

The Nittany Lions have been invited and have accepted. Since accepting the bid, Bezdek's charges have dropped three games and there is some talk of Bezdek requesting permission to withdraw his acceptance. In that event, Nebraska will be invited because of her defeat of Notre Dame and impressive season.

Coast Team Not Selected.

The Pacific Coast conference has not yet named the team to play here New Year's. Selection is due to be made at the annual conference meeting in Seattle next Saturday. Right now, University of Southern California and Oregon are bidding for the honor. Oregon has not been defeated, but has not met the strong teams on the coast. Her best performance was against Washington university—a tie game on Thanksgiving day. Washington has been beaten by California.

California, coast champion, has waded through everything, but declines to play a post-season game. Next to California, University of Southern California is rated the strongest aggregation on the coast. U. S. C. held California to one touchdown, a feat no other coast eleven has even approached.

Invitation to Los Angeles.

Next year Los Angeles dedicates its new municipal stadium. This mammoth football home has a seating capacity of 85,000. Three weeks ago the athletic department of the University of Southern California announced that the winner of the Notre Dame-Nebraska game would be invited to play the dedicatory game here in 1923. This means that Nebraska will be invited here in 1923 unless she draws the New Year's date. In that event, she will be invited again next year should she be victorious. If defeated, Notre Dame will be asked here in 1923.

NEUTRAL GROUND FOR BIG GAME?

Columbus and Beatrice Fans Offer Fields for the State Title Game.

Lincoln high school authorities announced Saturday they would insist that the Kearney-Lincoln state championship game should either be played on a neutral field or on the gridiron decided by toss.

Two Nebraska cities have already put in a bid for the post-season game in case the two schools decide to stage it on a neutral field.

Secretary Elliot of the Beatrice Chamber of Commerce has wired Supt. Homer P. Shepherd of Lincoln high school that "six thousand football fans stand ready to tender the use of Beatrice field to the two teams in the event they desire to play the championship game at Beatrice." Columbus through Superintendent McGee of the public schools has offered its field for the championship play.

Not Binding on Lincoln.

It is understood Kearney is declaring the board of control promised the final game in return for the cancellation of the home contest Thanksgiving day. Lincoln authorities point out that Lincoln high school was not a party to the agreement and that if Kearney had lost at Alliance, the Buffalo county fans would still be without a Turkey day game or one to take its place.

A meeting of the state athletic board of control, at which representatives of Lincoln and Kearney will be present, will probably be called for Monday night and the place of the postseason game decided at this meeting.

In the meantime Coach Harold Brown of Lincoln high school is sending his moleskin warriors through the training grind in preparation for the big contest. The squad emerged from the Cambridge game in good shape and the Red and Black will be able to present the same lineup that faced Cambridge.

Camera View of Record Crowd at Nebraska-Notre Dame Game

Twenty thousand persons, possibly more, witnessed the Cornhuskers of Nebraska and the "Fighting Irish" of Notre Dame stage their annual gridiron battle Thanksgiving afternoon in Lincoln—witnessed the victory of the Huskers, 14 to 6, in a combat which was, indeed, a football classic. The crowd within the field numbered not less than 15,000, while the university "coal pile," east of the field and directly in front of the camera, was vantage ground for two to three additional thousands.

Wrecking of the wooden stands is to begin at an early date in order that Nebraska's Memorial stadium may be completed in time for the Cornhuskers' season of 1923. It was fitting, perhaps, that the greatest football crowd in the history of University of Nebraska athletics should have gathered for the last game ever played on the old field.

Nebraska field was dedicated in 1909 in conjunction with the Nebraska-Iowa game. Date of the dedication of the new stadium has not been fixed, nor has an official name been selected for it. However, the suggestion has been made that the memorial stadium should be named "Rhodes Field," in honor of Roscoe Rhodes, varsity football man at Nebraska and elected to captain the team of 1918, who made the supreme sacrifice during the drive by the American army in the Argonne forest. A special committee, appointed by the university authorities and the alumni association, probably will select the official name.

DAWSON BUSY ON SCHEDULE DRAFT

Material On Hand For Team Capable of Maintaining Nebraska's Prestige.

BY "CY" SHERMAN.

Coach-Director Fred T. Dawson of the University of Nebraska is well on his way toward drafting the Cornhuskers' football schedule for next year. Announcement was made late Saturday afternoon, in a press dispatch to The Star from Chicago and published in its last street edition, that Dawson had come to terms with Coach Zuppke of Illinois for a Nebraska-Illinois game Saturday, Oct. 6 at Urbana—the first combat of the season for both schools.

The Nebraska slate, arranged to date, includes Kansas, Syracuse and Notre Dame at Lincoln; Illinois at Urbana, and Missouri at Columbia. The two-year contract with Oklahoma expired with the game at Norman, Okla., last Oct. 28, but relations with the Sooners presumably will be considered desirable, on which basis it is likely that Dawson and Benny Owen will get together on a Nebraska-Oklahoma game next year, playing it in Lincoln.

With six games practically clinched the two remaining games permitted by Missouri Valley conference rules probably will be scheduled during the Valley conference session next Saturday in Kansas City.

Unique Agreement.

The arrangement entered into for the Nebraska-Illinois game is distinctively unique in intercollegiate athletics. According to the press dispatches, both Dawson and Zuppke are anxious to make it a "stiff practice game," rather than a test of Missouri Valley vs. "Big Ten" football. To that end, they have agreed that each coach shall supply the other with charts and diagrams of all formations and plays to be used during the game. This arrangement completely precludes "trick plays." Each coach will know the other fellow's "stuff," and thus will be able to devise a special defense for the various formations used by the rival teams. Football history records no similar agreement in intercollegiate circles.

Fancy "Home" Schedule.

Assurance that Kansas, Syracuse and Notre Dame are to clash with the Cornhuskers is a guarantee to Nebraska followers of a fancy home schedule, more important than the schedule, however, is the sort of team Nebraska will have to buck up against such stiff opposition. That phase of the situation should not give Cornhusker concern, even though Nebraska stands to lose a long line of experienced varsity men—a list including Captain Hartley, Preston, Russell and Roy of the backfield, and Weller, Wenke, Schoeppel and Scherer of the forward wall.

Great Backfield in Sight.

To begin with Dawson will have the nucleus of another smashing backfield in Noble, the Dewitz brothers, Captain Lewellen and Hartman. Noble, the speediest big man in American football, should be the most terrific plunger in the game next fall. Herb Dewitz, a fast, hard hitting halfback the past season, worked during the two final games at the quarterback station, giving promise of filling the shoes of Preston and Russell in brilliant style. Captain-elect Lewellen, already one of the most consistent punters in the west, was a steady, almost brilliant, ball lugger the past season and should go even better next year, while R. Dewitz and Hartman also have fine possibilities at halfback and fullback.

Line Outlook Encouraging.

Line veterans in prospect for next year include Peterson, center and Berquist and Bassett, guards, while the following varsity subs are in sight for 1923: Thomsen, Klemke, McAllister and Collins, ends; House, center; McGlasson, guard and tackle; Hendrickson, tackle; Packer, guard; Hinman and Randolph, backs. Berquist may be transfered to a tackle position next fall, as his development has been so consistent as to give promise that he will be capable of filling the shoes of Weller, one of the truly great tackles in Cornhusker history.

Freshmen Have Fine Goods.

A wealth of high-grade material will come up to the varsity next September from Coach Farley Young's squad of '22 freshmen. Several of Farley's yearlings, in fact, were quite

'BIG TEN' TEAMS PASS UP THE EAST

Gophers Land Few Plums and Coach Spaulding Hints at Getting Raw Deal.

BY LINCOLN QUARBERG.
(United Press.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—The threatened split in athletic relations between Illinois and Wisconsin failed to materialize at the annual meeting of Western conference schedule makers here today.

The usual Wisconsin-Illinois game was set for November 10, after a lively squabble over the charges of professionalism brought before this year's game.

No intersectional games were included in the schedules announced, although Iowa has an open date for continuance of the game with Yale, if desired. Chicago left no open date for Princeton, unless the game should be made the first of the season, which is considered unlikely. The Iowa schedule was materially strengthened with the addition of Michigan.

"Hurry up" Yost of Michigan in dating up Iowa pulled the diplomatic coup of the meeting. Both Illinois and Wisconsin wanted the Hawkeyes on their schedules.

Yost Takes On Hawkeyes.

Yost in securing the game eliminated Illinois chances of playing the Hawkeyes again and apparently forced Zuppke to take on Wisconsin.

If Wisconsin had been successful in getting the game with Iowa, the Badgers would have dropped Illinois.

Zuppke said he had no ill-feeling against Wisconsin, but that the recent controversy with the Badgers over ineligibility of players was "unfortunate."

Charges Yost With Dodging.

"Yost is not eager for a game with us next year," he said. "He has an easy schedule and he refused four dates I offered him."

Yost's schedule was one of the first completed and he deserted the conference of coaches before it was over.

"I'm satisfied," he said as he left. Minnesota, anxious for a full schedule of games, was unable to schedule more than four dates with "Big Ten" teams.

Gopher Coach Files Kick.

"I offered to play every team in the conference," said Coach Spaulding. "I got what was left after the rest of the teams had their schedules made. I will fill every open date with a non-conference engagement."

Nebraska Forwards "Delivering the Goods"

The Nebraska line—Scherer and Schoeppel at ends, Weller and Wenke at tackles, Berquist and Bassett at guards and Peterson at center richly merit a full share of the honors accruing to the Cornhuskers for the triumph over Notre Dame. Nebraska football has developed many great lines in thirty years of the gridiron sport at the Cornhusker institution, but never a better one than the forward wall of 1922.

The bunting emblematic of the 1922 Nebraska intercollegiate football championship flutters from the Midland college flagstaff. The gonfalon, the first title won by the Lutherans since their entrance into Nebraska college circles, was placed there by an eleven which weathered conference competition without a defeat although held scoreless by one conference team—Grand Island.

The season was "Chet" Wynne's first at Midland and the former Notre Dame athlete made good by developing a state champion team.

Season Lacks Interest.

The season as far as the conference was concerned proved to be rather uninteresting. Faulty schedules were largely responsible for the lack of interest in college games.

Nebraska Wesleyan, always a top-notch team in Nebraska circles, was competing in two conferences and as a result failed to meet any of the college teams that finished above the "five hundred" mark. Other elevens played incomplete schedules and the season drew to a close Thanksgiving day with only one conference game on the Turkey day program.

After the season was well underway, the eligibility board of the conference declared two Grand Island college athletes ineligible and ordered previous Zebra contests forfeited. This removed one of the strongest teams from the race although the Grand Islanders did come back long enough to hold Midland to a tie score and deliver a knockout blow to Wesleyan's pennant chances.

Midland had a well-balanced team and outside of the Grand Island game, had little difficulty in placing its games in the won column. Peru Normal, runnerup in the conference circuit, was trimmed by a thirty-point margin.

Peru a Winner.

Peru Normal as usual had one of the stronger aggregations in the conference. The defeat sustained at Midland was the only game lost by the Bobcats in spite of the fact that Speer was compelled to construct his machine for the most part out of new material.

Kearney took a distinct bruce over last season and turned in a record of five victories, two defeats and one tie. Coach Holste's Hastings college Bronchos looked better than last season, while Wayne and York stock took a slump.

Nebraska Central, for the first time in many moons, factored in the race. The Quakers turned in two victories and succeeded in making a commendable showing against Midland.

Georgetown Turns Back Lafayette By 13 to 7 Score

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Lafayette university's powerful eleven went down to defeat here today before the Georgetown eleven. The score was 13 to 7.

The Pennsylvanians made five spirited marches down the field, only to be stopped when the Catholics defense stiffened. Georgetown scored in the second quarter with a drop-kick and booted another over in the final period. Interception of a forward pass in midfield and a 50-yard run for a touchdown by Wertz, Georgetown center, clinched the game.

McCandless to Little Nine Meet

Coach Ray McCandless of Nebraska Wesleyan will leave Monday for Sioux City where he will attend a meeting of athletic directors of the North Central conference. The meeting will be held Thuesday and Wednesday.

Basketball and football schedules will be drafted at this meeting.

GREEDY FIGHTERS KILL OWN SPORT

Era of Frenzied Purses Puts Boxing Game On the Blink All Over America.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The knuckle bouncing sport is in something of a slump. It looks like a rather dreary winter for most of the gentry with busted frontispieces, inasmuch as the business of dollar making has skidded considerably in New York—and is pershing elsewhere.

New York put the rollers under the fight game in other purlieus around the country—and now New York is becoming a bit punch drunk itself.

The high, and, ultimately, the ruinous purses Tex Rickard hung up is mainly responsible for it all.

Before fisticuffing galloped back to the Empire state, the game flourished in different parts of New Jersey, in Denver, along the Pacific slope, in Milwaukee, in a half dozen other towns in Wisconsin in certain parts of Indiana, in Memphis, New Orleans, Boston and a lot of other places.

The prices charged were reasonable. The fighters didn't get the price of a king's ransom very time they met—but they got plenty of work, which, at the end of the year, means a nice healthy bank balance.

Then back came New York, with a blare of trumpets, a blaze of glory and staggering prices. Rickard, for the dual purpose of getting real talent and lots of publicity, offered fighters anywhere from five to twenty times what they were accustomed to getting elsewhere.

The stampede was on: The boys of the tin china, the flattened beezers and the meaty ears, forgot all else in the world but the hope of a New York bout. They scoffed at the offers made by Boston, Milwaukee, Denver, New Orleans and other promoters—offers which once were eagerly snapped at.

They wanted offers from Rickard—they wanted the $5,000, $10,000, $20,000 and $40,000 donations of the "gambling westerner."

Rickard go away with the things for a time. For New Yorkers deprived for several years of the sight of fighters in action, were so fistic hungry that they paid the huge admission prices which Rickard was forced to ask to make good on his purse guarantees and to clear a little profit for himself.

CARDINALS' STAR DEMON WITH BAT

Roger Hornsby Has a Long Lead In Race For National Batting Honors.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. — Roger Hornsby, the great star of the St. Louis Cardinals, was the all-around batting champion of the National league in 1922, according to the averages released for publication Sunday morning.

Hornsby led the National league batters with an average of .401, it being the highest mark reached in the league since 1899, when Ed Delehanty batted .408.

Hornsby also broke the National league home run record and with 42 homers to his credit, he was the slugging champion of both leagues. With 250 hits during the season, he also shattered the old record of 243, made in 1897 by Willie Keeler.

The St. Louis star also led in run scoring with 141, in two-base hits with 46, and he was tied for second in triples with 14.

Russell Second to Roger.

"Reb" Russell, the old White Sox pitcher, who was a sensational comeback in the outfield of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was second behind Hornsby in batting with an average of .3681. Casey Stengel, another sensational comeback with the New York Giants, was third with .3680. Fonseca one of the new stars of the Cincinnati Reds, batted fourth with an average of .366 and Ray Grimes of the Chicago Cubs was fifth with a mark of .354.

There were 53 batters in the league who hit .300 or better. Among them the first five were, Hack Miller, of the Cubs, .3519; Eddie Rousch, Reds, .3515; Carmen Bigbee, Pirates, .350; Leslie Mann, Cards, .347; Cotton Tierney, Pirates, .345; Frank Snyder, Giants, .343; George Harper, Reds, .3295; Charley Hollocher, Cubs, .3295. Curtis Walker, Philadelphia, .327; J. Daubert, Reds, .326; Zach Wheat, Robins, .325; Pep Young, Giants, .3209 Emil Meusel, Giants, .3206 and Max Carey, Pirates, .329.

Pirates First as Team.

The Pittsburgh Pirates led the league in team batting with an average of .308. They were followed by the Giants .305, the Cards .301, the Reds .296, Cubs .292, Robins .290; Phillies .282 and the Braves .263.

The Phils led in home runs with 116; the Pirates in triples with 110; Cards in doubles with 280; Pirates in stolen bases with 145.

The Pirates also scored the most runs, 865, and made the most hits, 1,698. The Cubs were the leaders in sacrifice hits with 205.

Lincoln vs. Kearney with the 1922 interscholastic championship at stake is the gridiron card present for the approval of Nebraska football fans this week. The game, which is the last of the season in Nebraska grid circles, promises to be a fitting windup to an interesting season of high school football.

Both elevens have a clean slate for the present season, Lincoln lowering its standards in the game with Omaha Central but later receiving credit for the game because of the ineligibility of a Central player. Kearney has a clear record, unstained by defeat.

Comparative scores show little regarding the relative strength of the two elevens. Kearney piled up a 26 to 0 score over Grand Island while Lincoln won by a 16 to 2 count. The Buffalo county lads had a difficult time defeating York, 14 to 6, while Lincoln walked away with a 24 to 6 win at the expense of the Yorkers.

Aurora gave Kearney a tight rub, 12 to 6. Fremont, Columbus and Omaha Tech crowded Lincoln close.

Lincoln Heavier Team.

Lincoln will outweigh Kearney by a slight margin. The capital city eleven's main strength is in the back field, while Kearney holds the weight advantage in the line.

Fans who are privileged to witness the contest are certain to see a spectacular battle. Both teams are well coached and contain a sufficient number of seasoned players to insure two smoothly working machines capable of playing high class football.

Both sets of ground-gainers includes players capable of giving the fans a real treat when it comes to advancing the pigskin. Brown, Lewis and Thomas feature the Lincoln offensive. Fullback Easterling and Quarterback Patrick lead the Kearney attack.

Some Good Gainers.

In the Cambridge game, "Jug" Brown, Lincoln quarterback reeled off a sensational 95-yard run for a touchdown from kickoff. Lewis, the other halfback, is a triple threat man, being a clever passer, good punter and ground-gainer. Thomas excels in off-tackle smashes.

Patrick, Kearney quarterback, is an exceptionally strong open field runner. His work along this line has featured the Kearney play during the entire season. Patrick's thirty and sixty yard runs for touchdown enabled Kearney to defeat York.

Easterling is one of the best fullbacks in the state. He is a hard-hitting line-plunger and good defensive man. He also hurls a forward pass in good shape.

Neither Kearney or Lincoln were forced to extend themselves in the Thanksgiving day games. Kearney ran up a 78 point score on Alliance. Coach Eberhart using substitutes

CHAMPION JACK LOVER OF DOGS

Dempsey's Affection for Pup Shows Fighting Man In New Light.

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

(Copyright 1922 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

It was aboard the "Panama Limited," as the flyer of the Illinois Central raced through Illinois from Memphis to Chicago.

A dozen passengers, having breakfasted, were sitting inside the observation coach as the brakeman came through and said:

"Jack Dempsey is aboard."

"Where, where?" exclaimed a group of girls.

"I guess he's in his stateroom at the other end of this car," said the brakeman.

"I just must see him—I just must!" exclaimed one of the girls.

"My dear," reprimanded a gray-haired woman, evidently a chaperoning aunt, "you must do nothing of the sort. Remember he is of a brutal profession—and you must always be carefull to avoid contact with such coarse men."

"But, he won't hurt me—he isn't coarse, is he?" asked the girl of the official.

"I don't think so, lady—he seems like a mighty nice young gentlemanly fellow to me," was the answer.

Wanted to See Champion.

The girl pleaded with the older woman for a chance to see Dempsey. The other girls added their pleas. The brakeman offered to conduct them to Dempsey's stateroom "and, if his door is open, you can peek in. You won't see him any other way until we get to Chicago because he never parades around."

The insistence of the girls finally over-ruled the objections of the chaperone. She agreed to permit them to take a peek at "the ruffian," but only upon the condition that she go along so as to lend aid "in case this plug-ugly becomes savage."

The girls and the woman tiptoed along to the compartment. The door happened to be open. Sprawled on the floor was an athletic youth, black of hair, swarthy of complexion, tailored in immaculate fashion.

And in front of him stood a black puppy, trying vainly to chew a rather large piece of puppy biscuit.

Puppy In Stateroom.

"What's the matter, old boy—too big for you?" asked the man of the pup. The pup dropped the biscuit, looked at the speaker, tried again to chew the big piece of hard baked food—but his little teeth wouldn't permit it.

So the man on the floor, finding it impossible to break any smaller pieces off the cake with his fingers, bit a piece off of it with a row of perfect teeth—and then offered them to the pup. He ate ravenously.

The man crumpled the rest of the dog cake with his teeth, fed them to the pup, picked another cake out of a box and cracked that. The pup ate and wagged his little tail joyously.

"That'll be about all for now," said the man on the floor, patting the pup on the head. But the pup thought otherwise. He began muzzling in coaxing fashion—he was still hungry.

Pup Was Real Pal.

The man pulled the pup into his lap, lifted up his head so that dog eyes and man eyes looked into each other, and said:

"Poppy, old boy, I'd sure like to feed you another—but it wouldn't be good for you, see? Wouldn't be good for you. You're too young to eat more than two cakes like that at a time. But when you get a little older, why— —"

The train lurched—the door slammed and the view of the interior of the compartment was cut off.

"What a pretty picture that was—the man cracking up food for the helpless little puppy," exclaimed the other woman. And then, as an afterthought, to the official, "but where was this plug-ugly—this savage Dempsey?"

Sure, It Was Dempsey.

"That was Dempsey, madame—that was Dempsey sitting on the floor feeding the dog," was the answer, "Y'see, madame, somebody in Memphis gave Dempsey that little pup for a present. He wanted to take the dog back to Los Angeles with him, but he didn't want to subject the little fellow to an all night ride in a cold, drafty baggage car.

"So what he did when he left for the train last night, madame, was to take off his overcoat, even though it was very damp and raw outside, wrap the puppy in it and come on board with the coat thrown over his arm as though he were carrying it. He wanted to make sure of slipping the dog into his compartment, where it would be warm and cozy for the little fellow.

Jack Missed Breakfast.

"And this morning, madame, Dempsey passed up having breakfast on account of that pup. He figured if he went to the dining car, or had food served in his room, the presence of the puppy in his compartment would be discovered and we'd force him to put the pup in the baggage car anyway.

"It was just a little while ago we found out about the puppy and because we'll be in Chicago in a little while, the puppy can stay where he is the rest of the way."

The gray-haired woman thought for a while—then said:—

"I've learned something today—I've learned that a man can be a pugilist and still retain all the finer sensibilities of manhood. Jack Dempsey unconsciously has taught me that."

CARDINALS' STAR DEMON WITH BAT

the gilded eggs for himself and the fighters. The reaction was sure to set in; the revolt against huge admission prices was certain to come after the first fight hunger of fandom was appeased.

The public began to pass up the fancy priced Garden fights.

Then the boxing commission stepped in. It fixed a limit for admission tickets. That was fair enough—for the common peepul. But not for Rickard, for the simple reason that the fighters, having become moneycared not that the Rickard intake had been decreased by official ruling.

They wanted those nice fancy purses, please—"or we won't fight.

In this emergency, the commission, which had previously helped the cash customers, turned around and helped Rickard. It ruled that henceforth the purse guarantee system would be the bunk—that it was officially, completely and finally dead.

"Men in the main bouts now will fight on a percentage basis.'

So ruled the august commish!

Fat Purses Forbidden.

And bango went those huge purses; bango went the $10,000, $20,000 and $40,000 stuff. The fighters and their managers wailed and whined that they couldn't fight for such little money as the cut-rate admissions and percentage arrangement would net them. But they're doing it.

Here's the odd angle: Rickard for a time held to the maximum admission figures allowed by law. And for a time he peopled Madison Square Garden. But eventually the natives decided that even those reduced prices were exorbitant. They forgot to show up on fight nights.

Desperate, Rickard slashed prices again—cut them well under the top limits. That was a good move because the popular price shows have been filling the Garden which, earlier in the season, was little more than half full.

No Place to Go

The fighters? And, there's the gloom squadron. For under the new price arrangement in New York, the intake is only one-half or one-third what it used to be. And under the percentage thing the headline fighters, as a rule, are on getting only about one-fourth or one-fifth of the money of two seasons ago.

A lot of them would like to turn back to Boston, to New Orleans, to Milwaukee and those other cities now which they deserted when the gold rush to New York was on. But it's little use.

And the reason is plain. During a two-year lull of star bouts in those cities, many of the fans turned away from the sport—and either adopted another or decided that sticking the money in the bank and the shins up alongside the fireplace at home these winter nights was a better arrangement than parking in a fight arena.

So there's wailing and much gnashing of the teeth in the world of knuckle shovers just now. And there's a prospect of its increasing, for the game is in a bad slump—and slumping.

FOXY GAMBLER TRICKED BY DIAZ

Bob Pate Worth Millions, But No Match For Greaser Politician.

BY AL SPINK.

The smartest gambler sooner or later meets his match.

I have seen this statement made good many a time but the one instance of which I will never forget was the bunkoing of one of the shrewdest gamblers in the world by a Mexican politician.

There was a time when Bob Pate of St. Louis was looked on as one of the smartest and best financiers Talking about him, they used to say:

"He has more money than any other man living and he'll never have a dollar less."

At one time Pate owned a chain of faro and keno banks in St. Louis which brought him in from $5,000 to $50,000 daily. When he died a little while ago he hadn't a penny.

Pate had a lovely family, but it was denied admission to the finest homes in St. Louis. So Col. Bob concluded to move them into St. Louis county.

And there at that particular time James Robinson, America's first famous circus rider, had established a magnificent country place where he trained his fine stable horses for their circus acts.

Bought Country Estate.

Pate laid covetous eyes on Robinson's place and then paid its owner a fabulous price for it.

Out there, too, beside a home Pate established a race course on which to train his thoroughbreds. He also went in for racing and trotting stock. At the head of his trotting stud he placed Counselor and at the head of his placing stable, Alley Russell, then leading stallions in their line.

To Kentucky Pate went in those halcyon days and brought the Milt Young stables of thoroughbreds, then the first string on the American turf. It included Bancroft, Beatrice, Beatitude, Boot Jack and many other noted horses. So formidable indeed was this string that on the opening day of the Cote Brilliant meeting in St. Louis in 1878 the Pate colors finished in front of everyone of the six races run.

But from that day forward the Pate colors trailed in the dust and defeat and ill luck followed their owner.

Made Trip to Mexico.

Pate was in despair with all his money, when one day he concluded to make a trip to Mexico, to which place he had been invited by his friend, Porfirio Diaz, then the president of the Mexican republic.

President Diaz met Pate on his arrival in Mexico City and in an open carriage drawn by four horses he drove the St. Louis gambler down the Avenue del Reforma, a boulevard 200 feet in width and parked with magnificent magnolia palms and ferns.

Diaz showed Monsier Pate the great statue of Victory, standing 300 feet in height and surmounted by the most magnificent and massive bronze figure ever cast, and after the drive took him through the castle of Chapultepec, which had been the home of all the Mexican presidents.

In the park adjoining Pate was allowed to bathe in the famous pool in which the old kings, emperors and presidents had bathed.

Gold and Silver Everywhere.

The St. Louis gambler told his host that the park and its environment was the most gorgeous and beautiful he had ever see, and Diaz explained that it had been brought to its beauty fifty years before by the great Maximilian. Its continued brightness and beauty, he explained was due to the tons of gold and silver used in its ornamentation.

Diaz told how through all the wars no sacrilegious hand had ever marred the virginal beauty of the place.

After a game of cocked hat in the bowling alleys, which were trimmed with ivory and gold and silver, Pate was introduced to the shower baths adjoining which were lined on the sides and base with onyx.

As you run into Mexico City for nearly twenty miles you can see the volcano of Popocatapetl, or the smoking mountain, 17,880 feet in height, snow-capped like Pike's Peak but 3,000 feet higher than the Colorado mountain.

Blue Grass and Fat Cattle.

Beauty and prosperity were in evidence on every hand even during the month of January, and the climate was warm, superb and summery.

Diaz told of how these fields had artificial irrigation for nearly 10 years and of how they were continually in blossom.

The Mexican president, pointing to this El Dorado, pictured a beautiful race course in the center of it all and with Pate as the master mind behind it.

Pate, the king gambler, a wise man among millions listened to the siren and carried away with the surroundings, fell for the Diaz talk. He returned to St. Louis forthwith, drew all his money out of the bank and shipped all his wordly goods to Mexico.

Diaz Got His Wealth.

"Shall we ship Counselor and Alley Russell there, too," asked one of Pate's men, a little dubious about the undertaking—Alley Russell, for whom a few days before Pate had been offered $50,000, and Counselor, for whom Pate had often refused a king's ransom.

"Yes, every mother's son of them," said Pate.

So all of them went, and Pate followed with his family. Six months later Diaz and other Mexicans had all of Pate's property, money, horses and all. His faro and keno games in St. Louis were no match at all for the game Diaz and friends played on him in Mexico.

good enough to have "made" the varsity the past season. The freshman layout includes Locke, Meyers, Bloodgood, Black, Scott, Bronson, Bowers, Ballah, Wynne, Reynolds, Bernard and Hecht for the backfield, and Weir, Rhodes, Hutchinson, Molzen, Wostoupal, Pospisil, Wilson, Armstrong and Swanson for the line. Several of the freshman backs are exceptionally speedy, notably Locke, Bloodgood and Meyers, while the players will not be lacking in beef and aggressiveness.

Looks Like "Real Team."

With a line-plunger of such rare prowess as Noble, performing alongside Captain Lewellen, the Dewitz brothers, Locke, Bloodgood, Meyers and other speedy prospects, the Cornhusker backfield of 1923 may take rank as one of the most effective in Nebraska's football annals. Nor should the line fall short of maintaining the pace set by the backs. In short, Cornhusker prospects are highly encouraging for next fall. The Dawson team should be a "real team" in every phase and department of the pigskin sport.

Real Stuff As Boxer of Class

ARLOS FANNING

Arlos Fanning of Kansas City and Len Schwabel of St. Paul will pair off as opponents in the eight-round semi-windup of the glove program scheduled by the Disabled War Veterans post for Thursday night, Dec. 7, at the City Auditorium. Fanning and Schwabel do their knuckle stuff in the lightweight division. Fanning's ability has been demonstrated in a Lincoln ring. The Kansas City boy was here last winter, boxing for the American Legion and giving Kid Wheelock an artistic pasting, although the referee decreed the rumpus was a draw. Schwabel, hailing from St. Paul, is a protege of the renowned Mike Gibbons. Schwabel's record includes a long string of kayoes and decisions, yet it is generally agreed in local boxing circles that the St. Paul boy must have a fancy line of goods to put it over Fanning.

AGED LAWYER TO GIVE UP OFFICE

(Special to The Star.)

GENEVA, Neb., Dec. 2.—John Barsby, county attorney of Fillmore county, will next month retire from the office after having spent thirteen years in that capacity. Mr. Barsby is seventy-nine years of age and a veteran of the Civil war. He but a few days ago received word from England of the death of his last surviving brother, Edward Barsby, who died at Leceister, at the ripe age of eighty.

This brother was an interesting citizen of that city. He had served in the navy in the fifties, as a member of the crew of the famous gunboat, "Cormorant," commanded by Admiral Hawke. Sixty-three out of ninety-six men were killed when the "Cormorant" accompanied the British plenipotentiary to Pekin.

Fillmore county's retiring attorney had four brothers. Sam died a soldier in the war of '61 in this country, while Henry William and Edward passed away in the mother country.

Mr. and Mrs. John Barsby expect to go to Florida for the winter immediately after Mr. Barsby quits his present office.

WEBSTER COUNTY WOMEN ORGANIZE

Several Community Clubs In Existence at Various Places.

(Special to The Star.)

RED CLOUD, Neb., Dec. 2.—The home department of the Webster county farm bureau was organized here this week at a meeting which had been called by County Agent H. R. Fausch, at which women from all over the county were given the opportunity of meeting Miss Stella Mather, home demonstration leader of Lincoln, who talked and planned with them during the entire morning.

It was found at this meeting that there are nine lively community clubs engaged in various lines of work in Webster county, Miss Mather stating that she had learned that most of these are working on dress forms or some line of sewing. Five clubs have made their required quota of ten dress forms and are thus entitled to two delegates each to the state demonstration or school of instruction in Lincoln. They expect to take up millinery in January or in February. The Webster county girls' sewing club took five prizes on ten articles exhibited at the state fair this year.

The home department of the farm bureau has elected officers as follow: Mrs. W. Thomas, president; Mrs. C. Arnold, vice president; Mrs. W. Lippencott, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. H. Thomas was chosen delegate to the state meeting in Lincoln in January, with Mrs. O. McNutt as alternate. Mrs. Dan Garber will also be in Lincoln at that time with her husband, who is a state representative.

Students of Blue Hill Schools Turn the First Spades for New Building

The erection of a modern, three-story school building at Blue Hill Neb., began Friday, Nov. 24, when each student and teacher took spade and at a signal dug the first spade of dirt for the foundation. Many people were out to witness the jubilee. That Friday was a gala day or the school boys and girls, and they displayed flags and banners and gave a program of patriotic songs, school songs, the flag salute and spirited yells. The scene is shown in the picture, with the old building in the background.

The old building has played no small part in the community life of Blue Hill and the development of the boys and girls who have assembled within its walls, but it is no longer able to house the ever growing student body and must give way to a larger and more modern structure.

The new building will be equipped with a standard-sized gymnasium with bleachers that have a seating capacity of 400, or the room can be used for other school purposes with a capacity of 800 people. The assembly and class rooms will care for a large increase in the high school. The building will contain an up-todate kindergarten room. The domestic science, agriculture and manual art rooms will be up to the the standards of the Smith-Hughes requirements. George A. Berlinghof of Lincoln is the architect.

The board of education has spent much time and careful figuring in the planning of the new building. The personnel of the board is: L. C. Frahm, secretary; Dr. H. Hawley, treasurer; Mrs. W. C. Frahm, Chas. Goll and S. K. Logan.

C. L. Westcott, who is entering on his fifth year as superintendent, has assisted the board in planning the building.

WESLEYAN NOTES.

F. C. Kuppel, '17, writes Dean F. A. Alabaster that he is teaching history and manual training in the Jefferson county high school, at Boulder, Montana.

Students and faculty enjoyed a two day recess Thursday and Friday. Many of the students attended the Epworth league meeting at the First Methodist church of University Place Friday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin D. Scott entertained at Thanksgiving dinner Thursday the Chinese students who are attending Wesleyan. These are King Huang, Sheng Sy and Shing Yuh. All are from Fukien, China.

SELL BUICKS BY TRAINLOADS NOW

H. E. Sidles Tells of Big Shipment On the Way to Lincoln.

"Practically everything is being done now to get Buick shipments through in record time, and while I'm telling this, the other section of our own special train is getting ready to leave the Buick factory with a large train load of new closed models," said H. E. Sidles last Friday morning.

"Naturally with the new Buick models during the month of August there came a large demand from both the wholesale and retail trade, and we were unable to supply both with each of the fourteen models at that time, but since we have had our train divided into two complete sections we have been able to have cars rolling this way all the time," Mr. Sidles said.

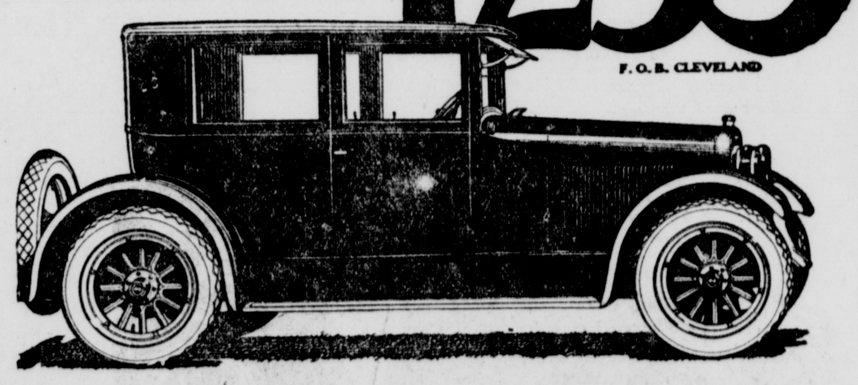

Mr. Sidles also told of the record breaking shipment of Buick cars at the factory during the month just past when Buick delivered more than 10,666 automobiles.

Clinton Students Give Special Program

The Clinton school children gave three Thanksgiving programs in different parts of the building Wednesday afternoon. The Third B grade told of the life of the Pilgrims in story form and gave a Dutch costume dance. The Fourth B grade gave several dramatizations including the arrest of Nathan Hale and the Jack O'lanterns frightening the Indians away. The Second A and B grades dramatized the first Thanksgiving and the Hiawatha story, and gave an Indian corn dance in costume.

BUICK DEALERS TO MEET HERE DEC. 5

"Clinic" Will Be Held For Comparing Ideas On Service.

The Nebraska Buick Auto company will be the headquarters for 600 Buick dealers who with their shop foremen will be in Lincoln, December 5 and 6 to attend the Buick service "clinic."

The meeting will be held on the third floor or the new Buick building which has been prepared for the occasion, and will be in charge of A. H. Sarvis, general manager of service for the Buick Motor company of Flint.

Lectures at this meeting will cover Delco, Exide batteries, Marvel carburetors and other parts of the Buick motor.

One of the main features of this "clinic" will be the big display of new shop equipment, recommended by the Buick Motor company, which will be installed in many Buick authorized service stations all over the country. Buick service like the reputation of the car itself has always been the back bone of Buick sales in every state in the union, and for that reason each branch and distributor throughout the country set aside a few days in each year for the instruction and display of new ideas, in giving one-hundred per cent service to every Buick owner.

On the evening of December 5, there will be shown a moving picture entitled "shop profits," and a talk covering that same subject by Dr. Knapp of the McQuay Morris Manufacturing company of St. Louis.

Mr. Sidles states that "these clinics have proven a great success in upholding Buick service everywhere and have made possible a great many new Buick owners in our territory."

ENGLISH PRAISE FOR YANKEE CAR

Writer For London Paper Pleased With Work Of Paige.

A solid column of reading matter in the Times, of London, England, was recently devoted to an American car, the Paige, an unusual distinction for an American-made car to win in the pages of the Thunderer, most conservative of British newspapers.

The article, written by a Times staff writer on motoring gave an account of a test ride over a difficult and hilly highway with the writer at the wheel. The car had been driven only 200 miles and was still "on the stiff side," making its performance all the more interesting.

"In the Paige catalog," says the Englishman, "I found a rather neat expression—namely, that the car is capable of taking the discouragement out of the roads and hills. It may justly be said that the remark fits the Paige very closely.

Eats Up the Hills.

"With a full load in the four-seated body I turned the corner out of the main street of High Wycombe on to the Amersham hill, and without any change of gear, set the car at the one in nine gradient. The Paige went over the crest without a change of gear and with no sign of engine distress. The minimum speed recorded at any period was sixteen miles an hour. Another climb on second resulted in a minimum rate of 31 m. p. h. Later—Dashwood—one in eleven—was conquered at 34 on top. Bearing in minds the newness of the chassis, these performances can be considered distinctly satisfactory.

"The degree of flexibility of the motor is high. I was able to throttle down to three or four miles an hour and make a clean, quick pickup. As regard smoothness and quietness, I found no period at which one's feet or the pedals began St. Vitus' dance, which is by no means always the case with American cars, even of the six-cylinder variety.'

Speedometer Needs Grease.

It is the concensus of opinion that most speedometer trouble is caused by lack of lubrication in the speedometer shaft. Unscrew the coupling from the speedometer twice a year, and pour into the casing the best grade of heavy oil. A little grease on the driving gears will save wear and tear, and permit easier running. Let the speedometer be a postive indicator in observing the intervals for inspection and lubrication of the car.

When Buying a New Car.

There are 10 important points that a buyer should consider carefully before selecting a new car. They are:

1. Economy.
2. Power.
3. Flexibility.
4. Durability.
5. Comfort.
6. Safety.
7. Convenience.
8. Easy riding qualities.
9. Beauty.
10. Style.

Eeach of these points should be carefully studied in the order named.

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS FOR INSURING LONGEVITY OF THE CAR.

A Suggestion.

When storing a car it is a good plan to release the tension of the clutch spring by propping a stick between the clutch pedal and front seat.

Importance of Lubrication.

Spring shackles, wheel bearings, steering connections and universal joints should be oiled frequently to save wear and insure smoother operation.

Reduce Traffic Congestion.

An operator of an automobile should turn off to a side street when temporary repairs are needed so that traffic on the main highway may not be interfered with.

Position of Steering Wheel.

Never drive with the hands sprawled over the steering wheel sector. There is danger of getting a finger or wet wedged between a spider of the wheel and the gas control.

Test for Weak Battery.

Always watch the lights when the starting motor is used. If they dim noticeably, the battery is low, or the starter may be dirty and draw an excessive amount of current.

Save a Bump.

Place blocks of wood on the garage floor near the rear wall. This will check the car when the driver fails to apply the brakes, and save the front or the back of the car from a possible smash.

If the Radiator Boils.

When the radiator begins to steam, the proper method is to open the drain cock and remove some of the water. This permits the steam to expand and lowers the pressure. This can be accomplished without damage.

Common Causes of Knocks.

Knocking in an engine is most commonly caused by loose bearing, carbon in cylinders, causing preignition, and knocking at high spark, or driving with spark too far advanced.

There are more than 50 parts of a car that need lubrication.

Before driving away in a car that has been blocked on a steep grade, throw the loose stones or other materials off the road. They are dangerous to drivers coming along later.

It is an easy job to remove a tire from a rim that has been shellacked.

Use a thinner grade of oil in winter. Cold weather causes heavy oil to thicken.

A tire should receive as much attention as any other part of an automobile.

Seventy-five per cent of motor troubles are traceable to the ignition system.

A slipping clutch is a constant of power and fuel, and astrain upon the engine.

Do not permit the motor to labor on hills. It is cheaper to change gears than to buy new parts.

Before washing the car, remove all the dust possible by applying a slow stream of cold water.

When pouring gasoline never let it fall any great distance, as the petrol, when passing through the air generates static electricity.

Side curtains of an automobile should be dusted and refolded occasionally, so as not to become too deeply creased or the celluloid badly scratched.

Aprroximately one-third of the cost of operating an automobile goes into tires; another third into gasoline and oil, and another third into general wear and tear.

All motor vehicles, when approaching an intersecting highway, should do so carefully and under full control the operator being prepared to stop if necessary.

GREEK REVOLTERS SENTENCE PRINCE ALBERT TO EXILE

Could Have Been Condemned to Death On Strength of Evidence Given.

(United Press.)

ATHENS, Dec. 2.—Prince Andrew of Greece, brother of the deposed King Constantine, tonight was sentenced to lifelong exile and military degredation for having disobeyed orders during the recent war with Turkey when he had a military command.

The verdict came late tonight after Prince Andrew had been on trial all day before a high military tribunal.

It was considered that he had a narrow escape from death, as the court might have imposed the extreme penalty on the strength of the evidence introduced.

The judgment of military degradation means that he must have his buttons and badges cut off in the presence of a regiment of troops.

Depositions read at the court martial agreed that Andrew had disobeyed orders during the Asia Minor campaign when Greeks were routed by Mustapha Kemal's forces.

The prince was exceedingly nervous when the first questions were fired at him. His replies were choked with emotion as he answered the revolutionary inquisitors M. Lapoulas and Colonel Sareyannis.

Loses Self Control.

It was only after some time that he recovered his sangfroad and was able to answer the court calmly.

With his wife, Princess Alice watching and amid the solemnity caused by the knowledge of the terrible fate of the five cabinet ministers, who had passed before him, the scene as the courtmartial was dramatic in the extreme.

The Prince was questioned for a very long time by M. Lapoulas and Colonel Sareyannis, and lengthy depositions were read condemning him.

The fact that a death sentence was not imposed is believed due in part at least, to the furor created by the execution of the former premier and the other officials who were shot with him, and the fact that Andrew is related by marriage to the Mountbattens, a powerful house connected with British royalty.

Threatens Demonstration.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(By Radio)—Great Britain may make a naval demonstration off the Greek coast if Prince Andrew, brother of former King Constantine, is sentenced to death at Athens, is was learned tonight.

Feeling is running high here over the high-handed methods of the Greek revolutionary committee in trying fromer state and military officers. Britain has a big fleet off the Dardanelles in Greek waters and naval reinforcements have just left Malta to join it.

TIERNAN PLAYS HIDE-AND-SEEK

Law Professor Slips From the Clutches of Officers Who Make Search For Him.

Deputy Sheriff Says South Bend Man Not So Crazy As People Might Think.

(United Press.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Prof John P. Tiernan tonight played hide-and-seek with officials desiring to send him to the psychopathic hospital for observation as to his sanity.

The former Notre Dame law teacher accompanied by his first wife, "Gussie," was reported in hiding at a village near Chicago, while authorities, accompanied by Blanche Brimmer-Tiernan, wife No. 2 scoured the city for the fugitives.

Blanche, who was wed by Tiernan before the divorce decision obtained from his first wife was annulled, arrived from Hansell, Iowa, ready to do all in her power to help the professor escape the clutches of a hospital for the insane.

Will Help Tiernan.

"He knows a lot more than some people I am acquainted with," Blanche said with meaning emphasis. "I am ready to help him and will testify to his sanity if a hearing is held."

Tiernan, who fled from Chicago after Judge Righeimer issued an order that his sanity be tested, sent this message from his place of seclusion through a friend to the outside world:

"I guess I am still one jump ahead of the officials. They will find I am crazy as a fox if they fool around with me very long. I know this law game. It's my business."

Tiernan said he was waiting until his lecture program was completed before coming out of his hiding place. He will talk on "emotion."

He was bitter against his sister-in-law, Mrs. Frances Pulaski, who caused Judge Righeimer to issue the order for a test of his sanity.

Quarrels With Relatives.

"I never did get along very well with my wife's relations," he said.

If Blanche and the officials working with her, succeed in locating Tiernan, the two wives may meet.

"Tiernan isn't as crazy as some people think," said Deputy Sheriff Edward Skarda who spent all day Saturday looking for the marrying professor.

"He was too smooth for me. I got on his trail several times but I was never able to get my hands on him."

Judge Righeimer, after waiting until late today for his deputies to bring Tiernan in, adjourned court over Sunday.

HIS PAL CLAIMS LUKENS IS GUILTY

man, and started out with him on the road to sell goods.

In an exchanges of confidences, as Connell relates, Lukens told about many of his past escapades, and Connell told his companion about "my one mistake"—an irregularity in his accounts as postmaster at a small town in Colorado. After that, Connell says, Lukens used this knowledge as a club and compelled him, through fear or exposure, to fall in with the latter's schemes.

'His was the master criminal mind,' Connell recites in his plea to the board. "He continually used me as a tool and then double-crossed me. He planned the whole affair at Sunol, even to dressing me up for the role I was to play and blacking my face. He figured that if we were successful he would obtain the lion's share of the spoils; and if I were shot and killed he would then go free and get the automobile and my personal property.'

Connell goes on to say that Lukens whole story of innocense is "a network of falsehoods." He charges that the latter deserted his wife and later left a young girl with whom he had lived seven months.

Letters in behalf of Connell have been written to the board o Mrs. Mattie Britt Hale of LaCrosse, Kas., and Miss Mary E. Holland of Denver, superintendent of the local child welfare department there. He has a brother, Harry who graduated last year from the Kansas state college of agriculture at Manhattan.

Woman Slayer Wants Out.

Oscar Gabriel, an Omaha packing house employe, who killed Ernest Blessie at the latter's home when Blesse ordered hi mand several others to "cut out your drinking if you want to stay here," and who is serving one to three years for manslaughter, also desires a parole. Bless sie died from the effects of blows and kicks administered by Gabriel after the latter invited him out into the yard.

Leander Little, doing one to five years for manslaughter in Douglas county, having shot and killed his wife while drunk, is asking a second time to be released on parole. His case was before the board several months ago. Little is a negro ex-soldier.

Lon T. Newsum, Madison county, under twenty-year sentence for incest on his daughter, aged 13, seeks a commutation. He was a farmer living near Newman Grove. He claims the conviction was due to spite work on the part of his wife.

Ernest Darwin, who is in for four years for statutory rape on Wilma Drury, in Gage county, is asking for a pardon. Some of his friends have been heard from to the effect that his wife and four children are badly in need of his support.

BRIEF FILED IN LANGUAGE CASE

take this half hour out of the regular afternoon school period.

Meyer's conviction and fine were sustained by the Nebraska supreme court, and the attorneys for German language interests, desiring to make a test case of it, have taken an appeal to the United States supreme court, claiming that the Siman law, in forbidding Meyer to pursus his vocation as a foreign-language teacher, infringed his rights as an American citizen.

In answer to this plea, Assistant Attorney General Wheeler calls attention to the complete absence of any proof that Meyer is in fact an American citizen.

Another case, involving the validity of the Reed-Nerval law, enacted in 1921 to supersede and strengthen the Siman measure, has also been appealed by the German language elements to the federal supreme court, following a second decision by the nigh tribunal of Nebraska which upheld it in all particulars.

Attempt to Evade by Subterfuge.

The assistant attorney general asserts that the cutting out of half an hour from the regular school period and the utilization of this half hour for teaching German were an obvious subterfuge for the purpose of evading the law, which prohibits teaching foreign languages to children in schools up to and including the eighth grade. Meyer, he says, played the part of a moth "flitting as near to the candle as he thought he could without getting burned."

"Had the supreme court of Nebraska reversed this conviction," says the brief, "there would be no legal obstacle to recesses of two and three hours during regular school hours, which time could be devoted to instruction in German. The whole purpose and intent of the foreign-language law would just be nullified."

Where Personal Rights Cease.

Answering the plea that the statute unlawfully interferes with Meyer's occupation as a teacher, the brief continues:

"Doubless defendant's occupation as a foreign-language teacher is somewhat interfered with. The enactment of prohibitory legislation seriously handicapped many bartenders. Until the passage of regulatory statutes making it unlawful, one could legally sell cigarettes to minors. Before the enactment of forgery statutes, one could alter bank paper at his pleasure. But these rights were not guaranteed to the individual in perpetuity.

"Regulatory legislation, upheld by the courts, has made all these things criminal. At one time the receipt of rebates led to the establishment of the greatest fortune in America; now their acceptance would lead to the penitentiary.

"These foreign-language statutes are no more difficult to sustain under the police power of the state than the bank guaranty act, the workmen's compensation acts, the female labor laws, and tenement housing distinctions."

Same Action by Many States.

Wheeler gives a summary of language laws, more or less similar to the Nebraska statutes, which have been passed by twenty-one other states, as showing the widespread conditions which made such legislation imperative.

"This Siman law is not a unique vagary of the Nebraska legislature," he declares.

Referring to argument of the opposing counsel, comparing prohibition of foreign-language instruction in this country with the measures taken by Germany to compel inhabitants of Poland and Alsace-Lorraine to adopt Teutonic language, Mr. Wheeler says there is a decided difference between imposing a new language by force of arms upon the people of a conquered country and requiring those who come voluntarily to this country to have their children educated in its language.

COLLEGE VIEW NOTES.

The College View postoffice race seems to have narrowed down to two men, Postmaster Eno and Charles Schee. It is felt that either of these men would make a splendid postmaster, so College View is assured of good service for the next four years. Mr. Eno has served as postmaster for the past two terms and has given first class satisfaction.

Miss Eunice Andreasen, who has moved with her parents from College View to Washington, D. C., last summer, is expected in the View this week. After visiting friends here she will go by auto to California, where she expects to remain till after the holidays. In Washington Miss Andreasen holds a position as proof reader at the Review and Herald office.

Mrs. Stone and daughter of Beatrice, have spent the past week in College View on business.

A special orchestra made up of the best musicians in the college, gave a splendid program toa large audience in the chapel Saturday night. They reflected much credit on the music department of the school.

An organization of ladies of the View are selling home baked goods each Friday and turning the proceeds to foreign missions.

A Thanksgiving program will be given by the children of the village in the Adventist church next Wednesday evening. This will be a "harvest ingathering" program, at which time the children will bring in what funds they have raised for missions. A splendid program is promised.

James Schee returned home Sunday after having spent the greater part of last week in Iowa on business.

Professor H. A. Morrison, former president of Union college, now the president of Washington Missionary college of Washington, D. C. is expected in College View this week. He is returning on a business trip.

Wanamaker Shows Much Improvement

PHILADELPHIA, Dec., 2.—The condition of John Wanamaker, 84-year old merchant, was reported "unchanged" by his physicians tonight

Wanamaker was taken ill about two months ago while staying at "Lynderhurst," his summer estate near Jenkintown and was brought to his home here to be nearer expert medical attention.

Though his malady is diagnosed as a "severe cold," Wanamaker's advanced age and the long duration of the cold makes his illness serious.

BODY OF MANN ON WAY TO ILLINOIS

Members of Congress Look An Face of Dead Colleague Last Time Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Mourned by democrats no less than by republican, Representative James R. Mann, of Illinois, passed finally tonight from the hall of the house of representatives, wherein for twenty-four years he had been a conspicuous and respected leader.

For six hours today his body lay in state in the well of the house, from whence he had so often directed or fought the course of legislation for a quarter of a century. Official service were held over the body while friends passed the casket to look at his face for the last time. When the shadows deepened in the house blotting out the picture, the casket was closed and started on its long journey back to Illinois, accompanied by a congressional escort of twenty-two members.

Amogn the last to look on his face before the casket was closed were "Uncle Joe" Cannon and "Billy" Rodenberg, Illinois colleagues of Mann, and friends of a life time. Tears rolled unrestrainedly from their eyes and they looked.

Banked under a mass of floral tributes from friends and former colleagues and from government officials the casket was placed in the well of the hous early today. A guard was stationed at hear and foot.

President Harding and members of his cabinet, including Secretaries Hughes, Wallace and Fall and Attorney General Daugherty; Chief Justice Taft and Associate Justices McKenna and aVndeveenter of the United States supreme court representatives of the army and the navy, members of the diplomatic corps, joined with the house and senate in paying the last tribute to the dead legislator and leader.

Cannot See Reason For Investigation Of His Interests

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2.—E. G. Lewis, former St. Louis banker, general manager of the Palos Verdes estates and various other enterprises in California, tonight declared that he could see no possible reason for any invsetigation of his activities here or elsewhere.

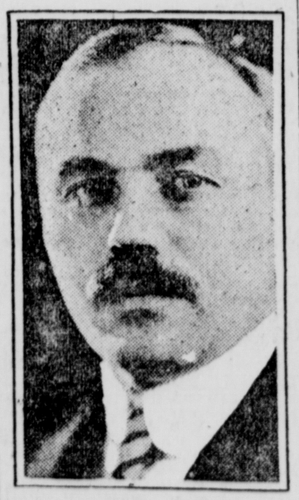

Lewis, commenting on the announcement of E. M. Daugherty, state corporation commissioner, that he would initiate the inquiry, said he had received no notice from Daugherty of such plans.

"It seems peculiar to me," said Lewis, "that Mr. Daugherty should undertake to make such an announcement without communicating with me or with any representative of my companies.

"Someone who has a grudge against me, or for some unknown reason wishes to harm the interests of my companies, has evidently gone to the commissioner with malicious intent.

"Neither our companies nor the title companies have had any notice of action contemplated by the commissioner. We would, however, invite investigation."

LUCK FACTORS IN KETCHEL'S CAREER

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

(Copyright 1922 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"The greatest thing about Stanley Ketchel was his almost unbelievable ability to take punishment," declared Jack Kearns. "If it hadn't been for that Ketchel's career, instead of being one of the most brilliant the fistic world has ever known, would have ended almost as soon as it began."

And then the man who now manages Jack Dempsey, but who, years ago, handled fighters who battled Ketchel, recounted some of Stanley's deeds:

"Ketchel was as wide open as a Nebraska prairie in his earliest days. It was no trick to hit him. When he was just starting and for quite a long time afterward, men did hit him with everything but the tops of the Rocky Mountains. They'd floor him again—again—and again. But they couldn't keep him there.

"And, sooner or later, Ketchel would get up and, with that furious, wild man attack of his, bring down the other fellow and go on to victory.

Twice Licked by Thompson.

"I once managed a fighter—Morris Thompson — who fought Ketchel twice in Butte, Montana, and beat Stanley both times. Ketchel didn't impress anyone very much in those days and no one thought he'd go very far along the pugilistic roads.

"Ketchel might have remained unknown if it hadn't been for what might be called a freak break in luck for him. It all came about through his fight in Marysville, Cal., with Bennie Hart, a negro.

"No one paid much attention to the fight in that hick town. But it happened that Johnny Norton, who was one of the big men in boxing affairs in San Francisco, was in Marysville at the time. He liked Hart—and bet a big bunch of money on Hart to beat Ketchel.

"That fight was a thriller if there ever was one in pugilism. The men started to slug with the bang of the first gong and the air was full of flying gloves. One of Hart's pile driver smashes caught Ketchel on the jaw in that first round—and down he went. But he was back on his feet and slugging with the bell.

Like Pair of Wild Men.

"They tore into each other like wild men in the second, ripping and smashing away at each other with all the fury and the power that was in them. In the third Ketchell caught Hart on the chin and down went the negro. But he beat the count.

"So it went until the seventh. By that time both men were near to collapse because of the fearful punishment each had taken. Ketchel swung—a sort of dying swing at the staggering Hart, missed—and Hart, in floundering out of the way, happened to ram one to Ketchel's jaw. And down went Stan again.

"As the referee was counting over him, Ketchel climbed to his knees. He tried to get to an upright position but the power to lift his body fully seemed to have gone from his arms and legs. But he lifted his head and saw Hart, one eye closed, nose smashed, blood covered, staggering, wobbling above him.

Scared Negro Into Quitting.

"'You dirty, black skunk—you dirty skunk!' muttered Ketchell through lips swollen to twice their size. 'I'll get you yet—I'll get you and I'll kill you. D'ya hear? I'm going to kill you!'

"As nine sounded, Ketchel, by some superhuman effort, got to his feet and toppled toward the broken, bleeding negro. It was too much for Hart. He turned, staggered to his corner—and refused to fight further.

"That victory in itself wouldn't have 'made' Ketchel—or given him the golden chance. The thing that made him was the fact that Norton had lost on his bets to the Marysville sports. They razzed Norton—and it infuriated the San Francisican. He swore to get revenge.

Failed to Get Revenge.

"He went back to Frisco, got Joe Thomas, then ranking as the middleweight champion of the world, took him to Marysville, matched him with Ketchel and bet a gob on Thomas to win.

"In the first round Ketchel hit Thomas so hard that when Joe hit the floor some folks thought an earthquake had taken place. They insisted that only one and one-half minutes of the first round had gone up to the moment that Thomas went down. But when seven or eight had been counted off and Joe was still dead to the world, the bell rang ending the round.

"It may be explained that Johnny Norton, who had bet so heavily on Thomas, ad who was supposed to be Joe's manager, also was timekeeper for that fight.

"The showing Ketch made against Thomas that night made him a national sensation. The rest is history. But in that history the name of Stanley Ketchel never may have appeared if a man hadn't bet against him and lost one night and then sic'ed a world's champion onto him in the dual hope of getting revenge—and making a gambling cleanup."

Declares Labor Not Discirminated Against

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Asserting that labor has not been discriminated against in the exercise of the injunctive power by the courts, Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the United States labor board, tonight denounced organized labor's movement to shear courts of injunctive and certain other powers as "insidious treachery to the republic."

America's Public Debt Is Decreased

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The public debt of the United States was decreased $40,652,000 during November, the treasury department announced tonight. The gross public debt on November 30, was $22,624,786,459. A treasury statement said the nation's finances for the first half of the fiscal year will show distinct improvement after the receipt of income tax payments due on December 15. WEST TRIMS EAST IN GAME OF STARS

"Brick" Muller Blocks Punt and Runs Seventy Yards to Only Touchdown.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 2.—West triumphed over east, 6 to 0, in the annual "grid-grad" game here today.

"Brick" Muller, all-American football hero of California, blocked the place kick of "Red" Roberts, Centre college star, snatched the ball and dashed seventy yards for the only touchdown of the classic contest.

Try as he would, the famous Thurman of Penn State, playing at right guard, was unable to lead his men to victory. Kick after kick failed to make any headway against the western stars. Only once the western goal was endangered. That was when Thurman succeeded in working the ball down to the one-yard line. Then he fumbled, "Bo" McMillen recovered and punted out to safety.

The game was not unlike other all-star games of the past. Both sides lacked coordination and team work. The fans were looking for individual starring and they saw an example of brilliancy in Muller's 70-yard sprint. The lineups:

Eastern Suns.

Fargo, Williams, right tackle.
Thurman, Penn State, right guard.

Muller Does His "Stuff."

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 2—"Brick" Muller, all-American end of California, who two years ago contributed to the defeat of the champion Ohio team at the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena, "strutted his stuff" before 15,000 Buckeye fans at Ohio stadium here today.

In a thrilling 70-yard run, Muller showed Ohions one of the chief reasons they lost the great intersectional contest at the end of their victorious season of 1920 and, incidentally made the only score in the east-west all-star classic.

Muller was the whole show in today's game. The "Bo" McMillens of Centre and the Harold Joneses of Yale didn't have a chance.

Early in the third quarter Muller crashed through the eastern line like a shot, blocked "Red" Roberts placekick and before opponents or fans knew what had happened, he was flying down the field.

Five players were still sprawling on the turf when Muller placed the ball over the eastern goal line.

Muller executed the play almost singlehanded His flashy blocking of the kick and recovery made it the most brilliant play ever seen on a Columbus gridiron.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.

Buying of high priced tobacco shares featured the opening of today's stock market in which the main price tendency was again upward. The demand spread over a broad list, but equipments and steels were inclined to be sluggish. American Snuff was pushed up 7 points, Lorillard Tobacco 3½ and American Tobacco 1½. Fisher Body moved up 1 point to a new high record for the year and Studebaker also added 1 to yesterday's closing figures. Mexican Petroleum opened 2 points higher and California Petroleum and Standard Oil of New Jersey registered gains of large fractions. Other strong spots were Adams Express, Kresge, Republic Steel, Atlantic Coast Line and Illinois Central, the advances ranging from 1 to 1¾ points. Resumption of selling pressure in International Harvester forced it down nearly 2 points and New York Central yielded fractionally on profit taking. Foreign exchange opened firmer.

Stock prices continued their move to higher ground in the absence of brief session of the stock market in further correction of the over-extended short position developed during the recent reaction. Some exceptional gains were made by a number of specialties which represented shares, as a rule moving only moderately higher. High grade railroad shares were bought freely, and there was an increased volume of speculative optrations in industrials. Acute weakness in International Harvester, which dropped 2 points, failed to unsettle the rest of the list, although a few other weak spots developed from profit-etaking. Woolworth was depressed 4 points, Fisher Body 3 and new York Central, Pan-American Petroleum and Associated Dry Goods 2 each. Some of the outstanding gains included American Snuff, up 10; All America Cables, 7¾; National Cloak & Suit, 5; United Fruit, 3½ and Omaha and Studebaker, 3 each. The closing was strong.

Sales approximated 525,000 shares.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Dun's today says:

The final month of the year begins with the usual seasonal characteristics of stimulated retail distribution and diminished demand in most other channels. With lower temperatures and development of holiday requirements, the movement of goods to consumers is expanding and favorable results in this field are foreshadowed. It is an inventory period in different primary markets, however, and not much in the way of new action in this quarter is to be expected for the present. There would be larger buying now, even with annual accounting in progress, if needs for some time ahead had not been well covered in many cases by recent commitments, or if difficulty was not being experienced in securing supplies of certain commodities. The transportation congestion, if still the main drawback, is not the only obstacle to prompt delivery of merchandise, for some producers are as fully engaged on previous business that additional orders cannot be readily filled.

Weekly bank clearings, $5,397,512,000.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 2.

WHEAT—Wheat took an upward swing during the early dealings today because of commission house buying of May and July. The market was easily influenced, however, and the upturn was not retained, sentiment here being inclined to be rather bearish with a light speculative trade. Liverpool ignored the easier tone in America yesterday, which had considerable influence on the bulge. The opening, which ranged from ⅛ to ¼c net higher, with May $1.17¼@1.17½ and July $1.05⅛@ 1.05¾, was followed by a moderate decline all around.

Outside support failed to develop and the market eased off quickly under local pressure. There was considerable evening up for over Sunday at the last. The close was weak with values showing a net decline of ⅛ to ⅜c, with May $1.16¼@ 1.16⅜ and July $1.07⅝@1.07¾.

CORN—Corn and oats followed the trend of wheat, starting strong on scattered local selling. Support, however, was lacking, there being no aggressive buying in evidence early. After opening unchanged to ¼ to ⅜c higher, with May 70¾@70¾c, the corn market eased off on all deliveries.

Corn developed a heavy undertone with more or less pressure on the deferred deliveries and closed at a net loss of ⅝ to 1¼c with May 69⅛@69¾c.

OATS—Oats started a shade to ¼c up with May 43¾@43¾c, and later underwent a general decline.

PROVISIONS—Provisions lacked support.

BUSINESS MAKES GAINS ALL OVER ENTIRE COUNTRY

(International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Business and industrial gains were reported from all sections of the country this week. One of the chief obstacles to improvement in the northwest and middle west is the continued shortage of railroad cars, although the movement of grain has grown larger since the last week of November. All sections report larger distribution of merchandise and unemployment is down to the lowest level of the year. Prosperity is making strides in the south. The cotton mills are showing great activity in the textile districts.

Retail trade is growing. Factories of all kinds report plenty of orders on hand to keep them running into the new year. News comes from Canada that the wheat crop will be 391,425,000 bushels, the biggest in seven years.

Money Is Plentiful.

Money is more plentiful. Nearly $20,000,000 new bonds were issued this week to the American investing public.

Bradstreets reported 409 failures this week against 497 the week before. Most of them were in the middle-western states.

The average price of twenty representative industrial stocks on the New York stock exchange was $5.73 against 94.10 last week and 84.10 this week last year. The average price of twenty representative rail stocks was 85.56 against 83.46 last week and $1.41 this week last year.

The rate on money for call loans ranged from 4 to 5½ per cent in New York this week. Three months' loans were made at 5 per cent.

Exports of cotton increased this week so that the season movement abroad is only 70,000 bales behind last year. The price showed a tendency to decline this week owing chiefly to speculative dealings and decrease in the volume of business.

Visible Supply of Cotton.

The present world's visible supply of all kinds of cotton is still over 5,200,000 bales (of which 3,876,414 is American) against about 6,400,000 bales visible supply this time last year.

Bank clearings of the entire country this week were estimated at $6,818,155,581 compared with $7,436,-795,265 last week and $7,772,680,366 this week last year.

Continued short covering in some sections of the list aided by buying in others gave the stock market a strong appearance during its half day's session. Gains in the standard shares ranged up to 3 points but the advance was more extensive in a number of specialty stocks. The active railroads little generally easing off under profit-taking following their sharp upturn yesterday.

QUICK REALTY TRANSFERS

Many pieces of property are for sale that never bear a placard, and the way to know of the realty market is to watch the Wants.

Home owners and those who possess business property and acreage are often called upon to turn their holdings into cash. Owners leaving the city, business changes—these and scores of other conditions—prompt many realty transfers.

When a condition arises that makes it necessary to sell realty quickly—the Wants invariably accomplish the desired results.

FORMING LEAGUE TO PROTECT GAME

Sportsmen Organize to Preserve All Forms Of Wild Life.

OMAHA, Dec. 2.—Omaha sportsmen Monday night will meet at the Elks lodge room at 8 o'clock to effect the organization of an Omaha chapter of the Isaac Walton League of America, for the purpose of protecting all wild life of the state. It will be the object of the organization to obtain a local membership of at least 1,000.

"We need and will welcome every man who is an American," said J. T. McVittie, acting president, "for we intend to carry on work here and the state that all natural beauty shall be protected, by similar groups of men in each community. We will stand for the better stocking and preserving of natural waters; for the intelligent protection and propagation of game; and for the education and encouragement of new sportsmen in the principle of true sportsmanship."

The Isaac Walton League of America was first organized in Chicago some six months ago with a membership of 1,000 and expects to eventually band together 1,000,000 American men and women into an organization which will make it a duty to see that the game laws are obeyed and will stand behind game wardens in their efforts to apprehend and prosecute law violators.

Pawnee County Organizes Live Stock Association

(Special to The Star.)

PAWNEE CITY, Neb., Dec. 2.—At a banquet served by the ladies of the Mt. Zion church in the G. A. R. hall here Friday evening, the Pawnee County Improved Live Stock association was organized with close to 100 members. Prof. M. B. Posson of the Agricultural college of the University of Nebraska addressed the gathering and assisted in the formation of the group. Local business men interested in the project joined the association.

Fred Bachenberg was elected temporary president and a meeting to be held two weeks from Friday was arranged for, at which time permanent officers will be elected. Mr. Posson told of the many advantages to be gained by such an organization and through his suggestions, goals were set which the men in the association will strive to attain.

Note Gives Lie to Charge Childers a Hater of England

DUBLIN, Dec. 2.—"I die loving England and passionately praying that she may change completely her attitude towards Ireland," said the last letter written by Erskine Childers, which was made public here today.

Childers, who was executed nine days ago by a Free State firing squad, was chief aide of Eamonn De De Valera in the republican movement and was said during his life to be the most bitter enemy of England in all Ireland.

Doane College News

The following men were awarded the Honor D at the football banquet last week in recognition of their achievement in football: Glenn W Buck, '23, Arcadia; Charles H. LeBar, '23, Carrier, Okla; Joe J. Sukovaty, '23, Swanton; J. W Bayer, '24, Crete; H. W. Gausman, '25, Western; Herman Wissenburg, '25, Crete; W. Everett McQuilkin, '25, Cambridge; R. U. Buck, '26, Arcadia; I. G. Ross, '26, Albion; H. D. Simon, '26, Geneva, Jack Lindquist, 526.

No cloud marred the homecoming celebration of Doane last week. Victory over Hastings in the football game on the home field added lustre to the football banquet which was celebrated that evening in a Gaylord hall dining room transformed into a pavilion of black and orange.

Harvey M. Johnston was announced as captain-elect of the football team for next year, at the banquet. Johnston has played quarterback this fall. The honor of being "Tigress," elected by the team to speak at the banquet, went to Miss Ruth France.

Announcement was made this week of the founding of a new fraternity, Tau Sigma Zeta, at Doane college. The following men are charter members: Clark A. Trobough, Clay Center, Lumir J. Kunel, Crete; Chester Parke, Trenton; Walter Spencer, Brewster; R. Jensen. The new fraternity fills a need made by the increase in registration among the men.

A burlesque on "Wells' Outline of History" was a feature of Thanksgiving day at Crete. Many students were obliged to remain at the college in order to attend classes on Friday. A joint Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. service in the morning, a special Thanksgiving dinner, and the play in the evening made the day a celebration even for these. The burlesque included a series of acts hitting off such famous events as the struggle for existence among animals now extinct, the flood, the assasination of Caesar, the discovery of America and so on, produced with a distinctly modern interpretation.

Miss Myrtle LeCompte, dean of women, returned to Doane college Monday evening after an absence of about two months occasioned by the illness and death of her father in Pierce City, Mo.

Dr. Eva Blake, national secretary of the Young Women's Christian association, who has spent six weeks at Doane in working out a "health program for college women," left Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving with friends in Lincoln and then proceed to Wonston-Salem, North Carolina, where she has her next engagement.

Girls of Gaylord hall gave a farewell reception for Dr. Blake Tuesday evening in the parlor of the dormitory. A skit was presented called "Before and After Dr. Blake," which picture vividly the sad condition of the dormitory before her arrival and its enlightened state after six weeks of intensive cultivation of health.

Chancellor and Mrs. S. B. Avery of the state university and Pres. and Mrs. John N. Bennett of Doane were the guests of Prof. and Mrs. J. E. Taylors at the latters' home in Crete for Thanksgiving day.

CONSUMATE DEAL FOR GAS COMPANY

Continental Firm Completes Negotiates to Take Over Lincoln Plant.

It is reported in Lincoln Saturday night that the first payment on the option for the sale of the Lincoln Gas and Electric company had been completed, and the first payment of the purchase price deposited by the Continental Gas and Electric company of Omaha Saturday afternoon. No direct verification of the report was received at the Lincoln office.

The sale had been pending for some time. With the deal completed the local plant becomes part of the Continental system, which embraces a number of important power plans and distributing centers throughout the state. Officials say that the addition to the Lincoln unit will prove of great benefit both to the company and local consumers.

R. H. Lee, president of the Nebraska company, and F. H. Brooks, treasurer, both of Omaha, are expected in Lincoln Monday, with eastern officials of the corporation. The Continental will probably take over the Lincoln Gas company the first of the year.

GIVE FOXWORTHY FAREWELL DINNER

Former Lincoln Manager Of Western Newspaper Union Made Vice-President.

To Be Honored Guest of Nebraska Editors At Local Chamber Friday.

One hundred and fifty Nebraska editors and their families and friends are expected to attend the farewell banquet to be given to George S. Foxworthy at the chamber of commerce at 6:30 p. m. Friday, December 8.

Mr. Foxworthy is well known in Lincoln, having been manager of the Lincoln branch of the Western Newspaper Union here for a number of years, and most recently manager of the branch at Omaha. Mr. Foxworthy has been made a vice-president in that company and will go to San Francisco to take over the management of the new office the company is opening there. This is to be the largest branch of the company and will serve the entire Pacific coast from the one house.

Traveling in the newspaper business in Nebraska for a considerable time, and always actively connected and interested in newspaper affairs, Mr. Foxworthy is exceptionally well known over the state and for that reason an unusually large attendance at the dinner is looked for, although it is to be purely of a social nature.

In addition to the dinner a program which, according to Ole Buck, field secretary for the Nebraska State Press association, is aimed to "keep the grids of the gridirons red hot" has been arranged by the program committee, of which Horace Davis is chairman.

Immediately after the dinner a series of cartoons of the life of Mr. Foxworthy, from the time he was born on the farm, while he was learning the printing trade, right down to the present day, will be shown on the screen. The cartoons will occupy possibly forty-five minutes and have been drawn by Oz Black, of the Lincoln Star.

Original songs, featuring Mr. Foxworthy, are also to be another feature of the program.

Among prominent newspaper men of the state who will attend he banquet are J. P. O'Furey, president of the Nebraska State Press association and editor of the Hartington News, Adam Beebe, editor of the Hastings Tribune, and Congressman-elect Edgar Howard, editor of the Columbus Telegram. Members of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce publicity committee are also expected to attend.

C. D. Traphagen will be toastmaster.

The invitation to attend has been sent to every publisher and newspaper man in the state and many reservations have already been made.

New System of Fat Reduction

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at that old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyon, who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements perfected by one of the foremost physicians. Now, from the same high authority, there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same, pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bedtime, they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle, and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertion and self-denial can not do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. A case—sufficient to bring results—is but one dollar.—Advertisement.

Late in the evening the party were guests at a dance given by the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity at the executive mansion, remaining for the supper dance given by Governor and Mrs. McKelvie the same evening.

While here, General Pershing spoke before the Kiwanis club at the chamber of commerce, emphasizing the value of a prepared citizen army, and urged the business men to take a more active interest in national problems.

He has speaking dates until Christmas, and will visit most of the important cities of the nation.

Lincoln Mothers' Clubs and Parent-Teacher Organizations Are Planned to Cope with Forces that May Lead their Children to Useless Lives and Wrecked, Unhappy Homes

BY JESSIE WATSON.

Rising up to cope with the forces that are heading children straight toward shiftlessness, immorality and crime and are laying the foundation for wrecked homes and ruined lives in this age when social evolution and revolution are taking place so rapidly that all the old foundation stones have crumbled away, is a system of influential organizations extending into all parts of the country, the Mothers' clubs and Parent-Teacher associations.

As far back as twenty-five years ago groups of Lincoln mothers met irregularly to discuss problems pertaining to school children. In later years various other groups were organized, but the movement spread slowly until recently. About a year ago the Lincoln organizations became affiliated with the National Congress of Mothers' clubs and Parent-Teacher associations, and this furnished a new impetus. There are now eighteen Mothers' clubs and Parent-Teacher associations affiliated with the Lincoln council. University Place has one which is not affiliated here.

One by one the Mothers' clubs of former days are being organized into Parent-Teacher associations, for people are realizing that the co-operation of the fathers is needed. There is a certain place in a child's life which the mother and teacher cannot fill; only the father can fill this place. The fathers have responded readily in their part of the movement. Most of the Parent-Teacher associations have an evening meeting about once a month and at that time have a lecture of vital interest to the fathers as well as the mothers. There are also afternoon meetings about once a month for the special benefit of mothers who could not leave their children to go at night.

Three Sided Meetings.

Each meeting has three parts: an entertaining program, a lecture or discussion, and a social time. The social hour is very imporeant. One mother said that through it she and her husband are able to get acquainted with the father and mother of every child their little girl plays with. Mary will come home all enthusiastic about a new playmate, but she is not allowed to associate with her until father and mother have made the acquaintance of the new playmate's parents. This can be very easily done during the social hour at the next Parent-Teacher association meeting.

The primary object of these organizations is to bring the parents into contact with the teachers so that they may co-operate with each other. Teachers used to be expected to visit in the homes of their pupils. This was considered a regular part of their duties. But now the teachers are loaded up with so much additional work and they have so many families represented in their classes that it would be impossible for each teacher to visit all the pupils in their homes. The Parent-Teacher association solves the problems by furnishing a way for teacher and patron to get acquainted.

The teachers have been quick to recognize the value of co-operation on the part of the parents and in most instances have been willing to go more than half-way. Parents are encouraged to go to the teacher and talk over the work of their children. Every effort is made to let the patrons know what the schools are doing. Some of the schools have set aside certain days for "open house" and sent special invitations to mothers and fathers to visit the class rooms at that time.

Material Aid.

By learning what the schools are doing and what the teachers are trying to accomplish the patrons have come to understand the needs of the school and in a number of instances have given material aid in equipment. The Hawthorne Parent-Teacher association raised money through entertainments and bazaars and bought a piano, a victrola and some pictures, and set aside a fund for the city hospital. Most of the schools expect to raise funds for the city hospital.

One of the associations in an outlying district has a library committee which takes out a hundred books from the city library every two weeks and brings them to the schoolhouse where the meetings are held so the parents can take them home and read them.

A wide range of subjects is being studied in the various districts. Judge W. M. Morning has spoken before most of the organizations on the problems of juvenile delinquency as they come up in the juvenile court and their causes. "My work is taking up the things in which you have failed," he tells the parents.

The Parent-Teacher association in one district made a special study of the juvenile court and then reported on the cases and their causes. The previous year that district had about ten of its children taken to juvenile court, but that year there was not one case of juvenile delinquency.

In some of the districts definite child welfare work is carried on. The parents in the association collect food and clothing for the needy children and the teachers place it where it is needed. This work is handled with the utmost delicacy; the teacher is the only one who knows who is receiving the help. Poverty-stricken families too proud to accept help from the Social Welfare society will take it in this way.

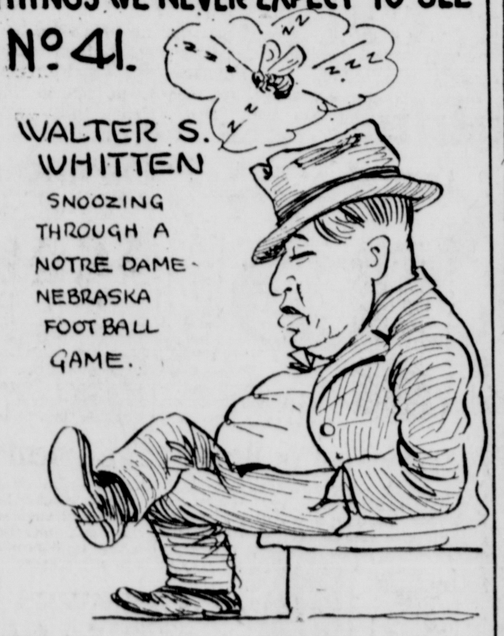

One of Many Phases.

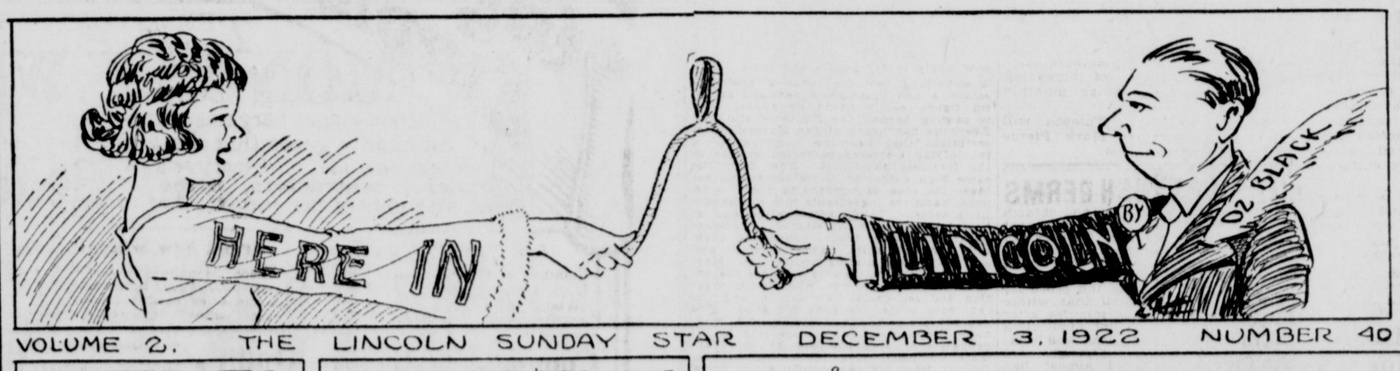

This is only one of many phases of child health work which a number of the organizations are carrying on. Many poorly nourished children come from homes where food is plentiful, but where through the ignorance or the negligence of the

Wives and Husbands Get Letters They Do Not Want the Other to See at the General Delivery Window in the Lincoln Post Office.

DECEIT, PATHOS AND CRIME ALL APPEAR HERE

A Fascinating, Mysterious Corner of a Busy World Where All Kinds of People Ask for the Letters That Carry All Kinds of Unguessed Tales.

BY LYNELLE GREER.

Human nature is sort of a funny proposition, you know, you can use your imagination, not only use it, but work it over time, and still perhaps all of your imaginings about folks will be wrong, and the fellow that you jot down on your mind for a crook, may be much nearer the saint than the person whose facial expression would give the impression he was hearing Gabriel's horn.

The one interesting place in the world to watch people, all kinds of them old, young and in betweens is the general delivery window at the postoffice in any medium sized town, the larger the better of course, for the more people, the more thrills.

While Lincoln is not the largest place in the country by any means, the general delivery window is not without its interesting bits! and one blessed with a good imagination could weave quite a story out of the people who call for their mail there. Take the busy little man, for instance, who has called been calling at the general delivery window several times daily during the past three or four days. Short, narrow shouldered, lean faced, and wearing glasses, all this together with his rather high pitched voice would give one the impression he might be a vender of toilet articles for women or something of the sort, and then we heard him asking:

"Any mail?"

"Not today."

"It won't be in until about 5 o'clock."

"What!"

"Sorry, but its true.'

"Well, my land! What am I going to do, I shall have to borrow some money to get out of town. But I wonder if I will have enough to buy a bean or two.'

Away He Went.

And away he went, first leaving a forwarding address. Whether he borrowed the money or bought his beans no one will ever know but himself. One would never take him for a crook because his mien was entirely to simple, but one never can tell. Then there was the mysterious looking woman in black, with a pearl necklace, and large pearl ear rings. Who was she? Where did she come from? What is she doing here and where was she going, were a few of the things that popped into the mind at a sight of her.

"Maybe she's an actress," came the thought. "No." said another thought, "she isn't, because she is much too large and not good enough looking." "Well," came thought number three, "Perhaps she is demonstrating somebody-or-other's baking powder. Making biscuits and the like."

But the yards and yards of fringe on her very good looking frock denied that she might make her living making biscuits, so we had to get another idea.

After a little talk with the clerk at the window, we decided that it might be much more interesting to have her some one's affinity or something like that. We learned from the clerk at the window that this wouldn't be at all an impossible suggestion, as the general delivery department has had its troubles with little affairs of this kind.

People With Many Names.

"It had to be stopped," said the clerk," because the government didn't care to aid and abet any such foolishness on the part of men and women. There would be people call here day after day, for months and months, asking for mail under an assumed name, and sometimes they would have three or four fictitious names and would ask for mail under each one at the same time, and then would try to cover it up by saying that they were getting mail for their friends, too. We knew better than this, but at that time we couldn't stop them.

"There was one instance that I remember very well, of a man and his wife, who both called at the general delivery window for their mail. I often wondered what would happen if they should ever meet there. The wife used her maiden name for her mail so that there would be no chance of the letters being mixed. One day they did meet at the window, but the husband waited until she came. He had evidently heard about her letters that she was getting, and regardless of what he might be doing, he intended to stop her little game. They met and they quarrelled. Finally they were divorced.

"Another thing we had to stop was little school girls calling at the window for mail they could not get at home, usually mail they were not supposed to get at all. Girls all of the way from fourteen years of age to eighteen would do this, and the number of them doing it was appalling. Finally I just told them when they came that I would not give them any more letters, that they would either have to leave a home address or the letters would be returned or sent to the dead letter office. Most of them never came back, but a few of them did, thinking that I was just bluffing, but I would not give them any mail, so they, too stopped coming."

With all of this informataion in mind, the next person calling at the window had a double interest.

It was a woman, slender, well dressed, pretty, with lovely, large, dark brown eyes. It may have been the imigination because of what we had just heard, or did she ask for her mail in a manner that made one think she was rather ashamed? She took the letter and looking around quickly, rushed out of the north entrance with it.

Her First Visit.

"Know her?" we asked the clerk.

"No, she has never been here before, but I know I have seen her some place. I rather think she is a resident. I don't like the way she acted, and if she comes again, I shall look her up."

The poor thing may have been an absolute stranger in town. She may have been embarrased because some one was watching her. Her letter may have been from her mohter, her sister, her husband or her lawyer. Perhaps she had just moved to Lincoln, and as yet had no definite street address. There are a lot of things she might have been, but was she? That was the question.

The next one who came to the window was a man, perhaps past middle age. He was tall and gaunt looking. He needed a shave, and he looked as if he needed something to eat. A shabby overcoat half concealed a clean looking shirt minus a collar. The cheeks were sunken, and a dull red flush made the already prominent cheek bones, more noticeable than ever.

The look in his eyes when he heard there was no mail made one want to sit down and write him a letter if it would do any good.

The clerk at the window laughed.

"Can't let your sympathy get the best of you here, you'd be feeling sorry for someone all of the time if you did. He did look more woe begone than the rest of them, but they are all terribly disappointed when they don't get a letter."

"He is Alright.."

Just then, a youth of about fourteen, overalls, and neavy sweater, warm and comfortable looking came swaggering up to the window, tossing peanuts into the air, and catching them in his mouth.

"Any mail for me?" in a very business like tone.

"No, sir, not today," came the equally business like reply.

After the lad had gone the clerk laughed.

"He is visiting in town, for a few days, and gets his mail here. I don't know why, for the novelty of it, I suppose. But he is all right." "Any mail for me?" came another query.

We waited for the expected "No," but instead out came, one-two-three-four letters and a package.

With a pleased smile, the man took his mail and rushed off. Traveling man, no question about that. No one could put him down for anything else. He looked as if he might be a salesman for some heating or plumbing establishment.

And so it goes, day after day, day after day, year in and year out, always new faces, always new surmisings, and always interesting, the general delivery window at the postoffice will always remain a fascinating, mysterious corner in a busy world.

University Notes

Dean O. J. Ferguson represented the college of engineering at the annual meeting of the engineering section of the association of Land Grant Colleges at Washington, D. C., Nov. 21 to 23 inclusive, which was attended by men from nearly two-thirds of the states.

Statistics on the cost of technical education in engineering schools during the last forty years seem to indicate that the cost to the institution per student decreased from 1880 to 1900, then increased until the period of the war, but is now decreasing again. On the other hand, the cost to the student has mounted almost continuously during this whole period and now stands at a higher point than ever. Several analyses were presented with suggestions as to how these expenses can be curtailed with the least loss of effectiveness in the educational program. It is recognized that the greatest variables lie within the personal expenses of the student, and several land-grant institutions are directing their students along lines which will held them materially in reducing these costs. Counting loss of salary on account of attendance at universities, it is estimated that the student pays out during his university course about twice the amount that the university expends on him.

In the line of improvement of engineering education, papers and discussions brought out the need for more accurate surveys of the preparation required by engineers as they come into the field of practice. It was pointed out that the society for the promotion of engineering education is taking steps to make a very thorough investigation of this field. There is undobtedly waste in the field of education as in the field of industry, and to whatever extent possible it should be eliminated.

Engineering experiment stations have been organized at more than half of the land-grant colleges to provide advances in the knowledge of engineering materials and practices. Some of the work accomplished these stations is of a type which will completely revolutionize practice in the fields investigated. For example, it is predicted that the commercial development of coking processes studied at the engineering experiment station of the University of Illinois will make the burning of raw bitumious coal a thing of the past. Contracts are now being drawn for putting the process upon a commercial basis. Similarly, studies in road materials and designs have saved millions of dollars in the present highway development work and bid fair to increase this saving very substantially. Taken as a whole, the meeting was full of discussions that are of direct application and value to engineering schools.

GIFTS FOR XMAS

Xmas time—the grand old time of the year when good will and generosity hold the stage. Everybody loves to give Christmas presents, but the selection of those gifts has become more and more of a problem. How about Aunt Betsy, sister Mary, brother Bob, mother and dad?

Stuffy street cars, windy snow and ice-covered streets, crowded stores, tired and impatient clerks—these all contribute to take the pleasure out of Christmas giving.

Picture yourself in the quiet and comfort of your own home selecting your Xmas gifts. This is where the Fuller Brush Man comes in. He helps you select appropriate presents for your family and friends. He helps you arrange sets which can be added to from year to year. He delivers the brushes at a convenient time, nicely wrapped in decorated holly boxes already to send or give away.

This is the reason the Fuller Brush Man is welcomed in every home as Xmas time approaches. Next time he calls ask to see beautiful photographs of the Ivory Sets of Fuller personal brushes—the ideal Xmas gifts.

Nebraska Sororities Deplore Use of Fair, Young Co-eds as Solicitors for Many Drives

The members of the sororities at the University of Nebraska feel that too much of their time this fall has been called for by various campus and city "drives." That these activities have interfered too much with studies, that sorority members have not "unlimited time at their disposal," and that the continual demands made upon students who live in sorority houses will, if it continues, force members to live elsewhere, are among the statements in a resolution passed this week by the Pan-Hellenic association, composed of representtives of all the sororities. The resolution follows:

"The Pan-Hellenic association of the University of Nebraska prefers to take no formal stand as regards the participation of its members in the 'drives' or the solicitation of funds from its members in sorority houses. It wishes, however, to remind the public that the women members of university sororities are not made of money, and that they have not unlimited time at their disposal. They have given freely of both time and money in the past, for all kinds of public causes.

Fair Young Solicitors.

"Already during the present semester they have sold tickets for men's athletics, flowers for veterans, secured subscriptions for publications, and campaigned for various humane and relief organizations. But there are limits to what they can do. Many appeals have been received by the officers of the association, both from members and from their parents, for some sort of protection from the continual demands made upon the members of sororities. During the present semester there has been nearly a drive a week.

"In these days fraternity and sorority houses are the first to be visited, when funds are to be solicited or when drives are to be carried on. If this continues, it will become prohibitive for many to live in these houses. Those who most need their time and money will feel that they must room where the calls upon them will be fewer.

"Sorority women have done their share—possibly more than their share—in helping in public work, both on and off the campus. They have been glad to do so, and they hope to do so with no less readiness in the future. But they owe it to themselves to keep the largest share of their time for their studies, and they owe it to their parents not to call upon them for an endless succession of subscriptions. The association has no wish to change its attitude or to refuse to lend a hand to the support of good causes. It wishes merely to ask the public not to make too many or too large demands upon the various organizations which make up its membership."

Nebraska Unit of Society of Mechanical Engineers Lists Ways of Saving Coal

A Nebraska State Section of the American society of Mechanical Engineers is being organized at the University of Nebraska. Prof. J. W. Haney of the department of Mechanical Engineering is acting as chairman until the organization is perfected. Members of this organization carry on investigations of problems of public interest and disseminate the results for public benefit. The latest results made public are "rules for saving coal in the home." The following rules are approved and distributed by the Fuels Division of the society:

Preparation of the Equipment.

(a) See that the grates are in very good order.

(c) Cover steam and water pipes to prevent unnecessary radiation.

(d) Provide suitable clean-out tools for boiler flues.

(e) Prepare for supplementary heat in mild weather, fire-places, gas logs kerosene heaters, etc.

(f) Prevent air leakage as far as possible by weather strips and the storm windows.

(g) Provide for re-circulating air in hot air furnaces by convenient slides in the pipes.

(h) Arrange coal bins so that two kinds of fuel can be kept separate if desired.

Kinds of Fuel.

(a) Stove and nut anthracite are ideal fuels for heating homes. Scarcity and cost of these fuels will restrict their use in the future. Small sizes of anthracite should be used whenever possible.

(b) Gas coke in connection with anthracite pea or buckwheat coal. This is an excellent combination, as the fire will keep well, and will give heat when required.

(c) Block wood in conjunction with anthracite pea or buckwheat coal. This is a good combination where wood is available, equal to coke for producing heat, but requiring a little more attention.

(d) Bituminous coal can be used in most furnaces designed for hard coal. The exceptions will be found in cases where the flue passages are small and not easily cleaned. Bituminous coal demands more attention, and unless this is given will give out less heat. Best results will be found where the furnace is rather large for the house, so that the fire does not have to be pushed.

Management of the Furnace.

1. Rules for burning anthracite coal (large size.)

(a) Carry a deep bed of fuel—at least level with fire doors.

(b) Shake the grate to remove the ashes and lower the fuel bed but stop when the first live coals appear.

(c) Fresh fuel should be spread evenly over the entire grate area. A heavy firing, say 6 to 8 in. deep, can be made if desired and will last for 6 to 8 hours. For quick kindling, the fire bed shoruld be made fairly hot before adding fresh fuel.

(d) After firing keep the dampers wide open until blue flame appears, then check off the draft as much as necessary to keep the fire burning at desired rate. The proper setting of the dampers must be learned by experience for each furnace, this is because of the variation in the draft available for different installations.

2. Rules for burning coke and the anthracite pea or buckwheat.

(e) Carry a deep bed of fuel—even above the level of the fire door.

(f) Shake the grate to remove the ashes and lower the fuel bed but stop when the first live coals appear.

(g) Spread a thin layer of anthracite over the entire grate and allow a few minutes for this fuel to ignite. Next fill the fire pot with coke, and allow this to burn until blue flame appears, then add another layer of anthracite.

(h) After firing and seeing that the charge is ignited, check off the draft to the desired point for slow burning.

(i) When banking the fire for the night, use less coke and more anthracite but otherwise fire in the same manner.

(j) Anthracite pea or buckwheat can often be used alone with success. This will happen when the draft is unusually good and the furnace is amply large. Small size anthracite ignites slowly. It is best to fire one-half of the grate at a time, allowing the first half of the charge to ignite before adding the second half. Small sizes may be used in the fall and the spring if not in the winter.

3. Rules for burning wood and anthracite pea or Buckwheat.

(k) Follow the rules for coke and anthracite, substituting block wood for coke. It is highly important to see that the fuel is properly ignited and giving off flame before closing off the drafts.

4. Rules for burning bituminous coal.

(l) Bituminous ,or soft coal, will, as a rule, give out less heat than the anthracite when fired in the ordinary residence heater. Hence more attention will usually be required when using soft coal.

(m) A deep fuel bed is desirable, also, as a rule, more draft by the dampers.

(n) After the fuel is partly burned, more heat can be obtained by breaking up the fire bed with the hoe or poker if the fuel bed is caked.

(p) Preliminary to firing a new charge, push the burned fuel to the back or sides of the fire box, heaping it high up on the sides of the fire box walls. Fire fresh fuel into the hole in the hot fuel bed, making it level with the heaped up burning fuel.

(q) After firing check the draft to make the fire burn slowly, setting the dampers as found best by experience.

(r) A large charge of soft coal will burn slowly for several hours giving out moderate heat. If more heat is demanded, it can be secured by the breaking up the partly ignited mass with the fire tools.

(s) A little air should be admitted through the slides in the fire door when burning bituminous coal.

CHADRON NORMAL

Miss McClenahan, state secretary for the college Y. W. C. A., gave a very interesting talk to the students on the Y. W. meeting in Pekin last May. She discussed the help of the Y. W. in the schools and spoke of the students whom the United States sends to Europe to study in their schools and spread our customs.

After Thanksgiving there will be a sale of toys, photo scrap books and recipe card filing cases in the Normal art shop. Prices will range from 5 to 50 cents each.

The story-telling class told Thanksgiving stories in Miss Briggs, Miss Driscoll and Miss Cromwell's rooms this week. These hours are much enjoyed by the children in the training school.

Dean Stockdale and Professor Bright were in the North Platte valley during study center week last week-end.

MIDLAND COLLEGE.

Prof T. Amos Jones, head of the vocal department, assisted in the Harvest contata given by the First English Lutheran church of Benson at the 4 o'clock vesper service Sunday afternoon, November 26. In the evening Prof. Jones sang two selections at the Kountze Memorial church in Omaha.

BARTER REPLACES CASH TRANSACTIONS.

Nothing more strikingly reveals the financial situation in Germany than the experience of Fred Thomas, vice-president of the First National bank of Omaha. Mr. Thomas had just received an appeal from Germany for funds to pay off a mortgage on a big mansion in Germany. He reached in his vest pocket and pulled out the money to pay it. It took just $13.33 in American money to pay off an 80,000 mark mortgage on the German mansion.

Mr. Thomas, who resided for a time in Welmar, Germany, is planning to send the money.

Writing for aid, Dr. Franz Leniger explains that before the war he bought the building for 140,000 marks subject to a mortgage of 80,000 marks. Some days ago Leniger writes that he was informed by a member of the German lawmaking body that the banks were planning to bring in a bill providing that interest on mortgages must be paid in gold. He expressed a desire to free the house from the mortgage of 80,000 marks, which in American money today calls for $10 to $12.

Mr. Thomas figured that when Dr. Leniger bought the house, the 120,000 marks which he paid down were worth, $32,000. Now they are worth $23.33. The mortgage for 80,000 marks amounted to $18,400, in 1916 and $13.33 now.

News from Germany, according to Mr. Thomas, indicates that barter has taken the place of cash transactions wherever practicable. "I have been told that the Weimer board governing the agricultural schools at Triptis and Marksuji has fixed the tuition for the winter term in rye instead of money. An electric company at Auma has announced that it will receive, instead of cash, ten eggs, three pounds of wheat flour and a quarter of a centner of potatoes for each killowatt hour of electricity consumed."

THE HARDING CANDIDACY.

Announcement by Herbert Hoover, a member of President Harding's cabinet, that the president will be a candidate for re-election in 1924 should settle the question whether his name will go before the voters for approval or rejection.

Mr. Hoover is in a position to know and it is hardly probable that the cabinet officer would have made the announcement without consulting his chief. Mr. Hoover is more than a cabinet officer. It is unofficially reported that the secretary of commerce occupies a position of trust and confidence which no other member of the cabinet holds and that it is Hoover who is actually promulgating the policies of the present administration.

President Harding has a little more than a year in which to regain popular favor. One may use the word "regain," because there is no question as to the general dissatisfaction in America with the present administration. In the face of the last election it is doubtful if Mr. Harding could even secure the nomination within his own party ranks. It may be that before another year rolls around, conditions may have improved sufficiently to restore Mr. Harding to popular favor. Under present conditions it would appear to be a rather hopeless task.

The announcement foreshadows unquestionably a great deal of activity on the part of the regular republicans to break up the revolt which is now brewing within the ranks of the republican party. LaFollette, Borah, and Johnson are not going to be allowed to put over the plan for a progressive bloc, and its ultimate threat of a contest for leadership of the republican party. It is safe to predict that the demands of the Middle West and the other agricultural sections of America will receive more consideration from the present administration than they received in the early months of the Harding regime.

The president may continue his program of attempting to force the ship subsidy measure down the throats of congress. If he does, Mr. Hoover's announcement of Harding's intention to again be a candidate reveals qualities of daring which one has not had an opportunity to see before. With the widespread opposition to the ship subsidy extending to every section of the country it would appear that the president's determination to force that measure through constituted political suicide.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

Jacksonville, Ill., is the beneficiary of an experiment in local government which, while profitable to the taxpayers is not expected to meet the approval of city officials the country over.

A mayor and council, elected on a platform of no pay for their services, a city attorney who serves for $1 a year and free extra policing, free improvements donated by citizens, free labor in sinking wells for a water supply, have made the city almost free from taxes. This plan follows a period of financial troubles, registered warrants and failing municipal credit for the city which boasts a population of about 6,500.

What possibilities the plan holds! Carried to is logical conclusion it would mean free teachers, free street sweeping and the prohibition enforcement division might show a profit. Jacksonville has the panacea for all our municipal ills. Something for nothing, that's a recipe for city government that has probably never been tried before.

NEBRASKA FARMERS OPPOSE SUBSIDY.

The Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation is the latest organization to join in the protest against the passage of President Harding's proposed ship subsidy. Wiring to Nebraska congressmen, Secretary Lute calls attention to the resolution which that organization adopted in opposition to the subsidy.

It states the case so effectively that it is reproduced:

"We have subsidized the railroads by the passage of the Esch-Cummins railroad bill; have subsidized the manufacturers with the Fordney-McCumber high tariff bill and now it is proposed to subsidize the shipping trust with a ship subsidy. The so-called protection of the farmer by the tariff is only "paper" protection. I know of course that the farmers of England at this time are asking for protection on farm products saying that American farm products are shipped into England cheaper than they can raise them. But in England the consumers far outnumber the producers and they do not produce a surplus of farm products in England will probably be voted down but in America where the supply of farm products is far in excess of consumption, protection is only protection on paper."

It seems that the American farmer has cut his eye teeth when it comes to protection buncombe.

CHARGE IT TO THE BORROWER

"Every business move made upon the assumption that war could usher in a period of great and permanent prosperity was miscalculated," George E. Roberts, vice president of the National City bank of New York told the Academy of political Science meeting there last Friday.

Mr. Roberts was discussing the fall of agricultural prices and the grievances of the rural communities of America.

He predicates his deductions upon the findings of the joint commission of congress upon the agricultural problem, reporting as follows:

"1—That the expansion of bank loans in rural districts during the period of inflation ending June 1920, was relatively greater than in the industrial sections taken as a whole.

"2—That the action of the federal reserve board and the federal reserve banks during the fifteen months preceding April 28, 1921, did not produce a greater curtailment of bank loans in the rural district than in the financial and industrial sections.

"3—Credit was not absorbed by the financial centers at the expense of rural communities for the purpose of speculative activities.

"4—That the pressure of the forces of liquidation and depression in the agricultural sections was reflected in a reduction of deposits. This reduction of deposits, particularly demand deposits, was relatively larger in the agricultural and semi-agricultural counties of the United States than in the industrial counties."

There are a great many Nebraskans who cannot agree with Mr. Roberts in his findings and the findings of the congressional committee. The experience is too recent. In its interpretation of the federal reserve banks ruling, the Kansas City district more rigidly enforced the measures looking towards liquidation than any other district. This situation was repeatedly called to the attention of congress—notably by Senator Owen of Oklahoma, one of the farmers of the federal reserve bank act, and whose constituency is a part of the Kansas City district. The fact remains that the cattle interests and the agriculturists of Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado and other states in the Kansas City district felt the pinch more acutely than any other section in the United States.

What has happened is a matter of history and can't be helped. Mr. Roberts makes a few suggestions which may be helpful.

"If I wanted to state in the fewest possible words an explanation of the agricultural distress of the last few years, I would put it in three words, 'too much borrowing.' The wholesome fear of debt which was prevalent when some of us were young has been largely dissipated by the rising prices of the last twenty-five years. Men have been led to believe that the way to get ahead was by the use of borrowed money, and the more rapid the margins on which they operated, the more rapid their progress would be. The truth is that the number of men able to use borrowed money advantageously always has been comparatively small.

"In speaking of the indebtedness of the farmers, I do not wish to be understood as a class as more imprudent or reckless than other people, including business men generally. They did just what most business men did, and the combined effect of this general policy of inflation was to overdo the use of credit, create an abnormal price level and bring about a disastrous reaction."

In other words Mr. Roberts is merely preaching the old sermon of thrift. He and other enlightened business men and farmers believe in the use of credit insofar as it can be handled properly. He does not approve of the general reckless extension of credit to schemes which now bring a smile of amusement. He believes that 160 acres of land properly farmed is better than 320 acres poorly farmed.

There are dangers in the agricultural legislation which is being proposed but Mr. Roberts won't convert the middle west to the idea that the only solution of the agricultural problem lies in the orderly working out of economic laws. Lower freight rates on farm products, for one thing, must be given the farmer before he can receive an even chance with other industries in America. Moreover some of the existing governmental agencies, including the interstate commerce commission, which in the name of standardization of rates has caused a great deal of trouble to the agricultural sections, must have their wings clipped.

There is a side to this farm problem. The farmer may rest assured that hereafter his city cousin will look with more sympathy and understanding on the problems of rural America. He may rest assured that the numbers of mouths in the world which must be fed are constantly increasing while the available land for farming is constantly decreasing in fertility. That in itself will tend to correct the sharp decline in farm prices if time is to solve the problem. And there is going to be some freight rate legislation.

MR. FLYNN'S PROMOTION.

The announcement that E. Flynn, for several years general superintendent of the Nebraska district of the Burlington with headquarters and home in Lincoln, has been made general manager of the lines west and would consequently move to Omaha, brought combined regret at the city's loss and pleasure in his success.

Mr. Flynn took more than the usual active part in Lincoln affairs and his promotion takes from the business life of the city. If there is any good news for Lincoln in the change, it is the knowledge that Mr. Flynn is removing no further than Omaha and will be a frequent visitor here and that his successor, L. B. Lyman, who is known personally by hundreds of Burlington employes here, is one of the most popular officials the Burlington has.

The Star extends good wishes to Mr. Flynn and a welcome to Mr. Lyman.

Mr. Grouch is quite exultant over the fact that all of the alcohol is not being used for the lowly purpose of filling automobile radiators.

WHY NOT WRITE THAT OLD FRIEND.

Do you ever write your old friends, or go and see them since they have met with reverses?

You are keeping away from them fearing they might ask some favor.

Isn't this an unmanly spirit?

Perhaps just the words of encouragement you could give might put some persons on the way to recovery from their present shaky footing.

The right advice from you might put a sound foundation under them and start them again on the right road.

They might be wavering between two courses; consultation with you might help them to decide which is the better of the two.

You have not done much good in the world, have you?

Why not accept the opportunities you have to help someone?

Why be so selfish in your life?

Why not give a helping hand to others that they may get more happiness and prosperity out of life.

You will feel better for having done so and it may be that unless you do what you can, no other will do it—it's your job.

WHEN THE PARLOR FURNITURE IS MOVED.

Do you feel all out of sorts when you go home and find the furniture and other articles in the home changed about?

Husbands generally want things to be in the same order all the time.

But many huhbands are not home enough to have as much chande of becoming tired of appearances as wives do.

Many wives are ho metwenty-four hours a day, many of which they are alone, so it is not suprising that they get tired of seeing every piece of furniture, book case, chair, couch or rug in the same old place.

In the same old spot, day after day, and year after year, they have a right to get tired and want a change once in a while.

They have a desire to see how things would look changed in different positions and they know that everything wears better and more evenly if changed about occasionally, so it is after all, economy.

But most husbands think this is tomfoolery because in their offices and shops the furniture and machines are kept in nearly the same position year after year.

In the office or shop there is not the personal, close interest that a wife bestows on her home.

In England's Ability to Meet Internal Problems and World Crises Lies Europe's One Hope

BY SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

LONDON—This winter will see widespread renewal of revolutionary effort in many countries of Europe. In England it has already began, with unemployment riots led by criminals and anarchists preying upon honest workmen who are in a state of destitution owing to the stagnation of British trade, and inciting them to disorderly demonstrations. In Germany bread riots and looting have already happened in many cities. In Italy a counter revolution by the middle classes and aristocrats against the destructive violence of the Communists has won a sensational victory but there are seething fires only half smothered which will break out again. In Russian, where communism has been abandoned in practice and where new laws permitting private trading have led to a corrupt form of capialism, some of the older communists are getting restive and are plotting by secret propaganda and bribery for the overthrow of European society outside the frontiers of Russia in order that their gospel may be fulfilled.

The chief author of this campaign which reached as far as England is Radek, the Jew, a very brilliant and humorous ruffian whom I met in the Kremlin at Moscow, where I had a long talk with him, or rather, listened to a long monologue from him. A man of fair complexion with long brown hair, all round his face, he is like a cross between an anthropoid ape and the ancient British mariner; but behind his big spectacles there shines the light of keen and cynical intelligence. There is nothing he does not know about European politics and their secret mainsprings. He knew more than I did about the British foreign office and its personality. He has agents in every country, from England to Afghapistan, who report to him on political and economic conditions and keep him in touch with revolutionary societies, movements and individuals. He explained to me quite frankly that as long as Great Britain refused to recognize the soviet republic, Russia under Lenin would regard that country as its chief enemy and would stir up trouble against the British government in the Mohammedan world in any part of the British Empire where there was unrest and in London itself. But he was willing to call off all this and establish a frendly alliance, so he said, in return for recognition and financial aid. That was his price. So far he has not received it and under a conservative government in England he is not likely to do so for a long time. Radek is therefore renewing his activities and gingering up his agents.

Interest In Germany.

He is particularly interested in Germany. For some time Russian Communists eased off their revolutionary propaganda in that country in the hope of a close economic alliance which would yield good fruit to Russia by German loans and manufactures. Now they see that, owing to Germany's desperate financial plight, there is not much hope of immense loans, and Radek's old ambition of creating a Red Germany is revived. He sees shrewdly enough that this winter when German workers are short of food and coal when their paper wages drop down in purchasing power and prices rise higher against them, there will be a tide of discontent and distress which will lead many of them to seek relief by way of violence. Radeck of course exaggerates his own importance, like all fanatics, and sees as a result of his propaganda those food riots and unemployed demonstrations which have a natural and inevitable origin in social misery. It is my own conviction that Moscow counts for very little in all this except as the red symbol of revolt and destruction. Symbols are not without power and it was significant that the only openly avowed communist elected to British house of commons impediatel dispatched a telegram to Lenin proclaiming that his capture of Motherwell, as his constituency is called, was a victory for Moscow. What these men who prdclaim communistic ideals do not understand or know is that Moscow has utterly abandoned communism as its own law of life and that after the ghastly failure of that experiment which brought Russia to hopeless ruin it is trying to build up private trading based on private property. Its shops are filled with articles of luxury for the wives of bolshevist officials, restaurants are open again for those who have the luck to grab the most paper money and a new Bourgeoise has arisen far removed from the majority of hungry folk. An appeal to Moscow is a sham and fraud. Nevertheless, to many people sullen with their wretched state because of the breaking down of world trade and the consequent loss of work and wages, there is still, if they have never been to Russia, an unholy lure in that experiment of bolshevism by which all classes were dragged down to the same level, though they were not pulled up to a higher level. They fail to understand and refuse to believe that violent attack against society as it now exists will not produce any higher standard of life for themselves or create work and wages for all.

England's Serious Problems.

The position in Great Britain is uncommonly serious. It is difficult to guess how the new British government can in any way solve this problem by its present schemes of relief. There are one million and a half unemployed in England, Scotland and Wales, most of whom are city workers in congested areas. That does not take into account the enormous numbers of women who were receiving high wages during the war and now have none. The condition of these people in cities like Glasgow, Livernool, Manchester and London is most miserable, for despite unemployed relief through local rates they have barely enough to keep life together. The housing question is acute, for there is an immense shortage of houses and thousands of families in these cities are without decent accommodation and are living in overcrowded rooms like refugees. After all those war promises of homes for heroes it is no wonder that they feel bitter and indignant.

The new strength of the labor party in the house of commons will keep this question at boiling pitch. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the opposition, whom know rather well, and Phillip Snowden, the most intellectual of the labor members, with a passionate soul in his frail, crippled body, are determined to use this question of unemployment as their chief weapon against the conservative government, and it is a dangerous and deadly weapon. Every word they utter will be heard by masses of men impatient for work and wages, becoming more and more bitter as the months pass, while they find no redress for their grievances. Bonar Law's placid promises of government sympatny will not be good enough to soothe that discontent.

Painful Realities.

But this new government in England is faced by the painful reality that there is no cure for unemployment except by the slow process of European recovery, so that British trade flows out again into its old channels. No readjustments of taxation, no increase of doles to unemployed men will be any remedy unless the purchasing power of Europe is restored, and that cannot be done for a long time yet. One cannot expect working men to understand that. Anyhow they don't understand that their state is due to world exhaustion after the war, the downfall of foreign exchanges and the unsettled question of German reparations. It is a question whether governments in Europe can hold their people quiet long enough to tide over the next ten years while this process of economic revival is at work.

It is also problematical whether there is to be any real settlement of international relations before fresh conflicts happen. Our peace with Turkey has not much permanency. Already Bulgaria, Servia and other Balkan nations have formed a military alliance against Turkey in Europe, and once again that part of the world becomes a seething quadron of racial fears and passions. But what will happen between France and Germany with Russia in the background is the enormous query of the future which will decide the fate of Europe. A hungry Germany will not be tolerant of French demands for greater payments. If France decides to exert sterner pressure for fulfillment of her claims, Germany will be swept by anarchy and internal strife. Then there will be a bad lookout for British working men, dependent on foreign trade for their livelihood. Those are grave dangers. Not to face them, to pretend they do not exist, is sheer cowardice and folly.

The Greatest Need.

Great Britain's best hope is in strong statesmanship which will exert all its influence to make some kind of reconciliation on economic lines between Germany and France. Bonar Law is going to stake his whole life on that endeavor, with Lord Curzon as his chief adviser. It is an adventure which will need infinite tact and diplomacy in regard to France. Great Britain's next hope is on the assurance that the most prominent labor leaders and the majority of their supporters believe in constitutional reform and not in revolution.

Ramsay MacDonald, that long, lean, dour Scotsman, with the big black Highland eyes in which humor and melancholy are mingled, is not going to be swept off his feet by the clamor of demagogues trying to force the pace behind him. He has the courage to face his supporters as well as his political opponents and will keep them to heel if they try to bark too loudly. But there are going to be some lively times in the old Mother of Parliaments, and outside that house of debate there will be the murmur of great mobs of sullen and despairing men with that clamor for work and wages which cannot be ignored.

Alaska's Greatest Problem is Transportation

BY BOB BECKER.

Article 15.

Separated by foreign land as well as by water from the United States, Alaska's problem of transportation is vital and urgent in its relation to the development of the territory. Adequate steamship service and the lower freight rates are absolutely necessary if the operation of the new government railroad is to be a success. But how lower rates are going to be secured is a question that has baffled practical minds for many years.

The curse of Alaska according to the steamship companies, is no return cargo. Everything going in but nothing coming out. Ships sailing from Seattle or Vancouver go north more or less well loaded during the summer months but except for several cargoes of salmon they have practically nothing to bring back from the territory. There are no cargoes of grain, no loads of coal or merchandise. During the winter days ships making Cordova, Valdez and the points to the westward are loaded light even on their "goingin" trips As a result of this uneven transportation situation the steamship companies say that they must maintain the present freight rates in order to make any money so today you find Alaskans complaining from one end of the territory to the other about the prohibitive freight rates which are sapping the very life from the territory.

Three steaemship companies, two American and one Canadian, serve Alaska as common carriers. The Canadian line is devoted primarily to tourist travel and trade with the Yukon and last summer handled more than 3,000 people who wished to see some of the wonders of the Northland. This company operates some beautiful steamers on the Alaska run and catering especially to tourists has captured the bulk of the northern travel. As they do not run boats to the westward that part of Alaska now being served by the new government railroad feels that it is not going to get much of the tourist trade unless improvements are made in the present steamship service by the two American companies. And this is another cause for complaint against the transportation situation today. Unless adequate boat service is instituted for tourist travel the government railroad cannot hope for any appreciable amount of business of this port.

After landing on Alaska soil you find the question of land transportation even more serious than the problem of water travel. Here in Alaska all dressed up with some place to go no way to get there. They have a railroad to travel on, to be sure, but no wagon or automobile roads to speak of connecting with the railroad. Roads and more roads are needed and until they are built vast areas in the interior will remain a wilderness, and resources of gold and copper untouched. A railroad operating in a country devoid of roads and trails will obviously never pay and if Uncle Sam expects to see his new Alaska highway return anything on the investment he must be prepared to spend millions on good roads. The building of these as well as trails is being pushed by the Alaska Road Commission with territorial co-operation but their appropriation is small compared to the amount needed. The Bureau of Forestry with commendable industry has secured an finds for roads in national forests and they are also constructing highways but the program of road building, even with these two agencies active, is not near as comprehensive as Alaskan's want it if the territory is to be aided quickly and materially in its development.

Although Alaska's progress has been retarded by a combination of governmental neglect, and economic causes due to the war and decrease in placer mining, the lack of transportation is fundamental.

Residents of the interior have mushed dogs over winter trails, these many years when they feel they ought to have had roads to travel upon. With good automobile roads through the territory, with the world given a chance to learn that Alaska is not a monumental iceberg but a land of flowers and sunshine in the summer months and with Uncle Sam willing to extend a helping hand Alaska feels that it will increase in population and productivenss and again take it splace in the sun.

Little Bobbie's Pa

I was reeding in the paiper about a Turney at Law wich charged ten thousand dollers for a Fee & I asked Pa what was a Fee.

Well, Bobbie, sed Pa, a Fee is the naim of the hunk of Doe, sed Pa, wich the party of the first part, wich is the Cly-ent, gives to the party of the Second part, wich is the Turney at Law, sed Pa.

Is ten thousand dollers a whopper of a Fee? I sed.

Not if the Turney can git it, Bobbie, sed Pa. That wich we can git away with in this life, Bobbie, sed Pa, never gits us into vary deep water, sed Pa. Few peepul git ten thousand dollers in one chunk, Bobbie, sed Pa, excep vary rich men & bank robbers, sed Pa, but now & then we find a grate sturgeon or a grate lawyer wich can take ten thousand or such a matter, sed Pa.

I beleeve wen I grow up I will be a Turney at Law, I sed.

I guess I will be a Big Leeg pitcher and hold the other teem to 3 Meesly Hits.

QUARRELING WITH OUR BREAD AND BUTTER

Heaping upon the trade of the country still further burdens of legislation the treasury now holds that the anti-dumping law included in the emergency tariff act is still valid and must be enforced. Some had supposed that the anti-dumping law had passed out of existence with the adoption of the new tariff, and the news that on the contrary it is still in effect must be as unwelcome to the rank and file of the community as would be the enactment of a new statute to this effect.

In a general way, the application of the anti-dumping laws has been more severe in the case of Canada than in that of any other country. Canada being our nearest neighbor, we have known more about her internal legislation and have been inclined to retaliate and quarrel with her more fully and freely than with any other notion. The result is to bring about a fuller measure of anti dumping provisions, retaliatory duties and other similar provisions, and to cause abundant opportunity for tariff and other friction than in relations with others.

Why should we quarrel with our bread and butter? Canada is our second customer, one whose trade is worth more than that of an equal body of consumers, north or south, in the whole world. Our policy toward her has always been grossly unjust in tariff way, and now we seek to goad her on to further quarrels and commercial warfare, to the detriment of our own business and, of course, of our own profit.—New York Journal of Commerce.

BRYAN AND LAW ENFORCEMENT.

Will Charlie Bryan believe in law enforcement? Why ask such a funny question? Of course Charlie Bryan believes in law enforcement. He doesn't believe in your electing county officials to enforce the law and paying them salaries for so doing, and then be forced to have a horde of state sheriffs go out over the state enforcing the law that ought to be enforced by the local officials. There is sense to this idea of his, too. And so we now predict that the sheriffs and county attorneys of Nebraska are going to have something to do the next two years at least. And—if they don't do it, then their resignations had better be handed in.—Blue Hill Leader.

HOMER BALMY TAKES PEN IN HAND

By L. H. Robbins

Who Needs a Detective?

William J. Flynn, Esq.,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Since you stand at the head and shoulders of the detective profession, I hasten to write you that I am both a square as well as upright young man leading a blameless life, and I have practically decided to engage in the practice of criminal detection as soon as I can secure an engagement with some leading agency.

On every hand I see youths no better sociably than myself, and whom I am just as well educated as, who are swiftly hewing out money hand over hand in rose-hued lines such as sympathetic sloe gin and repainted autos.

But on the other hand, thank fortune, there are still a few of the cream of my generation who are not so anxious to make a quick fortune but that they love their country more. And what our country needs most at this time, Mr. Flynn, as I view the situation, are master minds to unselfishly go to work and solve her various mysterious crimes, instead of all the time engineering the same, as we read in the paper, and getting everybody wild wondering who did it.

As regard my experiences in this field, we recently had quite a crime in our section, a prominent and rich family being robbed out of $50,000 worth of valuable jewelry whilst giving a swell party or dance, and it was simply a crime the way none of the guests at this function or dance would say anything and let somebody win the $5,000 reward. So after a month having transpired and nobody much arrested, I made a personal investigation of the strange case.

I do not know as you will agree with me, Mr. Flynn, but it is my theory that a detective, the first thing he does at the scene of a crime, he should look for some clue, such as a handkerchief, we will say, or perhaps possibly some trinket which the guilty party carelessly left behind them to give it away who they were. This is invariably done almost always, I have noted, in the criminal works which I have studied by Sherlock Holmes and other noted authors.

And the next thing, he should hang around the fatal spot, and pretty soon he maybe will spot the author of the crime hanging around looking for the handkerchief or else trinket, as the case may be, or maybe the guilty wretch will be lingering near the site of his deed simply for old time's sake.

It was a Sunday, which I figured would be the time when the guilty villian who figured in this case would revisit the scene of his wicked work, as it was a holiday and he would not be working.

Lo and believe me, Mr. Flynn, fully several hundred people were congesting around and over this rich family's premises in the suburbs when I arrived at the scene or spot, and all of them were looking so mysterious and guilty, besides looking this way and that for clues and giving each other suspicious looks, until you would have said the whole crowd ought to have been locked up as principals in the crime on general priciples, I am sure.

Just as I was formulating this hypothesis, however, some of the guiltiest-looking ones unfortunately closed in on me with clubs in their hands, and took me in a car into town to the police station, and it took me the rest of the day to prove to them that I had been innocently at a movie with a young lady friend the night of the robbery.

I should have known that the authorities would not enjoy an amateur landing the reward, so I should have disguised myself as a bootlegger or something so as to avoid them noticing me, I presume. At any rate, my maiden detective effort cannot be rated as entirely a complete success, to be perfectly frank with you.

But this sad affair as well as others have caused me to do quite some thinking, Mr. Flynn, and it strikes me that the waste resulting in our midst is a sad mistake.

Look at all that lot of people that Sunday prowling around a rich family's suburban lots when they might have been usefully at home giving their wife a rest with the baby or sawing up the clothes-posts to fit the hot air furnace.

Look at the miles of columns in our three end to end, which might have been filled with sport items, comical pictures and other healthy subjects, instead of photos of the various parties who were guests at this swell party or dance, and pieces by cycle-analysts telling how the society lady who was unfortunately robbed was partial to diamonds and hence some baseball fan in her set might know something.

My father got the grip from going out in the cold in his shirt sleeves every night for about four weeks, there, looking for the newsboy, and which he is not well from yet. He let the new tariff and the war in Turkey and the Kaiser's confessions and Ambassador Harvey's latest speech all get by without hardly exploding once. He even neglected his keg of cider which he is gradually turning into applejack in our cellar, he was so busy trying to decide if the jewel thief was an insider.

And one evening in the public school lecture course, when a professor gave a magic lantern show and then offered to answer any questions, my father got up in the back row and asked him if he could throw any light on who did this dark criminology act in regards to which I am speaking about.

We took all three papers, and I did not miss a word myself, and I give you my word it was heart-rendering to think of all the idle minds all over town doing the same. I imagine some statistition like Messrs. Dawes or Fosdick could prove that the daily financial loss to our city in time spent by salaried help in discussing this business in business hours come to almost several thousand dollars per diam.

Well, Mr. Flynn, you can see that I have been thinking pretty deeply on this vast question and I certainly think we need a few more intelligent as well as bright thinkers to nose around and find out the true facts about our various crimes right away they are committed.

So just let me know as immediately as possible, sir, if you ever hear of any crime that you need my assistance to investigate, and I will get right on the train under some impenitratable disguise or nom-de-plume and get right on the trail, I assure you.

Thus we will gradually save our masses like my father from frittering away their precious dime fretting over crime mysteries all the time, and then they can put in their time putting their nose to the wheel and make our glorious welkin ring with prosperity, let us hope.

Cordially yours,
HOMER BALMY.

PROGRAM FOR CONGRESS.

At atime when the Adullamite bloc in congress is clasping about for a "constructive program of legislation" which will satisfy the yearnings of the country, we commend to it a valuable bulletin issued by the Department of Commerce dealing with the program of the new government of New South Wales.

This antipodean country is going in for a "destructive program" with the object of expunging from the statute books a great mass of laws that have worked badly. Thus, we are told, the new government will repeal the board of trade's wage-fixing powers and reduce wages which have been fixed above the capacity of the industry to pay. It proposes also to abolish the fair rents court, which has raised rather than lowered rents. The housing board will also go, and in place of the profiteering law there will be a substitute aimed at price-fixing agreements. The most radical of all is the proposal to sell the state industries established by the preceding labor government, admitting the failure of this venture into communism.

Here is a spirit of common sense and common honesty which our federal legislators might well emulate; yet it is too much to hope for. Their training will not permit it. We have long since abandoned the political truism that that government is best which governs least and are now inured to the view that the millenium may easily be legislated into being, if we but multiply the laws fast enough. We see this point of view in every election, where the proud incumbent, seeking a new lease on the job, rests his confident claim upon an endless list of acts of the last session, of some of which he may even be the author.

So persistently has the voter had dinned into his head this promise of being made happy by legislation that he, too, has forgotten the benefits of being left untrammeled in his self-exertion and has transferred his hope of ease to an overshadowing federal guardian. The vexations and irritations heaped upon him by previous laws are to be compensated for by still others which confer some special benefit. Such is the essence of a "constructive program of legislation," as it is seen in Washington.

Yet history still teaches that truly great reforms have nearly always consisted in a return to fundamentals, never in the imposition of something new; and that the wisest of all legislation is not what enacts but what repeals, thus simplifying the governmental machinery, naturally grown cumbrous with time.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

MRS. MALONEY, QUEEN.

Katherine Edelman in Milwaukee Journal:

Lying on the north coast of Australia and belonging to the Papua group is a little island named Soutdest (southeast) that is ruled over by an Irish woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Maloney, who is queen and ruler over its 11,000 inhabitants. The island is about 57 miles long and about 12 miles broad and produces copra, gum and other products. In addition, it boasts of some fine cattle ranches and farms, also several gold mines.

It was the lure of gold that first brought the Maloney family to this little, lonely, far flung island, and its mines, are one of the chief sources of revenue of the queen and her family. The husband and father of the family died several years ago, leaving his wife with the care of a large family and the island, too. How well she has executed her trust is patent to all who visit the island.

A woman of tall commanding figure, and of striking character and ability, she rules over her subjects with love and kindness, combined with firmness and justice. Her eldest son, Frank Maloney, is her prime minister, and he, too, holds a warm place in the hearts of his mother's subjects.

Of late years, owing to advancing age, Mrs. Maloney spends some of her time at Sydney, N. S. W. During her absence, her son looks after her large interests in the island, for besides the mines she owns she has extensive farms and cattle ranches and maintains a fleet of sailing boats in which the products of the island are sent to the mainland. Many times she has piloted these boats herself, for, besides her ability to rule over a people, she can also take a hand at carpentry, engineering and many other things when occasion requires. But in spite of this, or maybe because of it no pompous ruler of the past ever held a nearer place in the hearts of her people than this Irish queen of Soudeast Island.—Katherine Edelman in Milwaukee Journal.

THE STRAIGHT VOTER.

We never tip our hat to the man who says he "votes 'er straight." Somehow we pity him, rather than to admire. We pity his weakness, for he is a weak sister who moves as a cog in a great machine. A cog has no need of brains. No need of stamina of purpose. No need of compunction between that which is right and just and that which is not. "Voting 'er straight," has no use for these characteristics either. We hope to always possess them, hence we refuse to become a cog in a machine and refuse to tip our hat to the fellow who does.—Blue Hill Leader.

Hygienist, Playground Director, Teacher and Psychologist Combined in One Woman

Mrs. M. E. Vance Who Taught the Longfellow School Eighteen Years Ago Had to Resort to Many Methods Then Considered Unusual In Handling Lincoln Children.

MOST ENJOYABLE YEAR OF ALL HER TEACHING

Tells of the Start of Modern Ideas in Discipline, Supervision, Hygiene and Psychological Study of the Children Who Came Under Her Care.

BY LULU MAE COE.

"Modern schools have reduced to routine, ideas that used to belong to the province of inspiration."

Those were the words of Mrs. M. E. Vance, who as Miss Nellie May Schlee taught in Longfellow school at First and K street for a year about eighteen years ago.

Voices heavy with enchantment, tones filled with reminiscent longing, men and women speak of the days of the little red school house. Perhaps it was the fact that they were children, when everything was bright, that they think of it with happy sorrow. To the teachers of those days, they were another story. Making fires, sweeping out, boarding 'round did not make the school year one of slothful ease.

Lincoln schools eighteen years ago had taken many steps away from the red school. They were considered so modern, so progressive, so efficient. Everything new and up-to-date was embodied in the system. The most recent ideals of educators were considered and followed. The system was believed to be of the best—and so it was.

Yet, even in those days eighteen years ago of an all-inclusive, as it was thought, school system, many things were not included that we today take for granted. Thinking teachers who realized the lack but who only dimly visioned the day when that lack would be supplied by the board tried to throw themselves into the breach, and to take the school into the home, even as the home could be discerned through the school.

Miss Schlee is now Mrs. M. E. Vance, but this picture is for her a tangible reminder of one of the happiest years of her teaching experience. In 1904, before the ideas of modern education had ben advanced, Mrs. Vance introduced her own class principles of hygiene and simple playground direction. She was likewise sponsor, organizer, and teacher of a combination night school and opportunity class at the school.

Mrs. Vance One of Pioneers.

Among these was Mrs. Vance, who presided over the primary room in Longfellow. With her work lying in the district where the parents then did not know of American ways, she found a large field for her endeavors. The different ideas she instituted in that school are now in general use in all of the school, but Mrs. Vance emphatically disclaims all honor for their adoption. She only says that she saw where she could help, and she merely followed up her ideas.

Incidental to a rather more important thing she accomplished, the teachers in those days visited the home of each pupil of the individual teachers' room. Today there is a visiting teacher who does nothing else, but calling was the duty of the teacher then. Mrs. Vance says she was always received with the greatest courtesy, and that she was always offered coffee and coffee cake before leaving.

On one of these tours, she met a boy of whom she inquired the reason why he was not in school. There were reasons a plenty for his absence, among them being that he did not want to be in the same room with his smaller brothers and sisters at his age, and that he could not read, so that he could be placed in a higher grade. Of quick sympathy, Mrs. Vance realized this, and suggested that he secure another boy, so that he would not feel awkward in the first grade room, and that she would give them chairs.

Pleased by this attention and interest, he not only came himself, but secured a number of others to come.

Telling of this class, Mrs. Vance said:

To Read the Newspapers.

"What now would be represented by night school plus an opportunity room was represented by a class in the hall in the old Longfellow school a class of boys between sixteen and twenty years of age who wanted to learn to read the newspapers.

"They could not read English at all; they spoke it with difficulty with occasional unconscious profanity, but they wanted to learn.

"They brought chairs from home, because the school offered no vacant seats large enough, and they borrowed the texts of the primary room. When I had a free moment, when my class was engaged in some lesson, I went out into the hall and taught them a bit. In the afternoon, I had a free hour when the kindergarten teacher watched my room during which I could give my whole attention to the boys.

"Of course, there was no question of discipline in it, for they were eager to learn. They stayed all day in order to learn to read the paper.

"One day the superintendent of schools, W. L. Stephens, came in and inquired of the meaning of the class in the hall, of which he had not heard. I told him, and as he offered no criticism, he evidently thought it permissable.

"It is understood where a modern intelligence test would have placed those boys but at that time they were certainly placed in the category they desired, namely, among those who wanted to learn to tread. With perseverance they swiftly graduated into the ranks of those who could read."

Always in White.

Anent of the idea of cleanliness, Mrs. Vance always dressed in white. She carried her outfit on her arm to school, as it was necessary to cross nineteen tracks on the way to school—the route she took, and white would not have been white. While the homes of her pupils were so spotless, that one could have done the poverbial thing of eating off the floor, their ideas of personal cleanliness were rather vague. The children had a distressing tendency of coming to school with their winter wardrobe securely fastened in place for the winter, and she hoped by example to bring about a change.

Early in her teaching experience at Longfellow Mrs. Vance went out one day at recess time to see her pupils on the playground, the playground of that year being a few feet on either side of the building. To her consternation, she found the children absolutely gone, as though a piper had lured them. She went in haste to the principal, who announced that the children always went home at recess, as they said for a lunch. Thinking that the open air was more beneficial than a mid-morning lunch, Mrs. Vance ruled that they should stay at school. It was time for amazement at this drastic order on the part of the pupils, but amazement turned to joy when they saw the substiute. Becoming a playground director for the time being, she drilled the children in marches, played games with them, and led them in simple calisthenics.

Hair Ribbon Discipline.

Preceding a modern idea by several years, Mrs. Vance found that children, even as adults, react to certain colors. When they became obstreperous and unruly, she would put a large colored bow in her hair, and the mischievousness became less noticeable. Some of the boys responded best to a bow of brilliant yellow, while other were quieted with greatest ease with a blue one.

These children were very fond of their singing and their art lessons, which were taught in person by the supervisors in those days of fewer schools. They were really appreciative of art in their childish way, even though the symbolism of the picture was too obscure for their mentalities. In one lesson which Mrs. Vance was teaching the "Song of the Lark" was shown to them. In the picture the girl is standing with uplifted face, listening, with a sickle in hand. One infant piped up with the remark: "Oh, see the lady. She is just going to cut beets." Translating the unknown into the known.

Hygiene as taught in the schools is generally accepted, and the children think nothing of being inspected for clean hands and faces. Dirt was not so assiduously watched eighteen years ago, and around Longfellow district many dirty hands and faces came to school. To inspire the children with a higher ideal of personal appearance, Mrs. Vance secured a number of bowls and benches just the height suitable for the tiny children. Over them she pasted pictures taken from advertisements of children being shampooed, children having their teeth brushed, children having faces and hands scrubbed, and children in all processes of being made fresh and dainty. The examples were not lost upon the little folk, to judge by their remarks when they were washing, preparing for the day's school.

Hygienist, playground director, teacher, psychologist — all those things and more was Mrs. Vance. Her days were filled to overflowing in that year, as the next she was promoted "to the pavement," to McKinley school. She had to be many things that her teaching certificate did not indicate; she could not stop with teaching the three Rs to five-and six-year-olds. She had to be prepared for any emergency, ready to meet the need of any of those people who depended more or less upon her. She had no eight hour day in that year; it was year of hard work. Mrs. Vance says it was the happiest year of her teaching experience.

Wesleyan Affairs

Many calls have come this fall to the department of expression. Readers have been furnished for forty-five different occasions during the autumn quarter. Director Beulah G. Champ gave a recital at Tobias and Fairfield, Mo., recently. She also accompanied the college seniors on their trip to Blue Springs when they put on the drama, "And Home Came Ted."

The physics club issued a thanksgiving letter to former Wesleyan students in which the new housing of the department was described. The annex is eighteen by forty feet with two stories. The new rooms have been in use for six weeks. The upper floor contains a workshop complete with lathe, drill, workbench and other equipment. There is a dark room for optics and an electrical laboratory. This has a large switch board, storage battery, rectifiers, and facilities for using various types of galvanometers and other electrical measuring instruments. The president of the Wesleyan physics club is Neal Maricle, and the secretary, B. L. Dodds.

Exit the Hope Chest--Enter Career
Girls Prefer Check Books to Laces

Is Always the Girl Who Isn't Prepared Who Steps Right Up and Gets Married, Say Some Who Have Long Been Ready.

HOPE CHESTS OLD STYLE AND SILLY

Modern Girl Likes Independence and Prefers to Buy Her Hand Made Dainties After the Wedding Date is Fixed.

BY LYNELLE GREER.

Exit the hope chest—enter Career!

Its true, every word of it. We heard that girls were not putting guests towels and breakfast caps and the like into cedar chests for the future, and so we investigated.

"No, I didn't have a hope chest," said one girl, who married in spite of the fact. "You see I never intended marrying at all, and I didn't see why I should spend valuable time, hemming towels, and sheets and pillow cases, and table cloths and napkins for a home that I never expected to have. I intended being a business woman all of my life, but—well, I changed my mind."

And change her mind she did, for she is very much married with a pretty home, and everything up to the minute in it.

"Seriously, though," said this young bride, "I think it is foolish for a girl to have a hpoe chest, that is, I mean foolish for her to begin it until almost time for the wedding, anyway. I have known lots of girls who have had chests since they were freshmen in high school, and some of them are not married to this day, and all of their pretty things are going out of style, the linen is getting yellow, and they might just as well take them out and use them right now.

"I don't think it is so necessary to have so much when you are first married. Almost always you are given table linen and the like, and you can surely buy a few things afterwards, enough to last until you can get some better ones."

Was a Silly Idea.

"I don't like the hope chest idea either," said another girl. "I am glad they have gone out of style, for it was a silly idea. Girls and their mothers would spend hours, and hours, embroidering and hemming and initialing; just to put it away, and never use it. The girl who has the hope chest is no happier after she is married than the girl who had none and who gets married on the spur of the moment. It is fun for her to make all of those things afterwards, she has more interest in them, and it is much better all around.

"The average modern girl does not think much about marrying. She may when she is just a wee young flapper, but not all of them do it even then. After a girl is past twenty she has made up her mind deminitely to follow a career. Some kind of a career will do as long as she is entirely on her own resources. That is the main idea today, freedom and that is just the thing you don't get when you get married.

"Why, then, have a hope chest? It is not essential especially to school teaching, or interior decorating, or a life of music, or newspaper work or anything of the kind. So why have one?"

"I know a girl," said another girl, "who had a wonderful chest. Everything in it as of the very best. Her linens were beautiful, and her embroidery and lace were just the town talk. That girl made the mistake of having her fiance's initial embroidered on all of her lovely dinner and luncheon napkins. Well, the engagement was broken, and then she had a party, and each guest had to rip out a initial. After she got them all out, the two had a reconciliation, and are married now.

So Many Possibilities.

"So you see, you never know what is going to happen. You might die, the man might die, you might quarrel, and a lot of things might come up that would spoil the hope chest."

"I think a hope chest is a hoodoo," said one very attractive girl who has a lovely one. "My mother was a great believer in hope chests, and my cedar chest was given to me when I was about fourteen or fifteen years old. It is brimming over now, and I am on the road to thirty, and probably will never use it. It's always the girl who is not prepared that steps right up and gets married. A hope chest doesn't bother her, and I think the average man thinks they are sort of silly. It sounds like bait to me, and its poor at that. Besides, how many girls today think of getting married? Not many, and they have something else to do with their time than to spend it doing that kind of work. I'm going to begin to give my things away for gifts. Let somebody else have them who really needs them and has a use for them."

"Our mothers and our grandmothers and our great grandmothers did it when they were brides-to-be, or expected to be brides-to-be someday," said another member of the fair sex. "But, you see, they had to make everything in those days or go without. Now there are so many wonderful things you can buy that are just as good, if not better, so why wear yourself out, and everybody around you by spending every minute sewing. There are lovely hand made things you can buy, and if the girl who has not thought especially of marrying suddenly decides that she wants a home of her own, or falls in love or something of the sort, she can buy them. She has probably been in the business world, and has had her own money, and would just as soon buy them as spend her time making them."

"I say 'buy them,' too," another added, "once in a while you can make things cheaper than you buy them. I mean little things that do not take a great deal of time nor skill. But on the whole, I don't see why it isn't all right to hire your embroidering and hemming done. It takes away all of the work and trouble. You see, this could be done after the girl has fully decided that she is going to be married. After the date has been arranged and everything."

And so, the poor hope chest has lost favor with the feminine world. It is passed and so on and so forth, so the girls say. It in't being done these days.

What the men think about it is another question. We just mentioned the fact to one of them and he said, that there was no reason as he could see why there should be a hope chest. If the girl would rather have a bank account, the man would probably be just as well satisfied.

We decided that he didn't mean it after all. But at the rate things are changing around these days, it probably will not be long until the girls have the bank account, and the men the hope chests.

Novel Racing Vehicle Brings Back Memories of Days When Horseracing Was Most Common

C. H. Tucker in his unique racing "buggy." The picture was taken years ago before the automobile came to displace Mr. Tucker's hobby, horses.

BY JESSIE WATSON.

Hanging in pieces on the walls upstairs over Tucker and Shean's store is an unquite little racing vehicle, a relic of the past, but a novelty in its day.

Charles H. Tucker had it made thirty-five years ago, in the days before the automobiles came to take the place of horses, he explains. He was in the real estate business in Lincoln then, but horses were his hobby. He always kept a number of fast horses and exhibited them at the fairs.

He wanted to get a vehicle lighter than the sulky, which weighed about a hundred and thirty-four pounds. So he had this vehicle made to order by a manufacturing company at Aurora, Ill. It cost $265, which amounts to about $750 now.

The result was a four-wheeled racing "buggy" with a miniature piano body measuring 16 by 50 inches and a cane-bottomed seat. The front wheels are 4 feet in diameter and the back wheels 4 feet 1 inch. The body is made of poplar and the running gears of second growth hickory and a very high grade of steel. The entire "buggy" weighs just 98 pounds. It was made standard tread, 5½ pounds.

Mr. Tucker explains that it would be impractical to make a two-wheeled gig as light as this, because if the wheels were even half as light as these there would be danger of them breaking in going over logs. The wheels on this vehicle have the tiniest of spokes and a very thin steel rim. All parts of the running gears were made on the same plan, the steel reinforcements of some parts being as thin as a knife blade.

When Mr. Tucker bought his racing "buggy" the body was painted black and the runing gears vermillion. It was a novel affair, being the only vehicle of its kind that has ever been made so far as Mr. Tucker knows. Needless to say, it attracted much attention; it was more of a sight than an airplane is nowadays. Mr. Tucker used it in exhibiting his pacers at the state fair and a number of the county fairs.

But as every dog has his day, so with the horses. The day when they they were the hobby of many business men has passed, and automobiles have taken their place. It is now fifteen years since Mr. Tucker kept horses. For the past thirteen years he has had an automobile in their place.

University Notes

Acting-Dean A. L. Candy of the college of Arts and Sciences went to Lawrence, Kansas, Friday to attend the annual meeting of the American Mathematics society at the University of Kansas. He is to present a paper at the Saturday morning session. He will return Sunday evening. The association met at the University of Nebraska two years ago.

The memorial stadium campaign by county alumni associations is progressing successfully. Over half of the counties have already reported that their quota is either subscribed or over-subscribed. Chairmen of these associations were guests of the athletic association at the Nebraska-Notre Dame game Thursday.

Eleven of the twenty-three members of the American Legion executive committee, department of Nebraska, that met Wednesday, November 29, at the Lindell hotel, are alumni of the University of Nebraska. They are: Vice-commanders John F. Riddell, '20, York, and Lawrence Coy, ex '12, Valley; Finance Officer Frank S. Perkins, '15, Fremont; Judge Advocate Guy C. Chambers, law '16, Lincoln; executive committee members William Ritchie, Jr., Omaha, former commander; Prof. C. W. Taylor, '98, principal of the Teachers college high school; Harold Gerhart, '20, Newman Grove; Orville Chatt, '16 Tekamah; L. E. Chadderdon, '20, Holdrege; and Earl M. Cline, ex-'15, Lincoln, former commander.

The sixteen members of the four debating teams selected November 23 to represent the classes in the competition for the interclass championship of the university are making a close study of the question as to whether or not "he United States Government should grant adjusted compensation to veterans of the world war." Former Nebraska intercollegiate debaters are assisting the teams. Sheldon Tefft, '22 (Phi Beta Kappa), Law, '24, Weeping Water, (against Iowa in 1921 and 1922) is coaching the reshman team (Orville G. Bosley, Pawnee City; Tyler Buchenau, St. Anthony, Idaho; Hugh Cox, Lincoln; and David Webster, alternate). Wendell Berge, '25, Lincoln (against South Dakota 1922-the second freshman in twenty-one years to win an appointment on a Nebraska debating team) is coaching the sophomores (Ralph Cole, Oxford, Carter Battershell, Oliva, Minn.; John Otley, Waverly; and Devon Eyers, Union City, Ind., alternate). Bernard Gradwohl, '23, Law, '24, Lincoln (against Iowa 1922), is training the juniors (Alexander McKie, Omaha; Floyd E. Leavitt,, Bethany; Merle Loder, Lincoln; and Clinton G. Richards, Sturgis, S. D. alternates). C. C. Stimple, Law, '23, Omaha, is coach for the seniors (Bryon Parker, Cullam, Okla.; David Lindstrom, Oxford; E. G. Funke, Blue Hill; and Hugh Wilson, Nebraska City.

Seven purposes are set forth in a ten-year program of the University of Nebraska alumni association in the editorial columns of the November university journal. The program is a dormitory system; a new stadium in 1923; a new alumni directory in 1923; the biggest alumni week in the history of the school for 1923; a million-dollar fund for student loans, fellowships and scholarships; private endowments for chairs departments, and general university use; and adequate provision for the declining years of those who have given their lives to the university. The regents at their last meeting made provisions for edecting the new stadium.

Dean J. E. LeRossignol of the College of Business Administration will deliver a series of lectures at Leland Stanford Junior university during the 1923 summer session, according to an announcement made by President R. L. Wilbur of that institution. Dr. LeRossignol will give courses in labor problems and in the principles of economics.

Dr. F. W. Upson, chairman of the department of chemistry, addressed the regular monthly meeting of the Chemical Engineering society, November 24, on "The Relation Between Organic Chemistry and Chemical Engineering."

At the request of the Child Welfare league of the United States, that is assisting the census bureau in preparing a report on children's agencies in America, Prof Hattie Plum Williams of the department of sociology, and four of her students—Julia Sheldon, Greenville, Miss.; Bernice Scoville, Hartington; Ida Beavers, Grand Island and Winona Rorby, of Neligh, compiled a list of the children's institutions in Nebraska.

Chinese tea and wafers served during intermission will be a novel feature of the University Players' presentation, December 7, 8 and 9 of "East is West." The play will be presented in Chinese settings.

CHURCHES AND CLUBS

TWENTY-FIRST YEAR. LINCOLN, NEB.—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1922. SUNDAY EDITION.

A charming Thanksgiving week guest is Mrs. Long of Buffalo, Wyo., formerly Miss Kate Denman. Mrs. Long came to Lincoln to spend Thanksgiving with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben S. Denman, and for a visit with her sister, Miss Esther Denman, whose marriage to Fred D. Wheeler took place in San Francisco Friday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Denman entertained at a family dinner on Sunday of last week and the following day Miss Denman left for San Francisco where she was met by Mr. Wheeler and his brother, Howard Wheeler, Thanksgiving evening. The wedding took place very quietly on Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler will make their home in San Francisco.

Mrs. Cone before her marriage on last Wednesday afternoon, was Miss Louise Pierce. She is the daughter of Mrs. Leora Pierce, 3217 Vine street. The bride's attendants were her sister, Mrs. H. L. Schwenke, and little Jeanne Cone who carried the ring. Charles Gray Cone was best man.

Mrs. Bingham is a bride of last week. She was formerly Miss Elizabeth Meyers and is a sister of Mrs. Edward H. Dierks. Mr. Bingham is a Chicago man. The wedding took place Friday at high noon at the Dierks' home on Sheridan boulevard, Rev. S. Mills Hayes officiating. The guests were only the members of the family and a few close friends. There was a wedding luncheon at 1 o'clock after which Mr. Bingham and his bride left for Chicago where they will reside.

An attractive visitor is Miss Stern of Logan, Ia., who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Hugh Atkinson. Several delightful affairs have been given in honor of Miss Stern and more are planned for the future.

Numbered among the brides of Thanksgiving week is Mrs. Grace, whose marriage was solemnized at St. Mary's cathedral Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Mingo and following the ceremony there was a reception and breakfast at the Mingo home. The wedding attendants were Mrs. Costello as matron of honor, Miss Mingo as maid of honor, Miss Grace as bridesmaid, Dorothy Grace as the little flower girl and Edmund Zimmerer as ring bearer. The bride's attendants wore frocks of taffeta in the soft pastel shades of lavender, pink and blue, combined with silver. They wore crownless hats to match their gowns with bows and streamers of silver ribbon and carried arm bouquets of Columbia roses. The bride's gown was of white satin crepe with which she wore a long veil of tulle. Her bouquet was a shower Ophelia roses. The couple will make their home in Lincoln.

Recognition To Lincoln Girl By Coast City

Miss Eleanor Frampton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Frampton, 1602 E street, is fast reaching the topmost ring of the ladder of success. She is now in California where she holds the position of physical director of the Y. W. C. A. of Oakland. There she has classes in dancing, gymnasium, swimming and also gives lectures. She recently received recognition of her work when she appeared last week in Oakland as a lecturer during the International health and safety exposition. Her talk was on "How Women Over Thirty Can Keep Physically Fit" and was illustrated by living models of various ages from 30 to 60 years.

The San Francisco Examiner said of Miss Frampton: "How the Woman Over Thirty Can Keep Physically Fit" is the topic of a talk which is scheduled as one of the features of the International Health and Safety Exposition this afternon at the Oakland Municipal auditorium and Miss Eleanor Frampton, a national authority and one of the best known women physical educationalists in the United States will be the speaker.

Following a six months' tour of Australia with Miss Annette Kellerman and her company, Miss Frampton opened a studio for interpretative dancing in the Alexander Young hotel of Honolulu, where she remained during last winter. She returned to San Francisco in March of last year where she was offered her present position.

Community Toy Shop Is Again To Aid Santa

The community toy shop which was a feature of last holiday season will be continued this year. Plans for a shop will soon be completed and it is hoped that the work will be under way in another week. Mrs. Oliver Sacks, chairman of last year's toy shop, and Mrs. H. J. Walter, solicitor and buyer of toys, have both left Lincoln to make their homes in other cities and the only officer from last year who remains is Mrs. Millie Truman, the secretary and treasurer. To her has fallen the task of starting the work but in this she will be assisted by a number of well known Lincoln women who would not permit such a worthy object to be discontinued because of a lack of workers. The work will be carried along the same lines as a year ago.

The community toy shop assists Santa Claus in making over the toys of the little kiddies who have more than their share so that on Christmas morning there will be toys for all the little boys and girls of Lincoln.

During the afternoon tea and wafers will be served to the guests, and one or two surprises are being planned by the committee in charge. The members are rather noncommital as the exact nature of the novelties, but something interesting is promised.

The alumnae association is being assisted by the mothers of Thetas in the selling of the tables and in the arrangements of the event. Of the one hundred tables, all but a very few have been sold, and it is anticipated that these will be sold within a very few days.

Susie Scott Is Now Broadway Stage Favorite

Miss Susie Scott, a Kearney girl, who received a goodly share of her training for a stage career in the dramatic art department of the University of Nebraska under Miss Alice Howell has attained the goal which is the dream of all those of the threatrical world and is now playing on Broadway. She plays the part of "Madame Florence," a French madame in "Spite Corner" by Frank Craven which is playing at John Golden's Little Theatre with Midge Kennedy in the leading role. The former Nebraska girl is also Miss Kennedy's understudy.

The Little Theatre which is owned by Winthrop Ames is considered by those who know as the most perfect in this country in architectural beauty and is the apostle in all that is new and attractive in artistic appointments. It is the only theatre in New York in which the European custom is followed of serving refreshments between the acts. And incidently, we might add, that this charming custom is to be initiated in Lincoln this week and during the production of one of the University Players plays when Chinese tea and wafers will be served.

Otto Zumwinkle recently returned from a trip east during which he had the opportunity of enjoying a little visit with Miss Scott and of seeing the play. The play is most interesting and charming, Mr. Zumwinkle was telling Miss Scott's old friends, and her part, he said, was a particularly good one and one which brought fourth a round of applause. In the caste in Mattie Keene who was the star in the Payne Comedy company which opened the Oliver theatre of Lincoln. Her husband, Harold Bolster, is now a New York broker, who formerly lived in Lincoln and has friends among the older Lincoln people.

Miss Scott has been in New York three years. She appeared in Lincoln not so very long ago in Twin Beds and has played in stock in the east and Canada. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority and has a host of friends in Lincoln. She appeared in many of the productions sponsored by the university and according to her instructor, who has always kept in touch with her and watched her career with the greatest interest, she did her best here in Madame Butterfly though she always put her whole soul and interest into any part and no matter how small and insignificant it might be it usually stood out as the pricipal part.

Who's Who in Lincoln

Mrs. Clara S. Clayton

Mrs. Clara S. Clayton has been a prominent worker in the W. C. T. U. of Nebraska, for the past seven years, as president of the Francis Willard club, head of the county work and vice-president of the state work, the last being her present position.

She is superintendent of the state legislative work which covers twenty different departments, including scientific temperance, anti-narcotics, social welfare, health, and many others. "The work of the W. C. T. U. in all departments," said Mrs. Clayton, "is to educate the individual to an understanding of the benefits to be derived and the curses to be avoided."

There are forty-six counties organized and 6,000 members in the state, and Mrs. Clayton said: "We keep two paid workers for scientific temperance and social morality. Our ambition is to buy a house which may be used as state headquarters."

When asked regarding the future, Mrs. Clayton replied:

"We are planning to put forth every effort for better marriage laws" and to secure the benefits of the Sheppard-Towner bill for Nebraska. Also, we hope to remove the party circle from the ballot and so make it impossible to cast a vote without any thought. But we shall be very happy and feel that we really have gained the great thing if we secure better marriage laws. A better law would lessen divorce. All women's organizations will work for that law."

Mrs. Clayton was one of the first two women to serve on the election board in Lincoln, but she shows the effect of early training in some of the duties she so efficiently discharges; for having been a high school teacher for ten years, she is now superintendent of the Junior department of the Westminster Presbyterian church, belongs to the city mission board, has worked in the woman's club, in mothers' clubs and in each organization was equal to the task. "But," she said, "I believe I really enjoy political work best."

During the recent conferences, held in ten different towns of the state last year, Mrs. Clayton's part was the discussion of the two questions: "Christian Citizenship" and "Law Enforcement." This year the aim is to do much the same kind of work and Mrs. Clayton hopes to assist in this work again. In speaking of going out to do this, She said: "If I could get one thing across to the mother in the home it would be to tell them that they need not be hesitant about taking part in public affairs because of wearing a dyed dress or one that is darned, because no one is watching your clothes, it is what you are doing and saying that is known and that is what counts."

A Clothes-washing Method That Took 5,000 Years to Perfect

The housewives of ancient Egypt washed clothes by spreading them along the banks of the Nile, and stamping upon them with their feet. Greeks of Homer's time did their laundering by beating their clothing with sticks and stones.

Then slabs of rock came to be used—and finally roughened boards. It was from these last that the old-time washboard grew.

Our laundering methods, developed by men who have made a lifelong and scientific study of textiles and of soaps, are the final result of thousands of years of laundry progress.

It is the soft water method—the process that enables us to give your family washing thorough cleansing and complete sterilizing. It is a method that saves clothes and protects health.

When the trials of washday become burdensome, send us your family bundle and let us wash for you in the modern way. Telephone or mail us a card and our driver will call

D. A. R'S. SALUTE TATTERED EMBLEM OF BATTLESHIP.

The Deborah Avery chapter of the D. A. R. was entertained at the home of Mrs. E. L. Molykoe at 1515 F street Friday at 2:30, with Mrs. H. H. Wilson, Mrs. I. M. Raymond, and Mrs. Hugh La Master assisting hostesses.

After a short business session the following program was rendered:

Group of songs—Mrs. M. C. Lefler, soprano.

Piano solo—Miss Eleanor Ackerman.

Dr. Shepherd said that the American colonies and the United States had never engaged in an unjust war. He has spent many years making a collection of war relics and had on display swords, many of them finely chased and jeweled, representing every war in which the United States had ever been engaged. An English sword that was surrendered by the forces under Cornwallis bore the legend "Warranted never to fail." All the weapons displayed by Dr. Shepherd had been used in defense of democracy and our great republic. His collection of flags was very wonderful and was an inspiration to all.

At the close of the regular program Mrs. C. F. Spencer, the state regent, displayed the colors of the battleship "Nebraska," which had been returned to the Nebraska society of the D. A. R. These colors were presented to the battleship "Nebraska" by the Daughters when the "Nebraska" was launched. They are made of silk, and from years of service have become worn and tattered, but are of historic value and will be preserved by the Nebraska Daughters, by the State Historical society. The staff bears a silver plate with the insignia of the Daughters of the American Revolution. When it was learned that the battleship "Nebraska" was to be destroyed, Mrs. C. S. Paine was appointed by the state regent of the Deborah Avery chapter to make an effort to have the colors returned. As the state regent stood with the flag unfurled, the seventy members present joined in singing the "Star Spangled Banner," closing with the flag salute.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS ARE DOING REAL THINGS.

A real camp fire center is being established at Trinity church, Sixteenth and A streets. Under the leadership of Miss Flossie Yeck the work is rapidly growing. The girls meet at the church on Tuesday and Thursday evenings after school for class work in the gymnasium and a first aid class taught by Dr. Munger. Trinity now has six camp fire groups: Luta Lewa, Spe, Tinega, Kiwohe, Witonohi, and Wahanka. Each group has its night for a supper at the church: the supper being cooked and served by the girls who in this way win their campfire honors.

HAVELOCK WOMEN STUDY CITY AND SCHOOL MORALS.

The Havelock Woman's club held a most successful and interesting meeting last week, in the club rooms of the city library. The program was directed by Mrs. T. Jacobs and the topic for discussion "Morals of Our City." Prof. I. H. Linder, superintendent of the city schools ,spoke of the school morals and in part said that the teachers are in charge of the children so short a time each day that very little opportunity is afforded for lasting moral training: and claimed more responsibility for the care for the horses used in conveying the mail along the old Mormon, or California trail.

The marker which will be placed on the Lincoln highway, will also mark the California trail at Shelton.

W. C. T. U. HEARS BIMSON ON HIGH SCHOOL MORALS.

The University Place W. C. T. U. took up the problems of the University Place public school at its meeting on Nov. 24 at the home of Mrs. Anna Parker, 2008 K street. Mrs. Howard McAfee led the devotionals. She read a lesson appropriate to the subject of the program; her remarks on it were gratifying to the large audience of responsive listeners.

O. H. Bimson, superintendent of the University Place high school, gave an address on the moral conditions in the high school. He read communications from superintendents of schools in larger cities in the state and compared the standards of morals in those schools with the standard in the local high school. Mr. Bimson said that the larger per cent of his high school students are the higher type of boys and girls, who are living clean lives and are the making of noble citizens, which is the most important thing in life. But he also told of the opposite type, which is all too prevalent. He spoke of the bad effects of disregard for law and rule and disrespect to teachers and fellow students. He declared that cigarettes render youth unfit for true and honest school work; it breeds disease of mind as well as body and makes a weakling out of what might have been a person with a strong mind and healthy body.

Superintendent Bimson brought the matter home to the mothers by telling them that, sad and heartbreaking as it is, this problem is not to be dealt with by superintendent and teachers alone, but parents must remember that it is somebody's boy and somebody's girl who are smoking cigarettes, and indulging in clandestine joyrides. He urged the parents to look into the morals not only of their own boy and girl but of the company they are in. He said that parents, citizens and teachers must co-operate in this great work, for the boys and girls of today are the citizens of tomorrow. He made a plea for fathers and mothers to make pals of their boys and girls, and instead of scolding them and making threats to sit down and talk the matter over with them, reason it out and let them know that no one has so deep an interest in them as their parents. They should be made to realize that unless they can face the world and life's problems with a clean character and an

ECHOES FROM WOMEN'S CLUBS OVER THE STATE.

Under the leadership of Mrs. F. W. Ferguson who is a pianist of Shelton a pageant of early colonial times was given by more than fifty children and adults Tuesday evening November 28 in the Hostetler opera house in Shelton as a benefit for the local D. A. R. chapter.

The chapter will erect a monument to the memory of two pioneer Shelton men—August Meyer, and Edward Oliver who in 1867 during an Indian uprising in the western part of the state sent their families east for protection while they remained at their posts—the station for the exchange of horses—to protect and mother the meals are not properly planned. Mothers are studying problems of nutrition through series of lectures by experts and through bulletins sent out by the state and national health bureaus as well as books in the city library.

COPE WITH FORCES THAT MAY RESULT IN USELESS LIVES

A rather unique feature of one of the groups is hostess day which comes every two weeks on Wednesday. For each meeting one woman acts as hostess and it is her duty to inform the visitors as to the location teachers and of rooms. When the parents are thoroughly acquainted with the building it is much easier to drop in and talk something over with the teacher or visit a class.

The Belmont Parent-Teacher association has undertaken to furnish the children with a wholesome way of spending extra time by having courses in sewing, cooking, gardening, poultry and canning installed by the University of Nebraska agricultural extension service, under the general direction of Prof. L. I. Frisbie. This district also has an achievement day when the Parent-Teacher association distributes prizes to the children.

The program of the national organization includes the teaching of thrift to children. Nothing definite has been done along that line in Lincoln. The organizations here are so new that they are only beginning to touch upon the big opportunities that lie before them.

Up to this time the Parent-Teacher associations and Mothers' clubs in Lincoln have concerned only parents of children of school age. To supplement this, many towns and cities have mothers' study circles to take up the problems of children preschool age. The national congress is backing these study circles and urging their organization in every community. It makes this state statement: "The intimate questions concerning the tender years of preschool age can only be asked and answered by those most closely associated with the life of the child—the mother, the father or the guardian. These, organized, become not only a source of strength unto themselves but form a direct channel through which professional information from the physician, the nurse, the kindergartner, may be poured with immediate and positive results."

There are certain phases of a child's development which, if neglected in his first few years, can never be corrected after he is school age. For this reasen an organization of mothers of children preschool age has a direct relation to the schools. It covers a period in the child's life when intelligent care and training is perhaps even more important than in the child's later years. Nor does the mothers' study circle stop with small children and infants; it also makes a study of pre-natal problems.

While an effective organization of parents of the grade-school children of Lincoln sprang into existence almost over night, this only covers the middle lap in the development of the children. The children on both sides of this lap need attention, both the children pre-school age and the high school boys and girls.

Omaha Central high school, Kansas City Central high school, many other high school have Parent Teacher associations.

In our city, high school boys and girls have borne the brunt of public criticism. The people of the past generation stand on one side of the fence holding up their hands in horror at thought of the things the high school youngsters are doing, or they cry out from their broken hearts that they no longer have any control over their children. On the other side of the fence the high school youngsters shrug their shoulders and go their own way. The purpose of a high school Parent-Teacher association is to place parents, teachers and children on the same side of the fence. The environment of high school boys and girls nowadays is so different from that of a generation ago that parents cannot hope to arrive at a sympathetice understand without making a careful study.

Some of the things that high school Parent-Teacher associations are undertaking are: To raise the general standard of scholarship by co-operative action in regard to home study, to plan and carry out social gatherings and tactfully regulate or abolish undesirable features that may have crept in to establish a neighborhood practice in regard to chaperonage and evenings for social affairs, to discourage over-elaborateness and encourage simplicity in such activities, to make surveys of the commercialized amusements in the community, to make industrial surveys disseminating information among parents and students as to local opportunities in business, to study and discuss sanitary conditions in and about the school, to do juvenile protective work on the theory that an ounce of prevention is better than the painful pound of cure, to develop and foster a good school spirit by patronage of the school entertainments and the school paper, to help every parent to realize how much he has in common with every other parents and how much can be accomplished by working together

Unlimited Possibilities.

The Mothers' clubs and Parent-Teacher associations offer a field of unlimited possibilities for social work. Not only is membership in such an organization of personal value to parents whether they be rich or poor, educated or uneducated but it gives them an opportunity to help others.

Many mothers have had their home standards raised by associating with women who had higher standards. This takes place quite naturally while chatting with a neighbor over a cup of tea at the close of the meeting. "We are not trying to bring about reforms, but we are building steadily from the ground." said an officer of the Lincoln Council of Mothers' clubs and Parent-Teacher associations.

One woman in telling what the Parent-teacher association meant to her said that through talking with other women and hearing the lecture she decided that she had been negligent in rearing her children. So she decided to raise her home standards. One of the things she undertook was to make her children go to church instead of playing baseball on Sunday. The oldest boy revolted. He declared that he wanted to play ball and he would not go to church. She had to whip him to make him mind, and in her excitement she forgot the meat in the oven and let it burn. She was expecting company for dinner and it seemed that everything was going wrong. But finally she started off to church with the children and after that everything turned out all right. Everybody enjoyed the dinner even if the meat was burned, and the boy she had whipped enjoyed the sermon so much that he cried to go to church in the evening.

Promises More Good.

Excerpt from a statement made by Mrs. Beatrice Craig, president of the Lincoln Teachers' association: "The Parent-Teacher association nationally has accomplished much good and promises more. It should be a partnership of parents and teachers with this object, to give to every child the environment most favorable to his development in the home, in the schools and in the community."

Excerpt from statement by Supt. M. C. Lefler: "There is no end to the lines of constructive work which may be done by this association. The study of delinquency—the field of child labor—the problem of complete home and school co-operation—the under-privileged child—play and real recreation in the widest sense—social betterment—health and sanitation—in fact every phase of activity involving the welfare of the child in the home and school is a natural and timely topic."

The local organizations keep in close touch with the state organization which has its official organ the Nebraska Educational Journal.

The leaders in the parent-teacher movement of Lincoln are fully awake to the opportunities that lie before them. Before expanding into new fields they are striving to place the Parent-Teacher associations of the grade schools on a firm foundation. They realize that to be of greatest value these organizations must have 100 per cent membership, that is, every father and mother of the school children must be a member.

NOTES FROM LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS.

Mrs. C. A. Sorenson, publicity chairman for the State League of Women Voters, send in the following interesting items of news regarding the accomplishments of this organization:

"A leaflet of interest to all women in the state is the pamphlet entitled "Survey of the Legal and Political Status of Women in Nebraska," published by the Nebraska league of women voters under the direction of Mrs. Margaret J. Carns of Lincoln, state chairman of the committee on uniform laws concerning women. It is in the form of questions and answers and the style is adapted to the average woman reader.

Among the interesting questions answered are: May a woman make contracts without her husband's consent? Does a wife share in the property accumulated by joint efforts after marriage? Does the wife share in the control of the children? Are women eligible for jury service? What is the sum total of legal discriminations against women?

The Nebraska league will be glad to supply this pamphlet to any individual or group of women at minimum cost of printing (five cents.) Write to state secretary, Miss May Gund, 234 South Twenty-seventh street, Lincoln.

There will come shortly from the press two more pamphlets which may be secured from the state secretary. A 16-page booklet, a study of the marriage bill, contains the present marriage law of Nebraska and the proposed bill for remedying its defects. (Single copies, 10 cents.)

An 8-page folder (five cents) contains an outline study of the Shepard-Towner law, prepared by Miss Ada Kuhn, and an outline study on the question of the removal of the party circle, prepared by L. E. Aylsworth, professor of political science.

The Nebraska league adopted these three measures as its legislative program for the year. A committee on study programs prepared the two pamphlets in answer to many requests from members and friends of the league for accurate and reliable data on these problems.

"The Women Citizen" (November 18 issue) published in New York city has a two-page article on "Leagues in Journalism," which mentions the "especially crisp and newsy" Nebraska Bulletin. Nebraska is one of twenty states with league publications.

Mrs. George P. Abel of Lincoln is among the first to contribute one hundred dollars to the state league's budget of $6,000 for the coming year.

One of the youngest leagues in the state is that born at Minden just prior to the election. Its president, Mrs. J. S. Canaday, and its secretary Miss E. L. Booth, both attended the state convention at Hastings.

Nebraska was unsuccessful in its effort to bring the national convention to this state next spring. A cordial invitation extended by the Omaha league had to yield to a stronger one issued by Des Moines, Iowa. This will be the first convention west of the Mississippi, and many Nebraska league members will attend."

HARTLEY ASSOCIATION NAMES COMMITTEES.

The Parent Teacher association of Hartley school met for the regular monthly meeting Tuesday afternoon. The program, consisting of songs and dramatizations, was furnished by the first grade pupils, conducted by Mrs. A. E. Carr and Miss Mathis. Following this a splendid talk was given by Miss Mecham on "The Work of the Visiting Teacher." This led to an enthusiastic round table discussion. It was announced that the next activity of community interest would be a Christmas program given by the pupils on Friday evening, December 15. The meeting ended with a social half hour. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess for the month, Mesdames O. E. Meier, Chauncy Smith, Hunt, Heilig and Sibley. The following committees were appointed by the president, Mrs. Foy Cochrane—press committee; Mrs. Spencer and Mrs. Stanton; Hospitality committee Mesdames Hutton, C. C. Campbell, O. E. Meier, Broad, Anderson, Null Fitch, Baker and Miss Smith and Schemel; program committee, Mesdames Mulliner, Beeson, Ryan, McFarland, Chase and Miss Barton.

MISS ANNIE COGIL TO ADDRESS BUSINESS WOMEN.

Thursday evening, Dec. 7, the league will have the regular dinner and business meeting at the club rooms. Miss Annie Cogil, principal of Hayward school and member of the league, will tell of her recent European trip. The members of the league have been looking forward in pleasant anticipation of this treat.

Miss Annette Martin reports that the Christmas box for the families of prisoners is being very generously filled with toys, clothing, books, candies, etc. It will be sent the first of the week.

Mrs. Edith Chase Newton is a new member of the league. Mrs. Newton and daughter motored to Lincoln in the late summer from their home in Massachusetts. The daughter is a student at Union college. Mrs. Newton, who is a graduate of Smith college, wanted her daughter to have the broadening influence of at least a year in a western college, and states they are well pleased with Lincoln.

Miss Rae Shaw will be hostess at the league rooms Wednesday evening; Miss Emma Hedges, Friday evening and Miss Sadie Howell, Saturday evening.

Miss Grace Trott is in receipt of a club paper issued by the business and professional women's club of Parsons, Kas. It was sent by Miss Hazel Meyers, of Parsons, who is state publicity woman for the clubs of Kansas. The Independent Woman, official organ of the national organization of business and professional women, recently gave an account of an exhibit of women's activities held in New York City. Miss Meyers and the Kansas exhibit were mentioned in highly commendatory terms. Miss Jessie Ackerman has recently returned frim Kansas where she addressed a club of business women. Miss Ackerman has a keen interest in the plans and activities of business women, who in turn gather a fund of inspiration from her talks and experiences.

LINCOLN LEAGUE PLANS LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM.

The Lincoln League of Women Voters met in Faculty hall Saturday afternoon to hear reports from delegates who attended the state convention which was held at Hastings in November, and also to plan the program to be followed during the coming legislative session. Mrs. C. S. Clayton in her report said: "The league is opposed to the amendment which will be proposed by the national woman's party, removing discrimination against women because of sex. Our reason for opposing this amendment is that it would do away with legislation in states which protect women."

Miss Sarah Muir reported that the league voted not to put itself on record in regard to candidates.

Miss May Gund gave the budget adopted as $6,000. Out of this amount the state league will employ a paid secretary.

Mrs. A. E. Sheldon told the audience that the league will see that the legislature passes laws which insure the benefits of the Shepherd-Towner bill to this state; second, laws for removal of the party circle from the ballot; and third, better marriage laws. These were accepted and the league stands for one and all.

Mrs. C. A. Sorenson reviewed the speech made by Mrs. Maud Wood Park, the keynote of which was "In times of peace prepare for peace." She gave four ways to help for peace: First—reduction of armament; second—establishing an international machine of peace; third—removing or lessening possible causes of friction; fourth—promoting international understanding and sympathy.

Mrs. H. H. Wheeler explained to the members the way to put across the legislative program. She said: "It may be done the best by the constituents of the legislator. They must be definite and clear as to the principals they are working for so that the bill shall not be amended past recognition.

Others who gave reports were: Mrs. J. B. Burleigh; Mrs. J. P. Senning; Mrs. W. R. McKenny; Miss Flora Bullock.

Nature is sending blood—either good or bad—to every part of your body. Feel your pulse and think about your blood!

It is a fact that with the increase of red-cells in your blood, impurities are destroyed. It is a fact that S. S. S. builds red-blood-cells and serves to destroy impurities which cause pimples, boils, eczema and rheumatic trouble! It is a fact that S. S. S. is one of the most remarkable nerve-power builders ever produced to build up fagged-out, run-down men and women. It is a fact that S. S. S. sharpens the appetite, puts the "pink of the rose" in the cheeks, gives energy, and helps to make flesh firm! It is a glorious fact that S. S. S. has given new, long-forgotten strength to older people and has made many old and young people look years younger. Blood is life,—it is your foundation. Make it rich. Get blood-strength. We all need it, especially rheumatics. Begin taking S. S. S. right away today. It will prove itself. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores in two sizes. The larger size bottle is the more economical. If you cannot get S. S. S. yourself, see that someone in your household gets it for you. Read this aloud to the family tonight.

Put on your bonnet bright and early Monday morning, and go down and see what you can get at Gold's dollar sale of Christmas gifts. Perhaps there will be just the things you have been planning on purchasing all of the time, and think how reasonable they will be. Don't forget to go early, for Gold's dollar sales are well known and very popular.

Circular Center Drape on Brick Crepe.

A brick crepe dress with a circular center drape is particularly smart, with a rosette of dull metallic tinted flowers and a back panel of gold lace from collar to hem. Another brick frock develops a beaded girdle of dull blue beads and iridescent effects in dull blue. A tan frock made of the finely pleated silk that looks like so many fine tucks has a sheer over skirt of web-like lace in crescent pattern.

Three piece costume suits will figure in the line later in the season and will embrace Roshanara in contrasting colors. Printed crepes will also be developed later. Lingerie in collar and cuffs will be used in all probability with the costume suits. The straightline is accented now and will be further accented in the later spring line. Skirts are eight inches from the ground and sleeves are typical of the gown they belong to. There is no definite emphasis placed on any one type of sleeve.

Combines White Satin and Blue Frou Frou.

Pale blue Frou Frou and a white brocaded satin combine in a blouse that may be worn in two fashions, either as an ordinary jacquette, or a one-sided surplice effect. It also employs a sort of loop edging, and adds a dainty white leather belt.

No One Hestitates When a Buick is in Question. The Best For Less.

By the way, have you been riding in one of those new Buick sedans recently, one of the very newest? Well, you should, because it might be as near as you will ever get to paradise. You just glide along in perfect comfort, rough roads don't matter, because the car is built for use as well as looks. The roadsters and coupes are also built for good hard wear, and you never hear a Buick owner complain. The cars are driven thousands and thousands of miles, and yet they stand up, ample proof that you can't go wrong when you buy a Buick. Stop in at Thirteenth and Q streets and see all of the new models, and have them tell you about the Buick, then you will know why it is the best car on the market for the price.

Piller's is the Favorite of All Those Who Know.

Pillers' is the thing now, has been for quite a while, and bid fair to be for a while longer because they have such good things to eat there. Good things to drink, too, and the service is excellent. Try a pecan perfecto, or any of the delicious things they have, you'll go back again.

Applique Treatments in Contrasting Colors.

Pastel colors are being used in a diagonally woven soft surfaced woolen and in this group some applique treatments of contrasting color are noted.

A large black and white blocked cloth finds expression in a caped sleeve garment which retains the tubular silhouette throughout the body.

Silk faille and satin crepes, as well as crepe Morocain are being used for the dressier models, and in the latter material one finds an attractive number collared in summer ermine and introducing a pleated flounce of self material set on low to effect a yoke.

Another model features an all-over embroidery on yoke and sleeves in variations of the topaz shade, while a tapering shawl collar and band across the back is of taupe nutria.

Do Your Christmas Shopping At Tucker-Shean's. Cards and Gifts.

Just the other day, Patricia-Ann went a-shopping for Christmas cards, cards that had style and sentiment all in one, and where do you suppose she found them, the very prettiest and best ones she had seen in a long time, at Tucker-Shean's. There are comic ones and very dignified ones, and they are all just as clever as clever can be. Then, too, before you complete your Christmas list, go into Tucker-Shean's and look at their gifts. Wonderful desk sets, book ends, pens and pencils. If you gave an Eversharp pencil last year, match it with an Eversharp pen. There are some gorgeous quill pens that might claim some of your attention if you saw them. Don't forget, Christmas cards and Christmas gifts at Tucker-Shean's.

Long Oval Filet Vestee.

An odd blouse of white crepe de Chine and peasant embroidery in red makes use of a long oval file vestee, which is piped with the crepe. The round collar is filet trimmed. The vestee inset is bordered with the red embroidery, which is repeated up the sides of the sleeves.

A Russian blouse which was a spring number with this house has met with such a demand that it is being included in the new line. A straight neck is being substituted for the shirring of the original, and it will be piped in the embroidery used on the jacquette model described in this article.

The dimities here have effective colored touches. A material which suggests linen burlap is combined with dimity in several instances. It is ornamented with imitation Mexican drawnwork. A hand-machine fagoting in white thread is brightened by occasional lapses into color on several of the blouses.

Obituary

Jacob M. Epler.

Jacob M. Epler, the son of Isaac and Christiana Bartholomew Epler was born in Morgan county, Illinois, Feb. 26, 1839, and died at his residence in Julian, Neb., Sunday morning, Nov. 26, at 9:30 a. m. His age was 83 years and nine months. He had taken to his bed about a month before his death. When a child his parents moved to Sangamon county, Ill. Mr. Epler came to Nebraska at the age of 19 years, settling at Nebraska City May 7, 1858. He bought a farm south of Nebraska City where he resided for many years.

On Dec. 4, 1866, Owen Foote, minister of the Gospel, officiated at the wedding of Jacob M. Epler and Miss Matilda Girardet. Six years ago Mr. and Mrs. Epler celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Eleven children were born in the parental home south of Nebraska City: Lulu Epler Bass, deceased; Charles William of Julian, Neb., J. Sterling of Tecumseh, Neb., Mrs. Minnie Wright, Omaha; Isaac Lewis, Bethany, and Mrs. Maggie Combs, Johnson, Neb.; Jacob Myron, deceased; Stephen Jules of Alliance, Neb.; Orville Christian of Lincoln; Rosa Agnes, deceased; Max Bryan of Grainola, Okla.

Jacob M. Epler began freighting with oxen in 1859. For five summers he made trips, a part of the time with his brothers, from Nebraska City to Denver or Ft. Laramie. He made eighteen trips. During the war he freighted for the government, hauling supplies to the soldiers who were guarding the frontier settlers from the attacks of Indians.

In 1893 Mr. Epler sold his Otoe county farm and moved to Johnson county near Tecumseh. In 1902 he moved to Nemaha county, where he lived on a farm. The past fifteen years he resided in Brock and Julian.

Mr. Epler was a man of deep convictions. Many will testify to his readiness to help them in the time of need. He was a liberal supporter of the church. He expressed his regret that he had not made his "acknowledgement" earlier in life.

All the children, except Sterling, who is at the hospital in Rochester, Minn., were at his bedside when the end came. Mr. Epler had been in declining health for seven years, as he sufered of leakage of the heart but the decline was very rapid within the past six months. As the end approached he peacefully went to sleep.

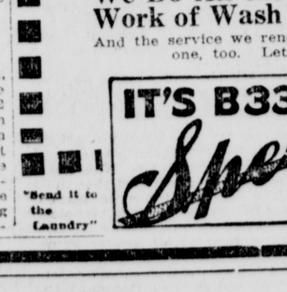

Of a large family only one brother, Joseph M. Epler is left. The deceased is mourned by his devoted wife who has been his faithful companion for nearly fifty-six years; eight children, thirty-five grandchildren, nine great grandchildren, other relatives and many friends.

'Life's labor done, as sinks the sun,
Light from its load the spirit flies,
While heaven and earth combine to say,
'How blest the righteous when he dies'."

—CONTRIBUTED.

Frederick Steinmeyer.

Frederick Steinmeyer of Clatonia, Neb., who passed away at his home Nov. 17, 1922, at the ripe age of 82 years, came to Nebraska fifty-seven years ago from Ohio, all of which time, with the exception of about six months, was spent in Gage county. All the hardships and privations of the early settlers were experienced by the deceased, being on of the earliest settlers of Clatonia precinct, when Nebraska City was the nearest market and when ox teams were used to farm and haul the grain and produce to market.

He lived to see the town of Clatonia located near his farm, and had resided in Clatonia the past ten years, enjoying a well deserved and quiet rest for many years of work on a Nebraska farm.

The deceased enlisted in the 56th Ohio volunteer regiment in 1861, followed General Banks and Grant at Shilo, Fort Donaldson and Vicksburg, finally winding up under Butler in New Orleans after three years' service, where he was honorably discharged without being sick or excused from duty a single day.

He leaves to mourn his death three boys and three girls, all energetic and patriotic citizens, standing up for Nebraska and helping to add to the wealth and prosperity of Nebraska as their parents have done.

Mrs. Steinmeyer passed away about three years ago, shortly after having celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

The Musical World

For the first time in Nebraska history, on November 28 in Tecumseh, Nebraska, the works of representative Nebraska composers were collected and arranged to form a full evening's band concert. The Tecumseh military band, under the direction of Professor John J. Fiala, with the collaboration of Howard Dietze of Lincoln, gave the concert before an enthusiastic audience.

The program opened with a march "The Jolly Elks" by Frank Harrison of Ravenna, a rattling quick step well deserving its name. The second number was composed of two themes by Edwin Walt, "Thy Troubador," a gay Spanish air, and the well known "Lassie O'Mine." Emil Watson of Lincoln, a singer of great charm and ability, sang this number with the band. Thurlow Lieurance's "Romance in A" with its suggestion of haunting melancholy and its exquisite minor chords, came third. The fourth number was in markel contrast, an arrangement of Wilbur Chenoweth's, "It Seems To Me"—probably there wasn't a motionaless foot in the house during that number.

The closing number of Part 1 of the program a rarely beautiful anthem, "I Lay My Sins On Jesus" by Nellie Shorthill Bradshaw of Omaha. The air is first given in a coronet solo, repeated by a brass quartet, and finally given with the full harmony of the band.

Part 2 of the program opened with the Chenoweth's "Marching Song," followed by two songs with band accompaniment by Mr. Watson. The first was the university prize song, "Cornhusker Rose" by Howard Adamson; the second "Love's Lesson," a delightful little comery in music by Mrs. Bradshaw. Both had to be repeated to satisfy the audience.

Howard Dietze of the Rialto orchestra composed the two numbers given next, a smoothly articulated fox trot son, "Dear," and the "Gift Of The Ocean Waves," a ballad of great charm. Mr. Dietze made the arrangements of all the melodies played, most of which were originally piano or piano and voice scores and is to be congratulated on so successfully expanding the themes of the composers as to make most satisfying numbers for the band.

John J. Fiala, director of the Tecumseh military band, had one of the most compelling numbers on the program,—"Soldiers Farewell." It was composed during war time, and it has caught so much of the sorrow and the same time so much of the nobility of those soldier partings that it has a most moving effect upon the hearers. The closing number, a march "World's Peace," by Arthur J. Babich, now conductor of the Liberty orchestra, was intended as an armistice day march,—and one can see the very snapping of the flag in the sun as the procession passes, while one listens to the triumphant measures of the music.

These names do not by any means exhaust the list of Nebraska composers, nor these compositions their repertoire, but even this small group can present a musical evening of such vigor and variety as to delight any audience. The concert will doubtless be repeated by other bands in other places, but credit should always be due to Mr. Fiala, who planned and directed the whole enterprise. Mrs. Bradshaw, Mr. Chenoweth and Mr. Dietze were present at the concert.

UNIVERSITY OF MUSIC.

A recital consisting entirely of compositions by Cesar Franck, all performed by members of the faculty will be given in the First Christian church Friday evening, December 8, commencing at 8:15. The public is cordially invited to this performance which will consist of numbers as follows: "Prelude Choral and Fugue" for the piano by Herbert Schmidt, "Sonata in A Major" for piano and violin by Lura Schuler Smith and Carl Frederic Steckelberg, "Pastorale, Op. 19" for the organ by Edith Burlingim Ross and "Evening Bells," "Lied," and "Live but To Love" by Jude Deyo.

Friends of the dramatic department are invited to the first of a series of monthly recitals to be given in the corridors of the school Wednesday evening, December 6. An informal reception and dance will be the features of the evening, the numbers of the class being given from time to time.

Ada C. Malcolm of the dramatic department gave a lecture recital before the Mother's club at the Hayward school Tuesday afternoon.

Despite all rumors, there will be no radio broadcasting of the performance of the Metropolitan Opera company during the present season, it was announced by the Metropolitan management. Officials of the company have not as yet been persuaded that there is a genuine popular demand for radio opera.

Miss Mary Garden arrived from Europe on the S. S. Aquitania the early part of November and as usual, had something to say about a good many matters. Among other things, she told reporters that she had seen Harold McCormack who was "radiantly" happy, that Mme. Walska would probably settle down to domesticity and not sing very much, that white rabbit coats and American jazz were the present fad in Paris, that she herself was letting her bobbed red hair grow, that she had lost weight this summer at Monte Carlo swimming, dancing, playing tennis, and riding a mule who was "easier to manage than a man," and she was going straight to Chicago to appear [illegible] Carmen.—Musical Digest.

Little Harpist—Presser. Lorene Ford.

Pixies March—Brown, Helen Sippell.

Spring Song—Mendelssohn, Dorothy Mobley.

Butterfly Waltz—Friml, Gladys Way.

Benedict March—Atherton (duet), Dorothy Johnston and Gladys Way.

Saturday, November 25, marked the anniversary of the birth of one of the greatest of American composers, Ethelbert Nevin. His works are loved by all classes of people and all the world acknowledges his skill and the charm of his music.

His "Rosary," "Narcissus," "Venice," "A Day in Tuscany," "O That We Two Were Maying," and many others are known the world over. Nevin was born at Edgeworth, Pa., November 25, 1862, where he spent the fifteen years of his boyhood.

He was a child of nature, and his happy life in Edgeworth amid the beauties of nature, undoubtedly did much to influence his writing.

He was only eleven when his first composition, a polka, was published.

Many of Nevin's compositions have an interesting history. He traveled considerable, and the atmosphere of different places is felt in his pieces. He was of a restless nature, never staying long in one place. He lived at various times in Pittsburgh, Boston, Berlin, New York, Italy and other places. Especially in Italy did he gain inspiration. He died in New Haven, Conn., February 20, 1901.

Darius Milhaud, most interesting of the young French composers, is to visit this country in January.

Le Prix Blumenthal, offered to French musicians every other year by an American citizen who resided in Paris for a long while, was won this year by Roger Desormiere, with a symphonic work for orchestra. The prize is awarded by a jury made up of some of the most representative men in French music, Messrs. d'Indy, Rabaud, Schmitt, Ravel, Dukas and Ropartz.

For pianodom in New York November 22, was a red letter day for it was slated to mark the reappearance in this city of Paderewski, luminous hero of the keyboard whose personality and art have kept him prominently before the public for long over a quarter of a century, matter whether one agrees or not with Paderewski's political beliefs and doings he nevertheless must be regarded as a tremendously significant figure in the musical world and in particular in the realm of piano playing. His recitals elsewhere in America this autumn have proved that much of Paderewski's old finesse, flourish and deeply musical sensitiveness still are in evidence in his renderings, and audiences gave him a reception that must have proved to him beyond a doubt how strongly and lastingly his former glorious manifestations on the piano have kept him in the affections of musicians and in the fancy of the populace. The Saturday arrival in this country of Clemenceau and his first ride up Fifth avenue when he was gazed upon from the Musical Courier windows by the writer of these lines, made the latter recall what the "Tiger" exclaimed when Paderewski arrived in Paris to represent Poland at the Versailles peace conference: "So you are Paderewski, the pianist, now turned statesman! What a fall, monsieur!" And Clemenceau, if he attended the recital yesterday of Paderewski, may have had cause to confirm his opinion. From what the world now knows about statesmen, a fine pianist is infinitely to be preferred to the "diplomats" who sit around green tables and entangle nations in bickerings, strife, misery and hatred.—Musical Courier.

Applications are now being received for membership in the A Chappella choir which is about to start its activities for the year. The officers of the choir are Mrs. D. E. Turley, president; Dean Bickford, vice-president, and Russel Robinson, treasurer and librarian. Though the membership is largely made up of students of the University School of Music it is not limited to students of the school and anyone wishing to join is requested to send in a written application. It is expected that the membership will be between forty and fifty. It will meet from 7 to 8 o'clock on Tuesday evenings. The choir was organized a year ago and made its first appearance at the grduation exercises of the University School of Music last spring. John M. Rosborough is the conductor.

The Musical Art club will meet Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Miss Mariel Jones, 1418 L street. Miss Annette Abbott and Mrs. Maude Hammond Fling will be the assisting hostesses. In accordance with the study for the year of "Past Romanticism," the following program will be given:

Songs: The Monotone—Cornelius. Secrecy—Wolf.

An Old Painting—Wolf.

NICOTIN

BY JACK CEJNAR

The second lieutenant was crossing an open space among the ruins of what had once been a prosperous French village. He was alone and it was misting, and intensely dark.

His hobnails sank into the mushy mud that reminded him of rainy days in the little southern village where he was raised. He was proceeding carefully not quite sure of his way. Somewhere in the darkness ahead of him, was the opening to a large cave where Nicotin, company G's much talked of fiddler was to play that night.

Out of the intense darkness suddenly he heard a tiny whine that grew in rythmic intenseness. The sound quickened his steps. He had learned to dread those wailing whines, in the days that had passed.

In the nigrescent solitude, the warning of the shell was doubly terrifying. It grew rapidly in volume, as if it were to strike at his very feet. He staggered onward, his reluctance to flounder down into the oozy mud almost equalling his fear and hatred for that thing whizzing its death warning through the night air.

But for the challenge of a sentry at the opening of the cave, he was sure, he would have missed it. In the darkness the man had not seen him, until the officer was almost upon him. The sentry too, had heard that shell, and the report of its explosion a few rods away mingled with the first sound he heard of the officer's steps. The sentry, his nerves on edge, was glad to have any sort of human companionship that moment.

Following the directions given by the sentry, the officer continued his way down a dark, dry, narrow passage with cool walls of chalk that left streaks of white on his blouze here and there. Turning a bend, he found himself in a large roomy space lit up by a number of army candles placed on wooden boxes. The hubbub of talk died as the men recognized the newcomer.

The men were seated in a circle, in the center of which stood a youth, his khaki uniform serving only to emphasize the ungraceful cuts of his figure. With a camaraderie that instantly appealed to the gathered men, the officer refused a seat offered him by a private near the entrance, and ensconced himself in another corner between two of the other men.

The lieutenant was very interested in the central figure of the gathering, for he had heard many stories of Nicotin and his fiddle.

Nicotin bowed to the officer, exposing a double row of white teeth, that glistened in the yellow candlelight. He raised a violin to his shoulder and began to play, his elbow causing grotesque shadows on the walls and ceiling.

He struck the notes of a popular song, and the men began to hum the tune to the accompaniment of the violin.

With another bow Nicotin concluded the piece he had been playing and received warm applause. The noise grew, as the men demanded that their respective favorite tunes be played.

"We want more," a score of voices cried in unison.

With another of his pearly grins, Nicotin again raised the violin to his shoulder. This time he struck a serious chord and as if by command the cave became silent, save for the mellow, heart gripping melody flowing from the instrument.

It seemed that the strains that Nicotin lured forth from the strings, captivated each man present, as if though the brown instrument were speaking to every one individually through some loved one at home.

There was silence when Nicotin stopped. The player searched the faces of his audience, and as if suddenly pained at the suspicious moisture he saw here and there in the eyes of some of the men, he broke into a merry tune. To add to its effect, or perhaps he himselfbreakoo effect, or perhaps because he himself succumbed to the frisky strains, he began to jig.

Himself a violinist, the lieutenant found it difficult to resist the the impulse to take the violin to play a few pieces.

It had grown late, and Nicotin announced that the concert was over for the night. The men applauded and then began to file out.

"May I see your violin?" the officer asked.

"Can you play it, sir?" he asked respectfully.

"Well, I regret to say not very well. I had every chance to become proficient on the violin but I rather neglected it. My mother had dreams of me as a famous musician some day. She was an exceptionally good musician herself," the lieutenant said, passing the bow over the strings with the sure strokes of one possessed with the deftness acquired through long practice.

"You play well," said Nicotin, when the officer returned the instrument to him. "You are a better player than I. I've never had a teacher."

"What makes them call you Nicotin?" the officer asked with a good natured smile.

"I got that name when I joined this company, sir," Nicotin answered. "I brought my fiddle along from the detention camp where we were first sent by the draft board. The very first night when I played on it somebody referred to me as Nicotin, just because I am pretty well-tanned, I guess."

"You've been playing for the men a good deal since we have been in France, haven't you?" the officer asked.

"I find it a good way to pass the time, sir," Nicotin answered, "and then the men too like to pass the time that way."

"What do you usually play?" the officer asked. "If you play by notes, I have sheet music in my bedding roll which you can have if you wish."

"Thank you very much, sir," Nicotin answered. "That will help a lot. I have been playing most of my stuff by memory. Sometime I make up a few pieces myself."

"Well, I am interested to hear that," the lieutenant volunteerd, "as I have studied both composition and harmony."

"Thank you, sir Nicotin answered. "I am developing a theory of my own how to compose music. I've never discussed it with any of the men as most of them, while they love to hear music, don't bother their heads about making it up."

"How long have you been developing this theory of yours?" the lieutenant asked thoughtfully. Then he added—"You ought to be in the regimental band. A man with so much musical talent has no business pushing a bayonet around."

"No, no, sir," Nicotin burst in hurriedly, "that would spoil my whole plan to compose the story of the war in music. I want to be in the front ranks with the rest of the men, and live through the experiences that come to every soldier at the front, only that way, can I hope to achieve my ambition."

"Sit down here and tell me about it," the officer said, motioning Nicotin to a box from which he removed a candle.

"I want to write a composition," Nicotin declared, "of the war which will tell the story of the war in sounds, not in words. I want to compose a melody which every soldier will understand—of long hikes with heavy packs, of the tramp of heavy hobnails on cobbled streets, of the welcome sound of field kitchens as they prepare the grub after a day's march, of the thunder at the front and finally of the screeching shell as a climax."

"That sounds interesting," the officer observed, "but how do you expect to reproduce these sounds properly on paper?"

"I only need a encil for that," Nicotin answered, "It is my theory that composition can be written with pencil only—and a clear mind."

"I believe that all music can be reduced to mathematical equations," Nicotin continued with enthusiasm, "there is a key, I know, that opens the secret of compositions, which I believe I have almost or will soon find."

The officer knitted his brows as he studied over the statement. He remained silent.

"May be I am a crank on this subject," Nicotin continued, "but I have spent much time studying on the matter. Pythagoras was the first man who discovered the mathematical relations of the perfect units, the octaves, fifths and fourths. I believe that harmony is based on mathematical symmetry of sounds. I believe that any tune that is pleasing to the ear, is a combination of sound waves whose lengths are related in mathematical ratio."

"Then your idea is to pick up the wave lengths of sounds you hear and combine them in mathematical ratio and then later transpose these into notes?" the office asked.

"That's it," Nicotin answered brightening up. "You've hit the nail on the head. You've got my theory."

"But," the lieutenant objected, "how can you correctly estimate the wave lengths of the sounds you hear?"

"That's been the problem that has occupied all my thoughts," Nicotin admitted, "and I've fixed up a little instrument for just that."

He reached into his blouse pocket and pulled out a curious object. It appeared to be a minature wireless radiating threads. The lieutnant bent tower, with its antennae and delicate radiating threads. The lieutenant bent forward to examine it.

"This," Nicotin explained, "is made on the principle of a tuning fork. This wire here is tuned to upper A, which as you know is 870 wave lengths. It will vibrate when a sound of approximately that intensity strikes it. This wire above, is tuned to lower A, which is 217½ wave lengths. The more delicate threads around, are all tuned to certain prorated wave lengths.

"When I hear a sound," Nicotin continued, "I watch my instrument. All the threads are numbered and I just dot down the numbers of the threads which vibrate. It only takes a keen eye, and patience. And it sure has developed my hearing."

"I have a pretty good record of the war," Nicotin said, nodding to his notebook, "but I haven't timed a shell yet. I need that record to complete my collection, my date for the composition. The screech of a shell I am to make the climax—the grand crash."

And in Nicotin's eyes there appeared a glint which the lieutenant saw was not caused by the flicker of the candle flame.

For nearly a week the battalion of which battling G company was a part, had lain in the dugouts back of the front, in support. Now there had come reports that the big pushr was due. The news had filtered in, vaguely, mysteriously—some of it traced to motorcycle orderlies—to truck drivers—Y. M. C. A., men and other unreliable sources, yet every one knew, as if by instinct, that something was going to happen soon. The atmosphere was charged with that peculiar quality which is always felt when a great gathering of men takes place, who are about to co-operate on a vast scale.

Not only the men felt it, but also the foe. There across the zig-zagging trenches the grey-clad legions also felt that some thing was brewing. Their winged scouts grew more active and more daring, their gunners hurled over more projectiles, and in the far horizon, sausage ballons sprang up over night like so many mushrooms.

The men in the listening posts at night, on both sides, turned keen ears to the noises of the darkness. Both sides watched for patrols, which they knew would come stealthily across the strip of devastation between them.

Star shells at intervals turned night into day, as brilliant greenish rays shone out of the sky, by the light of which the battle lines underwent close scrutiny.

mental commander to.dggornoetaoin

Battling G company was detailed by the regimental commander to furnish the detail for the patrol that was to make a raid on the hostile territory immediately before the battalion. The patrol was to bring in some prisoners, if possible, and obtain all the information about the movements of the enemy, it could.

To lead a combat patrol into the blackness of that stretch of land swept by the machine guns of both sides, had long been one of the cherished ambitions of the lieutenant. The blood raced through his veins when he learned that that very night he was to lead the patrol, by order of his colonel.

"You can have the pick of the company," the company commander told him, "you will need men with keen eyes and ears."

Through the lieutenant's mind flashed the thought of Nicotin —a ma ntrained to listen to sounds—and would not this be an opportunity for Nicotin to add to his collection of sounds from the motley assortment encountered in the midnight raid?

So when in the darkness later the officer gathered his band about him, it was Nicotin—buck private that he was—whom he kept at his right.

The perilous journey was begun. In the darkness scarcely the next man was visible to his neighbor. Here and there a star was blinking in the sky, while far away to the left, where the battle line wound, could be seen the glare of the star shells, where perhaps other advances or raids were pushed.

At the parapet of the hostile trench the men lay on the ground listening. The silence in their immediate vicinity was almost uncanny.

They crept along for several rods from the other men and laid down on the ground.

"Puff!" came a muffled detonation suddenly in the sky above them and simultaneously a brilliant, green light burst over the scene.

By its light, the officer who with Nicotin lay motionless, could see his detail scattered some distance to the right. Several of his men had been caught in a rising posture by the flood of light. They were now like statues, immovable almost like painted frescoes on a wall. In the green light they looked unreal. The lieutentant wondered if they could be seen. He prayed not.

Then the dreaded rattle of machine guns. The foe had been on the alert and under the artificial light, the secrets of the night had been bared.

The lieutenant closed his eyes. He dared not to look to see where the deadly stream of lead had struck. Louder rattled the machine guns, as the light above failed, and the foe redoubled his vigilance with the triumph of darkness again. An answering roar came from his own line where machine guns also began to whir.

In the darkness the officer and the private hugged closer to the ground, while they heard the singing of the leaden pellets around them.

Then another note became discerninble to the lieutentant above the rattle of the guns—a distant whine. Cold sweat began to break out on the lieutenant's forehead. The man beside him put his hand on his arm and pressed it. There was a lot of comfort for both in just that physical touch.

The warning of the projectile rising to a shrill pitch, howling like the demons of the darkness unleashed somewhere, ended with a flash of light, a terrific concussion a thousand fold more terrific than the thunderbolt of a storm on a sultry summer night, and revealed for an instant the two men to each other. The following darkness again, and clods of earth were showered on the two men, while the smell of high explosives filled their nostrils. A new crater appeared within thirty feet of them. And, as if in respect for the master thunderer, the lesser din of the machine guns began to abate.

By the flash of the last shell, which seemed to the officer to be much nearer, he caught a glimpse of the distorted features of Nicotin, who laying flat on the ground, was looking straight ahead, in his hands the little instrument which he had shown the lieutenant in the cave, and beside him the open notebook.

The shells commenced to come over in rhythmic salvos. Now five or six seemed to explode at once, then only one or two, to be again followed by a cluster of five or six. The foe's gunners were methodical.

Then came a shell, the screech of which warned the lieutenant that perhaps his last moment had come. He dug his cheek deeper into the ground, in desperation, as in a helpless frenzy he heard the exultant whine of the onrushing missle. The shell landed with a heavy thud within several feet of the lieutenant and did not explode.

"Let's move," the officer whispered hoarsely, as he began to feel with his hand for Nicotin. He knew that another shell would soon be speeding the path of the last one. His searching hand however did not find Nicotin.

Already he heard the first whine of the next shell, when a star shell above again lit up the scene.

"I'll get it now, lieutenant," he heard Nicotin say, and twisting his head slightly, the lieutenant saw his companion near the half-buried dud, the instrument before his eyes, and writing numbers in the notebook by the glare of the star shell, and under the inspiration of the screech of the coming shell.

"Get back!" the officer hissed—then as the star shell burned out, he heard the man's answer through the darkness, the voice mingled with the rapidly rising screech of the shell.

"I'll get it, lieutenant!"

And scarcely were the words said, than a terrific upheaval took place beside the lieutenant. It seemed that the world had come to an end. The officer with his senses dulled by a paralyzing detonation, felt himself flung sideways, as if by invisible hands, and then merciful blackness entered his consciousness.

Another star shell was lighting the field when the lieutenant opened his eyes. The shells had ceased their flight and it was quiet.

The lieutenant twisted his eyes to the right. In the distance he saw grotesque, quiet figures lying—his men. He wondered if a spark of life yet beat in those forms.

Then very carefully he moved his head to look ahead of him, where he had last seen Nicotin.

Nicotin still lay there—now face up, arms outstretched. One of the arms, appearing bluish under the dazzling light, reached toward the lieutenant, and clutched in the fingers was the opened notebook.

Almost mechanically the lieutenant took it from the unresisting fingers, and looked on the page where Nicotin had begun to enter to the key number of his climax—the grand crash!

CHADRON NORMAL

The girls' athletic association entertained the Chadron and Wayne football teams, Friday night, at a very attractive banquet. The banquet room was beautifully decorated in the school colors. At each end of the long table were cardinal and white goal standards. The menu cards of booklet form were in the shape of a football. The menu, in grid terms, consisted of the kickoff (cocktail), the scrimmage (meat course), signals (salad course), a touchdown (desert, and the sideliner (coffee). Following the dinner all of the hostesses entered the banquet room and Vida McMillan, their president, asked for a few words from President Elliott, Coach West, Rickenbaugh of Wayne, Captain McKelvey, and Captain-elect Smith. A short program was given by the members. This was one of the most enjoyable banquets of the year and nothing but praise has been spoken of the G. A. A.'s by both Wayne and Chadron players.

About forty-two members of the Kiawanis club attended the banquet given them, Tuesday night, by the Normal in the banquet room of the gymnasium, where they enjoyed a four course dinner prepared and served by two of the cookery classes under the direction of Miss Delzell.

The freshman class took charge of the Y. W. meeting Thursday, when they gave a very interesting program, each number suggestive of the Thanksgiving season. The members of the class were seated on the platform which was decorated with potted plants and class colors.

The Rural club held a social meeting last Thursday.

MAY ROBSON IN "MOTHER'S MILLIONS."

May Robson, the popular and favorite star, will be at the Orpheum theatre Monday night in her latest and most successful comedy "Mother's Millions" written by Howard McKent Barnes.

The play is a new theme for Miss Robson and shows her wonderful versatility in emotional as well as comedy lines.

The part of "Harriet Breen" is a type which is not common to everyone but in the financial world—there are women who have proven themselves to be far shrewder and competent than a great many men.

"Harriet Breen" is misjudged in many ways; she has made a life study of the ways of men who are money-mad and stoop to any depth to further their own motive and in dealing with these men she uses all the strategy she can command to defeat them at their own game and succeeds.

Even men who realize her cleverness and have suffered at her hands in financial dealings, have to admire her.

To the outside world she is just a business woman whose every thought is on her "millions' and it takes nearly three acts of "Mother's Millions" to show that everything she does, has kindness and goodness—love and sympathy for its nucleus and she proves to all that behind every cloud there is a ray of golden sunlight.

Augustus Pitou, Inc., have always furnished Miss Robson with an exceptionally good cast and production and this season both cast and production are superior to any they have ever sent out.

THE ORPHEUM.

Harry Watson, Jr., the grotesque comedian who comes to the Orpheum theatre this week with a company of five artists, will appear in two skits which have created veritable epidemics of laughter in the big cities of the east where he has become so identified with them that he now fears he will spend the rest of his life endeavoring to satisfy the insistent vaudeville patrons who demand his return time after time in these screamingly funny skits.

In one, Mr. Watson, appears in the character of "Young Battling Kid Dugan,' and he has played the role so often that he is now as accustomed to being addressed by that title as by his own name. The catch line of the act as "Tell 'em what I did to Philadelphia Jack O'Brien." So popular has it become in the east that it is now a classic along with the slang phrases of the day and never fails to create a tumult of laughter whenever Mr. Watson starts to deliver the line in the act.

Dugan is an ambitious young pugilist who is about tot be introduced to the audience by the familiar ringside announcer. Dugan's one claim to fame is a meeting with Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, and he continually interrupts the announcer with his beseeching cry of "Tell 'em what I did to Philadelphia Jack O'Brien," and his deliver of this line and the pantomine with which he accompanies it is one of the most delicious bit of burlesque on the stage today.

This is followed by a burlesque of Dugan in a boxing bout which has never failed to convulse every audience.

Before this takes place Watson presents a satire on the telephone service of today and the discomfiture he undergoes in the booth, the annoyances to which he is subjected at the hand of the telephone girls. The agonies he endures throughout the exasperations of the delays and impertinences he encounters form a scene which makes an irrestible appeal to those of the audience who have had similar trials and tribulations—and who has not?

There is another battle with a husky deck hand when Rawlinson overtakes the fleeing craft. Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—Can you tell me where to send sketches written for motion pictures to have them run a chance for acceptance? Does every little detail need to be written by the author, or the mere outline presented? I shall appreciate any help you can give THANK YOU.

Your letter was handed me by Minerva.

If you have a good, original, novel and different story, most any of the companies would be glad to accept it, even to Famous Players-Lasky, who have a big staff of their own scenario writers. The story is the thing now in motion pictures, and if you can "turn out" something really good your future is assured. Do not try to re-write somebody else's story. That is not permissable. Comedy dramas, western dramas, emotional stories handled right, and farce—comedies, usually find purchasers.

Stories dealing with business girl romances, sea stories, and stories of unique romances are always in demand. Just at present stories dealing with reincarnation seem to be taking well, and you might try your luck at something like that, or a story dealing with the early years of married life might be made interesting.

It is best to submit your idea first. Just a synopsis of your story is all that is required by a great many of the companies at present. It is much better for them to write the continuity from your synopsis, than to re-hash your scenario, unless you are familiar with the way in which it is gotten up.

The story should be written, preferably typewritten ,on a good quality of paper, about 8½ by 11, or 8½ by 12. Double space it, and bind it at the top. Be sure to write your name and address plainly and if you wish the manuscript returned, enclose sufficient postage for return.

You might try the following companies first: Goldwyn Picture Coporation, Culver City, Cal.; Metro, 1025 Lillian Way, Hollywood, Cal.; Katherine MacDonald Co. Pico and George Sts., Los Angeles, Cal.; Universal Film Co. Universal City, Cal., and Vitagraph Co. East Fifteenth and Locust Ave., New York City.

Dear Movie Editor—I am a girl ten years old and am in the Fifth A. I read your column every Sunday and enjoy it very much. I would now like to ask a few questions of my favorites. Are Theada Bara and Gladys Brockwell coming back to the screen? How old is Baby Marie Osborne, and also Baby Peggy? What is Jackie Coogan's next picture and how old is he?

I saw Richard Barthelmess in "Tol'able David," and would like to know if he is as brave as he was in this show? What is his height and age, also his next picture. When I saw "Sonny" I wondered how they could make one person take the part of two. I hope you will now tell me. Yours Truly, ANNA.

I'm glad to meet you, Miss Ten Year Old. You will see both Theda and Gladys on the screen again. Gladys has a part in "Oliver Twist" the next big Jackie Coogan picture, and Theda is going to make "The Easiest Way" as a Solznick star. It will be some time before her picture will be ready for release, however. Jackie Coogan just celebrated his eighth birthday. He is going to start work on "Circus Days" next. Baby Peggy Montgomery, the Century starlet, is four years old. She is just recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

Marie Osborne is eleven years of age, not much of a baby any more.

Richard Barthelmess seems to be a brave young man in all his pictures, and I am sure he would have to be as brave off screen, as he is on, to have so many admirers. He is five feet seven inches tall, and twenty-seven years old. He will release "Fury" next, with Dorothy Gish as his leading lady.

It is a very ordinary and simple thing, for a star to play a dual role, so far as making the picture is concerned. The cameraman, by the use of mats, blocks off one portion of the film, and photographs the player in the one half or given section of the picture. He then rewinds the film and covers the film just exposed with the mat, so that he can take a picture on the part of the film that had been covered the first time. Of course, it requires careful work on the part of the cameraman.

Dear Movie Editor—I am a reader of your mail, and don't usually have to ask for information, as I find it in your answers to other people's questions. I have been looking for information regarding Charles Ray. What is his age, the color of his hair and eyes, and is he married? I think he is splendid. Please give me his address? I hope we will see him in Lincoln again soon. ALMOST FIFTEEN.

Mr. Ray has brown hair and eyes. He is thirty-one, and married. Address him at Charles Ray Productions, 1425 Fleming St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Movie Editor—I am very interested in your movie page and in movies.

Will you tell me all you can about the following stars: Richard Barthelmess, Pearl White, Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson and Harry Carey?

If you have pictures of any of the named stars will you please send me some. Thanking you very much, I am FRANCES, Humboldt, Neb.

Richard Semler Barthelmess is his whole name. He was born in New York City, twenty-seven years ago, and is a graduate of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. He made his first screen appearance with Nazimova in "War Brides," after which he played with Marguerite Clark in several piutures. He has also appeared opposite Dorothy Gish, in pictures, and now Dorothy is to play opposite him in his next picture, "Fury." He is married to Mary Hay, and has dark hair and eyes.

Pearl White was born in Missouri. She attracted the attention of the proprietor of a traveling show by reciting Hamlet's soliloquy, and he gave her a part of "Little Eva" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." She later played with a circus, and entered her screen career in Wild West pictures because of her ability to ride a horse with great skill. She is an expert in nearly every branch of athletics, and is known as "the serial queen" because of the many serials she has made for Pathe. She left that company for a while to play in Fox pictures, but is now back again making a new serial, "Plunder."

Mary Pickford is so popular and so very well known, that you surely must know everything I could tell you about her, from the fact that she was originally Gladys Smith to the information that she is now Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, and was once married to Owen Moore. She has golden hair, hazel eyes, and is an even five feet tall. Toronto Canada proudly exhibits her birthplace to everyone who is interested and she made her first public appearance there in a stock company, when she was five years old. "Tess of the Storm Country" is her very latest release.

Gloria Swanson used to be a "Bahing Beauty" in Mack Sennett's comedies. She was born in Chicago, in 1893, and made her first screen appearance with the Essanay company, which had its headquarters in that city. Her father was the captain of an army transport vessel, and Gloria travelled with him a great deal when she was young. Miss Swanson is now a star in Paramount pictures, and will be seen in "The Impossible Mrs. Bellow" soon. She is a devotee of out-door sports, and spends much of her spare time riding and swimming.

Harry Carey has been a cowboy, prospector, playwright and actor, since his birth in New York City, forty-two years ago. He starred in "Montana" and "Heart of Alaska," which he wrote himself, on the speaking stage. Later he played in stock, and became a motion picture player through Biograph company. He is six feet tall and weighs 180. He is a great hunter and fisher, and has a big ranch which he takes great pride in overseeing, when he isn't busy at the studio.

Just at present there isn't a single photograph in my files of any of your favorites.

Dear Friend: Hello, to you. I am glad to know you are glad to answer my "lots of questions."

Is Joicey Williams married? What color eyes and hair has she? Tell me a few things of Muriel Brandt, former movie actress worth $50,000, who starved to death.

Do you believe in Fatty's pictures?

Is Sessue Hayakawa, the Japanese star, married? If so, to whom?

How old is Doris Hay?

I have some pictures of Harold Lloyd, but my, can't he change? I'd never recognize him.

Is Zasu Pitts an actresso

When will Nazimova's "Salome" be in Lincoln? Do you like Lady Diana Manners?

Did you know Leatrice Joy's whole name was L. J. Ziedler?

My dear, what do "Follies" girls do? Be so kind as to answer me that and all that I've asked. You are always so kind, anyway.

Was Irene Gresham played by Reginal Denny's wife in "The Leather Pushers?

I saw Larry Semon in "The Sawmill" comedy, but didn't like it so very well. I saw Baby Marie Osborne in "Told at Twilight," and thought it was very nice.

Is Robert Frazer a handsome man, or do you know? I see he is the newest matinee idol.

Is it true that Rodolph was offered $7,000 a week to act in "Ben Hur," and that is the reason he tried to break his contract with Famous Players; I don't blame him when he only gets $1,250 a year. He played with Nazimova for $1,000 a week in "Camille." Those are true statements of what he got. Nazimova got $10,000 weekly in 'Salome."

But, do you, or myself, believe that John Barrymore turned down $40,000 a week in order to remain under the "American banner?"

I will close. As ever I remain yours Constantly, YOUNG BETTY, Pawnee City, Neb.

Neither Joicey nor Muriel impart a single bit of information about themselves to me. Muriel either wasn't very well known as a picture actress, or else she was before my time. If she was worth $50,000, she probably didn't care to work often enough to be very familiar to the picture going public.

I don't konw about Mr. Arbuckle's pictures. I am informed that they are being shown to crowded houses in Denver. I have also heard it prophesied by people who have been to Hollywood, and know the "inside" of the movies, that he will again be known as one of the greatest comedians on the screen.

Tsuru Aoki is Hayakawa's wife. She is very well known on the screen, also.

Doris is in her early twenties.

Harold's spectacles act as a mask to his really good-looking features. He would probably not be so changed if you should see him without them.

Zasu Pitts is an actress, or she wouldn't be on the screen. She is a well-known screen comedienne.

"So'ome" is not released until the first of the year, so it will be some time before it comes to Lincoln. The exact date has not been announced.

"Lady" Diana Manners is very beautiful, and beautiful people on the screen are generally liked, because they are gratifying to the eye, and we don't konw their waults well enough to not like them.

Leatrice Joy Ziedler, also writes her name Mrs. John Gilbert. Yes I knew her full name. She is better known as Joy Ziedler, in New Orleans where she was born, than she is as Leatrice Joy.

"Follies" girls dance, sing and make merry. They wear beautiful clothes, what they wear, and display beautiful "girls" where there are not clothes.

Reginald Donny's wife did not play in "The Leather Pushers." The fact is, he hasn't any.

Robert Frazer is a very handsome man to make a matinee idol.

I don't know whether Rodolph was offered $7,000 a week to play in "Ben Hur" or not, but even though he was, that would not make it right for him to break his contract with Famous Players. His salary check from that company, Famous Players, was by the week, and not by the year. If he had not been satisfied with the figure, he shouldn't have entered into the contract.

The American public has made John Barrymore so he would be doing no more than any loyal American should to turn down an offer form a foreign country, however, it is sad but true that not many of us would be that "true blue." The P. A. no doubt stretched the figure a little, too. They have been known to juggle the figures of the stars' salaries before.

Dear Movie Editor—I am a constant reader of your movie column, I have written to you before, and I am coming to you again to ask some more questions concerning some of the stars. I think Edith Johnson is very beautiful. How old and how tall is she? Are Buck Jones and Hoot Gibson married?

How tall is Olga Petrova? Is she married and to whom?

Please tell me all you know about J. Warren Kerrigan, his height, if married and to whom, and how he became a movie star. How tall are Edith Stayart, Barbara Bedford and Audrey Chapman? Are they married and to whom. This is all the questions for this time. Many thanks. SUNSHINE PEGGY.

Miss Johnson is five feet four inches tall, and twenty-seven years old. Mr. Gibson is married, and Buck Jones was married, once upon a time.

Olga Petrova is five feet five inches tall. She is married to a Dr. Stuart.

J. Warren Kerrigan is six feet and one inch in height, and has black hair and hazel eyes. He was not married the last time he reported, his matrimonial status to me. Mr. Kerrigan is another star who graduated from the stage to the screen.

Barbara Bedford is five feet six inches tall and Audrew Chapman is three inches shorter than Barbara. Edith wasn't measured in time for the last "Blue Book." Barbara is married to Albert Roscoe. The others are not.

'SWIFTY' PROVES SATISFACTORY TO NEW YORK CRITICS

Hale Hamilton and Frances Howard Are Both Given Credit for Good Work.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Retribution is the object of "Swifty," ex-middle weight champ, so his name is nothing if not appropriate when you come right down to it.

Audiences, in our not necessarily humble opinion, will take the count and get up for more at the Playhouse, where William A. Brady is presenting "Swifty," a comedy by John Peter Toohey and Walter C. Percival. A not unusual plot is trained into great shape with a lot of consedvational punches that make "Swifty" a K. O. And now we hope you know what that is.

Hale Hampton has the title role. It's a "haymaker"—don't you just dote on the ring vocabulary? We rather suspect Mr. Hamilton of being something very like a matinee idol. But there, there, we saw the show at night and perhaps we shouldn't jump at conclusions.

It is like this. You see "Swifty," ex-champ, is now a trainer and is hired by young Tom Proctor to make Tom fit to greet Proctor, Senior, when the family cash register returns from Europe with daughter, Miriam. Tom and his sister are driving their rich parent quite, quite mad; the son with beverages and sloth; the daughter with flirtations and an excess of "pep."

Tom, who is a twenty-two carat gilded youth—with a "Lenox phone number met a country girl who couldn't be reached by anything except rural free delivery. He overlooked her suburban origin for a time, and then he consults the time tables.

In the first act Alice arrives in the city to remind Tom that he has "betrayed" her. He is willing to let bygones be bygones, but poor Alice cannot, alas!

Swifty must be the fixer. Now may Heaven and the theatres forgive us! We have never liked fixers, but we find we are going to make a glaring exception of Mr. Hamilton that is, Swifty Morgan. He stands by Tom, who "had been sweethearts with gin so long he must give it another good-by kiss."

He sticks by Tom, who he fears has got in the clutches of a gold-digger or a pearl diver or something. But if Alice isn't Swifty's own little sister.

The biter is going to get bitten! The champ is going to do some domestic infighting—isn't that the ring close-up?—around the Proctor "ten rooms and a dozen baths." He will lead in Miriam, who is so susceptible and man-crazy that her father felt sure poor old Europe would find peace now that she'd left. Swifty gets his sister a job as maid.

Then ,when Swifty has made them all think he has overwhelmed Miriam, Tom knows how its feels to have your sister trifled with: There's a satisfactory end—but we stop right here with the story.

And there's a jolly old butler on the premises named Milton, but he isn't blind to the goings-on, you can just bet. And they are worth keeping an eye on, especially the dance Miriam saw in Paris—that she shouldn't have seen.

Hale Hamilton makes Swifty one of those champs that women always want to challenge. And he handles the melodramatic aspects of his role without getting blood-and--hundery But then, a champ doesn't need to howl. You always know that he's got ether in his good right hand.

Frances Howard is an adorable representative of the younger generation, and Grace Goodall, in the role of a modern mother, shows how you can u'-vamp the flappers, if you put your mind on it—and your eyes. William Holden is a nice, gruff old father and we like Robert Ayrton, as Milton, and Humphrey Bogart, as Tom, the traveling Lothario.

"PENROD."

Freckles Barry—Bernice Rodom.
Marjorie Daw—Clare Horton.
Claire McDowell—Gordon Griffith.
Wheeler Drydon—George Drumgold
Johnny Harron—Billy Bennet.
Frederick Morrison—May Baxter.
Mayme Kelso—Eugenie Besserer.
Baby Peggy Montgomery—Florence Morrison.

Was there ever a boy in the world like Penrod, the famous Booth Trakington character, so dear to the hearts of every American boy and girl? Never, say the public, and there never will be again, according to the opinion of several.

This particular concerning Penrod has to do with his being the "orfullest boy" in town. Penrod and his scrubby looking canine are always a sure sign of trouble, the villagers think, and Penrod's reputation has won for him a host of friends among the children, and as many enemies among the grownups.

With the help of his ever ready lieutenant, Sam Williams, Penrod forms what is known as the American Boy's Protective association. This order is to protect the independence of boyhood, repeal the curfew law and insist upon equality of ages.

At the very start, Penrod breaks up an ameteur theatrical show staged by the socially prominent, Mrs. Laura Rewbush, called "The Children's Pageant of the Table Round." Penrod's costume consists of part of his father's cast off red flannel. To hide these, the youngster steals some garments from the janitor, and when these commence to unravel, the director hurriedly calls "curtain," and rushes behind stage to stop that fight that has started.

Penrod is always getting into trouble. His imagination, after seeing a play that tells of the horrors of drink, leads him to start a rumor about a worthy husband that horrifies the town. Immediately afterwards he scandalizes the dancing class by his antics during a cotillion and a bad case of hives.

Shortly after, Penrod makes himself so obnoxious around his sister and her suitor, that the young man gives him two dollars to leave them alone. A trip to the circus follows, and that evening a consultation with the physician, who prescribes castor oil.

But that isn't all, the A. B. P. A. does some very interesting things, and remain unconquered by any other gang in town, thanks to the efforts of Herman and Verman, the two colored boys that Tarkington tells us about.

And then what do you supose happens? Well, you would never think of accusing the A. B. P. A. of it, but it was, really, the cause of it.

"TO HAVE AND TO HOLD."

Captain Ralph Percy—Bert Lytell.
Lord Carnal—Theodore Kosloff.
Jeremy Sparrow—W. J. Ferguson.
King James I—Raymond Hatton.
Patience Worth—Claire Dubrey.
Red Gill—Walter Long.
Lady Jane Carr—Anne Cornwell.
Red Gill—Walter Long.
Patience Worth—Claire Dubrey.
Paradise—Fred Huntley.
Lord Cecil—Arthur Rankin.
Dukeof Buckingham—Lucien Littlefield.

The story of "To Have and To Hold" is an old one but a wonderful one. It has been read by each generation for some time, but this is its first appearance in movies.

The picture opens, showing the court of King James I, a dissolute monarch who flaunts his high ministers, but fawns upon Lord Carnal, a courtier, to whom he denies nothing. The queen, tired of the King, has taken an interest in Lord Cecil, brother of Lady Jocelyn, the king's ward, whom Lord Carnal aspires to marry. The king is about to interfere with the affair between the queen and Lord Cecil, when Carnal tells him not to do it, that he will attend to it in his own way. He fights a duel with Cecil, and the boy falls. The king is delighted, and promises Carnal anything he wants. He asks for the hand of Lady Jocelyn, and the engagement is announced. While the revels are in full sway, Lady Jocelyn runs away.

Patience Worth, Jocelyn's maid is coming to America with a ship load of brides, and Jocelyin finally persuades her to let her come, too. When she reaches America, everything is different than she thought it was, and she is disappointed at the the manner in which the brides are treated by the rough settlers, each whom seeks the prettiest one for his own.

A brutal man sieges her, and as she struggles, she is rescued by Captain Ralph Percy, who is quite the hero in Virginia. Jocelyn and Percy are married. She scorns Percy, but after a few weeks, she begins to fall in love with him.

In England, Lord Carnal is preparing to follow Jocelyn to America. He makes the voyage, arrives in Jamestown, and states his case before the governor, who immediately orders the arrest of the two lovers. He puts Percy in prison, and tells Jocelyn she is to return to England.

The next evening, Carnal gives a riotous party, and this determines Jocelyn to escape. She is discovered, and Carnal discovers her, and he orders her to be taken to his ship. Jeremy Swallow, Percy's servant, learns of this, warns Percy, and by a ruse effects his escape. They go to the boat, and arrived just in time to find Carnal trying to embrace Jocelyn. Percy jumps aboard, tells Jocelyn to get in his boat, and then he fights a duel with Carnal, who is wounded and falls overboard into the boat, too.

In the average story, this would be the end, and the lovers would live happily ever afterward, but this isn't the average story, so a lot of things happen before any one is at all happy.

For instance there is a great deal of trouble with a band of pirates, and finally, an English ship comes along and picks up the four of them. Carnal then denounces Percy as the pirate captain, and he is thrown into prison. Carnal takes Jocelyn back to England, where the king is overjoyed at his triumphant return.

But still this isn't all, the Duke of Buckingham, does not care for the trend of affairs at all, and takes a few things into his own hands. One of them is to allow Percy's escape from prison at the time the wedding of Jocelyn and Carnal is going on.

Screen Siftings

Dorothy Gish will be "among those present" in the supporting cast of "The Bright Shawl," a picturization of Joseph Hergesheimer's story, in which Richard Barthelmess will star. Miss Gish has the part of a Spanish girl in the picture, and is taking a course in Spanish dancing, dressing, gesticulating, etc. in order to play the part "understandingly."

George Walsh, Harrison Ford and Earle Fox have been cast by Hugo Ballin for important male roles in "Vanity Fair" which he is filming with Mabel Ballin in the title role. Eleanor Boardman plays "Amelia."

Vincent Coleman, the popular young leading man of the stage and screen, was married in Chicago recently to Marjorie Grant, a dancer in "The Perfect Fool." Mr. Coleman recently closed his stage engagement opposite Doris Kenyon in "Up The Ladder."

George Hackathorne is playing the role of a hunchback in Universal's "The Merry-Go-Round." Mr. Hackathorne, who played the role of a cripple in "The Village Blacksmith" and "Human Hearts," is a perfectly normal young man, in spite of his excellent portrayal of cripple roles.

George Hackathorne is playing the role of a cripple in the "The Village Blacksmith" and Human Hearts," is a perfectly normal young man, in spite of his excellent portrayal of cripple roles.

Miss Du Pont, who played a leading role in "Foolish Wives" has been added to the cast for "Brass" which Harry Rapf is filming at the Warner Brothers studio. Other members of the cast are Marie Prevost, Monte Blue, Helen Ferguson, Frank Keenan, Irene Rich, Pat O'Malley, Harry Meyers, Margaret Seddon and Edward Jobson.

Sam Woods, Paramount producer, has been looking, and is still looking, for a "flapper" to play the little sister role to Gloria Swanson in his next Paramount production, "Prodigal Daughters" in which Miss Swanson will star. But the flapper seems to have disappeared with the long skirts, and Los Angeles and Hollywood are "flapperless," Mr. Woods has decided.

David Powell is to play the male lead in "The Glimpses of the Moon," the Allan Dwan production in which Bebe Daniels and Nita Naldi have the leading feminine parts. The production will be made at the Paramount Long Island studio.

Lillian Rich, London musical comedy star, will play the leading role opposite Herbert Rawlinson in Universal's production of "One Wonderful Night," by Louis Tracy.

Mary Alden considers the title of her next motion picture a good sign. It is "Disposing of Mother." Miss Alden announced her intention of retiring from "mother roles" some time ago. She is making pictures now under the auspices of the Woman's Home Companion.

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph, has confirmed the rumor that Corinne Griffith's contract with that company has been ended, by mutual agreement. Miss Griffith, and her pet Pom," Billy," are now in California.

Eva Novak is making rapid strides under the Paramount banner. She is to play opposite Jack Holt in "The Tiger's Claw" which has already been started under the direction of Joseph Henabery.

Macey Harlan has been added to the cast of "Bella Donna," Pola Negri's first American made picture. Mr. Harlan played opposite Marjorie Rambeau in "Eyes of Youth," on the stage, and later with Otis Skinner in "Kismet." He also had roles in "The Wanderer" and "The Yellow Ticket."

Jack Mulhall is to be starred in a series of two-reel features, "Tales of the Fish Patrol," from Jack London's stories. Edward Kull is directing.

Erich Von Stroheim, actor, author and director, will hereafter hold the megaphone for Goldwyn. Mr. Von Stroheim will be remembered for his work in "Foolish Wives," "Blind Husbands," "The Devil's Pass Key." He wrote, as well as directed and starred in the first two.

Mae Allison, and her husband, Robert Ellis, are planning a five months' tour of the world. The Orient will be their first stop.

Harry Beaumont, who has been directing Metro productions starring Viola Dana, has been selected to direct "Main Street," for Warner Brothers. Monte Blue is the only one of the cast chosen to date.

MOVIE GOSSIP

Remember Edna Flugrath?

The Flugraths staged a family reunion recently. Sister Edna, who has been living in England for the past ten years, working with her husband-director, Harold Shaw, arrived to visit sisters Viola Dana and Shirley Mason. Edna is the only one of the trio who kept the family name when she went in for a career. Her home-coming was somewhat saddened by the illness of her mother, who recently underwent an operation. However, Mrs. Flugrath is rapidly recovering and all of them, including Papa Flugrath are anticipating a merry time of it during Edna's visit.

Fox Buys "Gentle Julia."

William Fox who several months ago bought "If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson, the novel which sold over a million copies, has again reached into the field of fiction and purchased the boog at the very top of the list of best sellers, "Gentle Julia," by Booth Tarkington.

Tarkington, who wrote "Gentle Julia," is known throughout the world as one of the foremost novelists of the day. He is one of the most consistent American writers. Every book he has completed has been successful, but "Gentle Julia," say the critics, is his best. The story is one of real American people. It deals with a young woman in a fair-sized city who is pursued by numerous swains. Each of these ardently presses his suit and the result is that none wins. The story is told in strictly Tarkington manner anud the characterizations are ideally human. The book will be made into one of the big William Fox productions which have been setting the pace on Broadway this season.

Dorothy Devore, well known to Christie Comedy fans, was recently given three months in which to learn "to ride a race horse and ride it well." It looks as if Dorothy had to learn to know a race horse also for she seems to have picked the wrong beast for her practice. She is puzzled because she can't make any headway on "Pete" even though she is all dressed in silk shirt and colored cap of a regular jockey.

Pete, being a long eared steed, positively refuses to locomote and it looks as if Dorothy would either have to change her mount or never learn to be a regular jockey.

Three Keatons in Pictures.

The "Three Keatons," for years one of the best known vaudeville teams in America, are re-united in Los Angeles, after a separation of five years. And the young man who made it possible for all three to appear together in a motion picture is none other than Eddie Cline, who is directing the frozen-faced one.

It appeared that when "The Three Keatons"—Father Joseph, Mother Myra and Son Buster—broke up their stage company five years ago, due to Buster entering the films, that they had made their final joint appearance before the public.

But in "The Electric House," Keaton's latest film for Associated First National, it was necessary that Buster have a father and mother.

"Why not your parents, just for old times sake?" Director Cline said.

"A corking idea," replied the First National Star.

So in "The Electric House," vaudeville fans, who remember the act, will see Father Joe and Mother Myra playing with their illustrious son.

All the picture fans who are eating "calories" either for the purpose of reducing or gaining weight need not feel pangs of hunger or jealousy when they see some fair screen star propped up against pillows to receive her breakfast in bed.

For the screen star, be it known, is not always hungry when she has to sit down to a screen meal. Perhaps she has a fussy director who likes to take scenes over and over again. Perhaps she has had to eat that same meal three or four times before the filmed result passed muster.

Then, too, most of our prominent and svelte screen stars stick to a rigid diet for beauty and obesity are not congenial companions. Imagine the chagrin of one prominent and beautiful star who was compelled by a most insistent director recently to tackle a meal that would have appeased the appetite of a ravenous boy scout troop.

Hope Hampton was the heroine and in her next picture "The Light In the Dark" she plays the part of a girl making her way alone in New York. In her search for work she becomes ill from undernourishment and the meal which is finally given her by a tenement character consists of a four-pound steak, a platter of potatoes, a dish of peas, a dish of beets, bread, prunes, a Charlotte Russe and two crullers with a pot of coffee large enough for a family.

MINERVA'S MAIL
Take Your Troubles to Minerva

Making the Best of It.

Dear Minerva: I have read the letters in your mail on divorce and I want to give my experience. The story of my life might be called "A Martyr to marriage," or "For Conscience' Sake." What some people bear quietly others give up their marriage vows for.

I married a man after I was past twenty, and thought only of him at the time. We lived in the country until the past six or seven years. We always lived either with or near his people and I was greatly abused by them. They are rough and ready people and I was always refined and quiet in my ways. He always took their part and this made it hard for me to bear. But I stayed with it and lost my weight and health. So at last I demanded that we move and we did. But he left and went back to his people and was gone for a year. I worked in a department store and heard from him only two or three times. He came back as if nothing had happened. And while I never will feel the same toward him I gave him another chance. And still another one for he again went to live with his folks. He spends all kinds of money going to see them and seems to think first and last of them.

That is the strain. I live in furnished rooms as cheap as I can find. But I do the best I can and my character and reputation are spotless and I am trying hard to make a home. I feel as long as I have some blessings that I will not fly up and get a divorce. I am just trying to make the best of it. Am I doing the right thing, or am I being cheated out of the pleasures a good, peaceful woman deserves? I would like to hear what the readers think. I forgot to say I've been married fifteen years. TRIED BUT TRUE.

A Futile Sacrifice.

Dear Minerva: Do you think a married woman should attend public dances without her husband? We have a dear little friend, a young wife that is surely being fed up on wicked ideas from attending public dances with other women. They tell her not to give up her pleasures; if her husband won't attend with her to get someone else. This young wife is young and pretty and she has a splendid husband but he will not attend public dances with her. She goes in spite of his objections and the gossip that follows all women that attend such places is now out about her. It seems so sad to me to see a little home that could be so happy go to smash through such a thing as a dance. Some of the women she goes with have married and divorced two and three times and it is from them she is getting such dangerous advice. I am so worried that the little home will be broken up and the husband I have known since his babyhood will lose his happiness.

My husband is very bitter against such things as public dances and says there is nothing we can do, says if she was the proper kind of woman she would never risk the gossip she knows and has heard about other married women that are around dances without their husbands. He is very sympathetic in saying to let her go. But Minerva do you think if I tell her the way such women are laughed at and gossiped about she will wake up and see what danger she is in? She and her husband had such good times until she began to go to dances. Please help save their happiness if you can by advice.—AUNTY.

A. The futility of sacrificing a husband and home for such hollow and shallow pleasures as gained in a public dance hall!

I hope you will talk to the girl and discover and endeavor to show her the folly of the way she is living. Show her examples of Lincoln homes that have been broken up through such blindness, and the aimless and discontented lives now being led by the ones who erred so lightly. We all know of such cases right here at home. Of the man who loved his home and child dearly, but who thought he loved wine, women and song more. But now that he has lost his home and child, he has tasted the dregs in the cup of frivolty he sought to quaff and goes about with haunted eyes and restless air. And show her the woman who for a while found gayety to be all-absorbing and whose vanity was so flattered by the attentions shown her by men amused at her youth and inexperience that she gave no heed to her husband's warnings. Finally when she awakened to recognize she had lost her husband beyond recall and that the men who had formerly flattered her now shunned her, and that she was a cast-off vainly seeking to again get a hold on life that was honest and real, it was to awaken to years of sorrow and misery.

Open your little friend's eyes to the fleeting qualities of youth, and the grief which youth squandered brings upon middle age and old age. Ask her to regard with open eyes the old-faced, unnaturally bright-eyed women who haunt the dance halls night after night in their quest for excitement. What they might have been and what they are. Show her that it is the weak and foolish who allow themselves to be trapped into the divorce court and lose their big chance for happiness. The wise, clever girl keeps her eyes clearly on the straight road ahead of her, the main chance, and doesn't go off on misleading side roads of folly.

It is really too bad the husband will not dance with her, if she loves it so. You might talk to him too and they might affect a compromise. She to give up public dances and he to dance with her occasionally at the club or subscription dance.

Eliminate Material Things.

Dear Minerva: "Discouraged" would like to know what can be done to encourage interest in church going. I should say, give people what they have a right to expect at church—spiritual food. At a great many of the churches today one can get a fine dinner, a smattering of politics, movie shows, and such things. The managers of the department stores know that they must have what their patrons want and put forth an effort to furnish it, the movie managers also recognize this fact, also the cafe managers. Isn't it about time the churches wake up to the wants and actual needs of the people, and not only recognize it but give it? It would seem, though, from "Discouraged's" report that there will be less hypocrites in the church in future than in former years, for world in general is becomming too wise to be fed up on mere theories without the actual practice. "Make not my Father's house a house of merchandise" Eliminate the material things that can be bought elsewhere with money, and get real genuine Christianity such as our Master gave us by example, as shown in the Bible, and I am sure the churches will be full and overflowing. "Rended unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."—JOSEPHINE.

Develop Happiness Habit.

Dear Minerva: Troubles, troubles. Don't you sometimes get tired reading about them? I must tell mine to someone. I can't swallow it any more. I don't know where to start so I'll just tell you the part that hurts most.

I'm miserably in love with a young man friend of mine. A man I have known for three or four years. I thought he loved me too, but lately I've begun to wonder if he ever did. He was always so good to me and such a gentleman in every way. One night after we had known each other nearly three years, he tried to kiss me. Something he said made me think he was not doing it because he loved me and I fought him off. He finally stopped and just looked at me awfully hurt and queer but not pouty. Then I felt horrid because I liked him. We went together for quite a while before he tried it again. I couldn't do anything then because I loved him. I didn't even answer him, I was so stupifiedly dumfounded I couldn't believe anyone could care for me like that. (I can remember my mother kissing me goodby once and I don't remember her ever having her arms about me.) I'm an awfully silly girl, am I not, Minerva? You will loathe me even as I do myself.

Lately he hasn't asked me for a date, although he comes to see me. Of course he is saving his money for school just as I am. But he goes to shows and things with his boy friends. He has told me sometimes when he was going and I have seen him there too. I don't want to be with him if he doesn't care to be with me. But I haven't gone with anyone else since I really went with him. I don't enjoy going with others at all.

He is a musician and one night he asked me to come to his church to meet a young lady who played his accompaniment. I did not get to go early enough. They did not stay for church so I missed them. (I went with a girl friend.) When I saw him later he said "You didn't come to hear me play, did you?" And his voice was rather reproachful.

Then I invited him to go with me to meet one of my teachers I used to have at school. She is a lovely woman. She has a wonderful personality and a wonderful talent. Later when we were home again he expressed his enjoyment and I voiced the same thought. Of course I rather expected an invitation to meet the young genius he had dicovered. But none was forthcoming, I suppose they do not want me.

I'm just miserable, Minerva. Perhaps those things don't seem very discouraging to you but they are awful to me. It seems I just work, eat and sleep. And often I can't even sleep.

I've always wanted to go to church, too, and I guess I can never be one among the many who belong there. I am always an extra or an outsider. I have tried so often. Once I wrote to a minister. Almost all of my friends are members of some church or other.

There is such a queer barrier between mother and I. When I do try to kiss her or anything she just laughs and fights me off. She does not do that with my sisters. No man but the one I have written you of has ever kissed me. I have many boy friends but I have always held myself aloof that I might give my lips fresh to the man I know I could love most in the world. One boy I had known quite a few years cried when I would not kiss him good bye this spring when he left for the summer. Then he was killed in an accident late this summer. And he asked his brother to give me one of his rings. They had no living relatives. They were very nice young men, but I did not love him.

I am afraid Minerva I have told my story badly and if you do not care to do not answer it. I would be so happy I could do any thing I believe, if he'd only love me a tiny little bit. I've had such an awfully little bid of loving in my life that a little even, would seem like mountains of love. Maybe though, I just wasn't meant to be loved. If I was, surely my mother would care a little. I wonder sometimes if the flame is worth the candle. Thank you just ever so much, Minerva, I am very grateful.—TWENTY-ONE.

A. You have not told your story badly. You told it very well, and in the telling have clearly shown the cloudy state of morbidness in which your young mind is dwelling. You must come out in the sunlight, my dear. To be loved, which is your laudible ambition, you must first love yourself and life. The girl who keeps her inner house of mind and heart orderly and well-swept, who knows herself to be sweet and who is therefore ready to give of this sweetness to others is the one who is loved.

Develop the habit of happiness. For this is a habit. We can all be supersensitive and morbid and miserable if we so will to be. But we can also be happy if we set our minds to it. Robert Louis Stevenson said "To travel hopefully is a better thing than to arrive." You can train your mind to be joyful even as you can train your body to be supple and lithe. A heavy mind is no more attractive than a heavy body.

The person possessing a winning personality is one who has attained self mastery, who has a sympathetic appreciation of others, a joyful exhuberence in the good things of life, the qualities of friendship, which, as Shakespeare's quality of mercy "blesseth him that gives and him that takes."

If you would have the love of this young man, set out to win the love of all persons with whom you are associated. Do away with the bugaboos of doubt which beset you. The intimacies you crave elude you. You probably present a cold exterior which gives no hint to others of your desire for warm friendships. You need to develop the gift of being personable. When you go into a church with the desire to be one of them, enter the church and Sunday-school work with enthusiasm ad vivacity. Resolve to get next to your co-workers. Take it slowly. Learn the individual interests of each, say to yourself, "I am going to make this person like me," and concentrate on that point. Put vitality and exhuberance into all you do.

Do not fret and pine over one young man. Do not worry lest he does not care for you as you do for him. Concerntrate on making him happy to be with you. When he is not with you, keep your mind up to mark by taking a live and vital interest in other things.

Our lives are as "a tale told," too quickly reaching an end to be wasted in self doubts.

Questions Answered Briefly.

Curly: Jealousy is an affliction amounting sometimes to the seriousness of mania or disease. Of course your husband should trust you. But since he is obsessed with jealousy, can't you be very patient with him and refuse to permit it to annoy you? Take it humorously. It is a wonderful help to make a joke out of a chronic annoyance.

Fond Reader: (1) You could paint a border with enamel. Draw your outline first. (2.) Clean your Japanese matting with a cleansing oil, then the colors will not fade. (3.) The castor oil and bay rum remedy should be very good for your hair. Or apply warm olive oil to the scalp.
